Police Quell Outbreaks At McGill Demonstration

By STAN McDOWELL,
Times Ottawa Bureau

MONTREAL — The march on McGill that was to "bring down the Bastille" sputtered out early today in a spree of window-smashing and trash-basket arson by gangs of roving teenagers.

The leaders of the demonstration, president Raymond Lemieux of the unilingualist Ligue pour l'integration scolaire, and Stanley Gray, suspended McGill university political science lecturer, took refuge behind police lines when violence began briefly to break out of control.

The promised alliance of students and workers never came off.

Both the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Montreal Labor Council gave the march their blessing but no more than a handful of marchers.

MOSTLY JUNIORS

The vast majority of the 6,000 to 8,000 demonstrators came from Quebec's system of junior colleges, many of them bussed in from as far away as the Quebec City area and Hull.

Lemieux, Gray, and other major figures in the demonstration had insisted that if there was violence it would come from the police.

There was violence, but it was not from the police.

The cordon of Montreal city police across McGill University's Roddick Gates at the main Sherbrooke Street entrance — many of them very young and with the eyes of scared boys — stood rock-solid under a barrage of cans, the occasional bottle, burning trash, placards, and broken hockey sticks thrown like spears while Lemieux and Gray sheltered behind them out of their followers' throwing range.

FIERY WEAPON

One demonstrator, easily identified by his crash helmet lettered in white with D. H. Lawrence's favorite four-letter word, set a heavy-handled placard on fire, waited until it was burning well and then threw it from a range of less than three yards at a policeman's face.

A half hour later the same demonstrator screamed "gestapo" and "brutality" when another policeman pushed him lightly on the shoulder and said "please move along."

Reporters covering the march and demonstration were unanimous in finding the police work cool, efficient, and often actually courteous.

A minority of the demonstrators, some of them familiar faces from the St. Jean Baptiste night riots when Prime Minister Trudeau's life was threatened, were clearly working to provoke an angry police charge.

ONE-MAN TARGET

They would pick one man as a target, toss projectiles at his face and firecrackers under his legs, and then send one of their supporters up front to talk to him:

"How much do the English pay you to sell out to them? Stinking sellout. It's nauseating. You're so scared I can smell it from here. Better go change your pants."

When the police finally moved, after close to two hours of this confrontation, they cut across Sherbrooke Street in front of the gates in a tight wedge, moving slowly enough to give demonstratos time to get out of their way, and cutting the crowd in two.

WEDGE ATTACK

From there they drove the demonstrators back in both directions, always moving slowly enough to keep down panic, and splitting the crowds again at intersections to drive parts of it up and down the cross streets.

Some 1,000 demonstrators managed to work their way into

Montreal Man Dies In Fire; Arson Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — One man is dead, four persons are in hospital and an arson investigation is under way following a five-alarm fire that raged through a downtown four-storey apartment block early today.

The man's body was recovered after the blaze was brought under control. His identity was not immediately released.

Fire department authorities said they suspect arson and an investigation was launched immediately.

Among the injured was a man who jumped out of a third-floor window and both of whose legs were broken. He also suffered burns all over his body.

A woman who jumped from a second-floor window suffered back injuries.

STAIRS COLLAPSE

The fire was believed to have started on the ground floor of the 60-unit wood-and-brick building. Flames raced to upper floors, causing stairways to collapse in showers of sparks and flaming timber and hampering rescue operations.

One policeman was overcome by smoke.

The fire occurred about two blocks from the scene of a lengthy demonstration against McGill University by about 6,000 persons demanding it should become a French-language institution.

After the evening demonstration several groups of demonstrators roamed the surrounding area setting fires in trash baskets and setting fire to the placards they had been carrying.

Miss Evett Boyer, building superintendent, said she apparently was the first to notice the blaze and ran through the corridors shouting warnings and pounding on doors.

STAGE COLLAPSES; 11 STUDENTS HURT

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Eleven persons were taken to hospital Friday night after part of a temporary stage collapsed at a school during a choral performance.

Hospital officials said the 11, all believed to be students, were being treated for leg, chest and other injuries. They were members of the 250-strong Fraser Valley Christian Choral League.

A crowd of 600 watched in shock as the centre section of the bleacher-type stage collapsed at New Westminster secondary school.

Ministers Must Quit, Says Tory

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams said Friday that Transport Minister Hellyer and Rural Development Minister Jean Marchand should resign if they leaked information about the new Montreal airport before the decision was announced in the Commons.

Mr. Woolliams said in the Commons that his information was that the two ministers prepared videotape recordings of the airport announcement prior to the time the airport announcement was made in the Commons Thursday.

He spoke of the possibility of land speculation and compared the premature announcement of such an event with a leak of tax measures prior to a budget speech.

In Toronto, the Globe and Mail reported that Mr. Marchand confirmed outside the Commons Friday that he and Mr. Hellyer taped the announcement last weekend, five days before it was announced in the House.

In Hamilton, Mr. Hellyer Friday refused comment on Conservative demands for an inquiry into the matter and said he would have nothing to say until he makes a statement in the Commons.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux held the whole matter in abeyance until he could hear statements by the two ministers.

Insurance Firms' Role Questioned

Russian Moderates In Saddle

By ANATOLE SHUB

MOSCOW (WP) — Moderate forces appeared to be gaining the ascendancy Friday in the broad Kremlin foreign policy reappraisal now believed to be under way.

These were some of the indicators:

- An authoritative editorial occupying half the front page of Pravda, devoted to the subject of communist unity, took a virtually Rumanian approach. There was no condemnation or even mention of China, West Germany, or Israel. The only attack on the United States was a reference to "the continuing armed aggression of the United States in Vietnam."
- Furthermore, Pravda defined as the "highest norms" or relations between communist parties "strict observance of (their) independence, equality and sovereign rights." This, again, is the position taken by the Rumanian, Italian and other European "heretic" parties.

(Pravda did not, however, include the final chord in the Rumanian litany — non-interference in the internal affairs of other parties and countries.)

'SEA OF PEACE'

- Soviet President Nikolai Podgomy in a speech Thursday night in Algiers reported in Friday evening's Izvestia, struck several notably moderate notes. Referring briefly to the presence of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterannean, he drew the conclusion that "the Mediterannean Sea should become a sea of peace and quiet" — a rather different line from those Soviet propagandists who had been angrily justifying the presence of the Russian fleet.
- The Soviet press downgraded the departure Thursday of East German Communist chief Walter Ulbricht. Sovietskaya Rossiya, a newspaper often identified with Soviet party secretary Leonid Brezhnev, gave Ulbricht's departure the identical, brief display as that given the Belgian communist leader M. Driumeau. Ulbricht left here after three days, reportedly in a huff, without having seen Brezhnev, Podgorny or Premier Alexei Kosygin. Senior Soviet party secretary Mikhail Suslov, who likewise avoided Ulbricht after the first day of his visit, pointedly saw the Belgians off.

Who Wrote Bill? Opposition Asks

By JOHN MIKA and JOHN SLINGER

Opposition members Friday night charged the government with using the Legislature's committee on auto insurance as a screen for the "real" committee of insurance industry representatives who helped draft the legislation brought in this week.

In debate on second reading Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) and Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East contended that the insurance companies collect $75,000,000 yearly in prepaid premiums from British Columbia motorists and make major profits from investment of these funds.

Social Credit members rejected opposition calls to "hoist" the amendments to the Motor Vehicles and Insurance Acts until next session to give more time for study of the provisions introducing compulsory limited no-fault insurance and prohibition of lawsuits over $250 for collision repairs.

Before the bills passed in a division of 28 Socreds over 19 NDP and Liberals, Attorney-General Peterson claimed the average car owner should see at least 5 per cent and up to 21 per cent reduction in his current premiums.

MISLEADING

Opposition MLAs, however, claimed this was misleading and more persons would pay higher premiums as well as become involved in the headaches of mounting lawsuits in small debts courts.

Gardom said both the government and the insurance industry had been "less than whole-heartedly frank" in not disclosing to the public the large profits received on investments of pre-payments which really belong to the motorists.

"We say that those insurance companies should be made to pass on some of those investments rewards to the motorists who will be compelled by the law to buy private insurance policies," said Gardom.

"At the very least, they should be required to give every motorist a discount, computed on annual bank interest, on any pre-paid premium."

Macdonald used the point to argue for a government-operated plan.

"You are not putting British Columbia first," he charged the Socreds. "You are putting other countries first because that $75 million is social capital raised from this province and its should be invested back in British Columbia and used for the benefit of our people."

FACE INCREASE

Gardom said car owners face an increase of 18 to 25 per cent in their premium costs because the prohibition on lawsuits over $250 for collision repairs will force all drivers to buy collision policies at greatly increased prices.

He said the compulsory

UNDER $250 INSURANCE PERMITTED

B.C. drivers will be permitted to purchase supplementary insurance to cover less than $250 claims, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced in the legislature Friday.

He said he was not recommending that motorists purchase this additional coverage, but preferred they assumed this dollar risk on their own and took more care with their driving.

NEWS BRIEFS

Slide Tumbles Car

CASTLEGAR (CP)—A mudslide near this Kootenay community Friday night tumbled a car carrying the manager of the British Columbia Chamber of Commerce, his wife and young child 100 feet down an embankment. Reginald Clark of Port Coquitlam suffered back and leg injuries and was released from hospital. His wife, Mary, was in satisfactory condition with cuts and bruises. Their son Kelvin Russell, 3, was unhurt.

Protesters Fight

LONDONDERRY (Reuters)—Fighting broke out at a demonstration by 10,000 civil rights marchers today when a man wearing a crash helmet started waving a British flag. The protesters were seeking more rights for Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority.

Rival Factions Clash In Anguilla Unrest

ANGUILLA — Opposing factions clashed bitterly Friday in Anguilla while waiting at the airport to meet Lord Caradon, Britain's United Nations representative.

British flags were torn, blows exchanged, and a girl had her dress torn off as a small group of demonstrators, singing "Rule Britainnia" and shouting "Lee (British Commissioner Anthony Lee) must stay" were set on by a much larger crowd.

The police eventually separated the two groups and restored some sort of order.

U.S. Begins Last Salute to Ike

WASHINGTON (CP) — The pageantry of state farewell blended with the private goodbye of family and friends today as the United States began a majesic final tribute to Dwight D. Eisenhower.

With military pomp, the body of the soldier and former president was borne to Washington National Cathedral to lie in repose until Sunday.

But before the public tribute, the wife, family and friends of the man called Ike gathered in a cloistered chapel for a brief and private service.

At the outset of a ceremonial journey, which will last for five days to end on the plains of Kansas, Eisenhower's body was carried in a hearse from a private funeral home to the cathedral.

There a U.S. marine band, brass glinting in the springtime sun, played Hail to the Chief, then God of our Fathers, as military pallbearers carried the coffin into the cathedral.

HUNDREDS GATHERED

Several hundred persons gathered at the funeral home and at the cathedral, watching in silence.

The flag draped over the coffin fluttered in the wind as a guard of honor carried it to the chapel, passing beneath an inscription which reads: The Way of Peace.

Mrs. Eisenhower, clinging to the arm of her son, John, followed the coffin down a short flight of steps into Bethlehem Chapel for the private service.

Among the mourners there: Grandson David and Julie Nixon Eisenhower; brothers Milton and Edgar, granddaughter Barbara Anne and her husband.

Master Sgt. John Moaney, long-time valet to Eisenhower, was there. So was Brig.-Gen. Robert Schultz, for years his military aide.

The privacy of that ceremony was a preface to the public corteges and rites, which Eisenhower himself had helped to plan.

Millions at home and abroad mourned the death of the man who led history's mightiest army to victory in Europe and his country through eight years of shaky but unbroken peace.

The 78-year-old soldier-statesman died Friday after a valiant fight against an 11-month siege of repeated heart attacks.

His life began in near-poverty but he became the most beloved American of modern times and a statesman whose stature was equalled only by Sir Winston Churchill and President Charles de Gaulle.

De Gaulle, who served under Eisenhower as leader of the Free French in the Second World War, announced he would attend the services. The French president will head the procession of perhaps 100 foreign leaders expected to pay final respect to Eisenhower at a solemn state funeral Monday.

A man who hated war and politics but excelled in both, Eisenhower died in Walter Reed Army Hospital where he had

. . . INSURANCE FIRMS

package policy proposed by the government should be thrown out "because it won't work and quite frankly it will buy less votes than you have ever bought in your life."

Gardom, a member of the legislative committee on auto insurance, said it met 16 times and heard many witnesses to produce a good report which was "ignored and given lip service by the government.

FACADE CHARGED

"All the while, in the wings, the government had this bill ready and, quite frankly, made the committee a facade . . . and that's a pretty punk way to get people on committees.

"Where was the other, the real committee meeting? Where did this bill come from? Where did the insurance people sit?" he damanded.

Gardom also said the provision authorizing the cabinet to create a government insurance scheme on its own initiative was "another exercise in cabinet power the same as Bill 33 last year (authorizing the cabinet to order pulsory arbtiration of any labor dispute).

"It's like making the cabinet a presidium of the supreme soviet," he said.

"If the Socreds want to nationalize the auto insurance industry let's debate it right here and now. This kind of law-making is for the representatives of all the people, not just cabinet."

He said the public was not ready to abandon the tort (lawsuit) system and would be angered when it felt the impact of the prohibition against collision damage suits over $250.

PANIC PILL

"This is just Dr. Peterson's sugar-coated panic pill and once the icing falls off it's going to be a bitter pill for B.C.'s motorists because it's going to cost them thousands of dollars in higher premiums and also give free rein to industry permissiveness," said Gardom.

The same theme was presented by William Hartley (NDP — Yale-Lillooett) who argued for a government-sponsored insurance.

Hartley attacked the Socreds so vehemently he was warned at one point by Speaker William Murray that he would not be allowed to finish his speech if he continued breaking rules of debate.

"No wonder the insurance industry welcomes this legislation with open arms because it uses the compulsion of the state to force the public into contributing to the income of a section of private industry that has been condemned for price fixing and gouging for years," said Hartley.

"The public should also be aware that in the process of being compelled to contribute to the profits of the insurance industry, they are also being compelled to contribute to the campaign funds of the Social Credit party."

ORDERED TO WITHDRAW

When the speaker ordered him to withdraw, Macdonald protested that all MLAs should be free to argue that amendments to the Insurance Act could produce political campaign funds which would be a factor in the costs of car insurance.

When the speaker rejected Macdonald's arguments on Hartley's rights, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan announced the NDP would "accept the speaker's placing of restrictions on this debate but we feel it (Socred party funds) is part of the total package of insurance costs."

Murray remarked that he was not restricting debate, only applying the rules.

Hartley, resuming his speech, demanded to know how J. E. Burns of Toronto, president of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, accompanied by Gerald Cross, former legislative counsel in the attorney-general's department and now a private lawyer retained by the insurance industry, happened to know the legislation would be introduced last Monday.

(Burns flew here and was present with other industry representatives when Peterson introduced the legislation. But he was missing from the group of industry representatives who were in the galleries Friday when the bills got second reading.)

TIPPED OFF

"This is the bill the industry had been asking for and they were obviously tipped off by someone in the government so they could be on hand ready to say 'God Bless Bennett' and to mislead the public as to the alleged increased benefits and reduced costs," said Hartley.

Hartley said it was "immoral" that the motoring public would be compelled to buy policies which would see 40 cents of the premium dollar going to profits for the 188 private auto insurance companies operating in B.C.

Hartley then recalled that Minister without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi first challenged his right to sit on the insurance committee because he was an insurance agent and, after the speaker affirmed his right to serve on the committee, "he called out every time I've made a speech here: 'Are you still selling insurance?'

"Well an odd coincidence happened the day this bill was tabled in the house.

LOSES CONTRACT

"I received a letter from the insurance company with whom I am licensed, cancelling my contract as of April 1 this year.

"This no doubt will make him (Gaglardi) happy and possibly the insurance industry too but it is not going to stop me from advocating government insurance," said Hartley.

Several MLAs shouted "shame" when he revealed his firing and Strachan accused Gaglardi of being "partly responsible" for Hartley's dismissal.

"I think it is absolutely shocking and disgraceful that he has lost his position and his job solely because he is spokesman for his party in the field of auto insurance," exclaimed Gardom.

"I think the company concerned should be named in the house.

"That's not the type of business we want to have in this province," said Gardom.

(Hartley did not name the company which fired him.)

David Stupich (NDP — Nanaimo) said the government decision to exempt insurance companies from reimbursing hospitals and doctors for fees which could be collected from B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and medicare was not a reduction of costs as claimed by Peterson.

"We're not reducing this cost of the insurance business, we're just shifting it to the taxpayers," he said.

Other Liberal and NDP MLAs attacked the bills and several Socred backbenchers supported it before Attorney-General Peterson wound up the debate with rebuttal.

He slammed Hartley for attacking Cantell as "a dedicated and senior civil service" and demanded apology for accusing him of playing politics.

"I not only repudiate the charge but it reflects more on the individual who made the charge than it does on Mr. Cantell," he said.

Peterson said Gardom's request that the legislation be hoisted to next session is a switch on previous criticisms that the government "pigeonholed the Wootton report and now they are criticizing us for bringing in the bill too quickly."

He accused the "Liberal lawyers" of misleading the house about inconveniences and delays in motorists suing in small debts court for collision repairs without having to hire legal advice.

Peterson said serious delays and high costs exist in the present system which required motorists to go to Supreme Court and hire lawyers.

"You may have been speaking for the legal profession here today but I'm speaking for the people of this province," said Peterson over the protests of opposition MLAs.

LAST POST is sounded for former president Eisenhower at West Point, New York, as flag comes to half staff Friday. (AP Wirephoto)

. . . EISENHOWER

been a patient since May.

President Nixon went into the seclusion of his Camp David, Md., retreat but will return Sunday when the body is borne by horse-drawn caisson through the streets of Washington to lie in state beneath the dome of the U.S. Capitol.

Unknown when the Second World War began, Eisenhower rose to command the mightiest armies ever assembled in battle through the invasion of Europe to his personal acceptance of the German surrender.

Elected president in 1952 and again in 1956—the only Republican in this century to win successive terms—Eisenhower, with his warm smile and simple words, brought reassuring confidence to a country beset with cold war crises and won, as just plain "Ike," a place in the hearts of millions.

Stricken by his first heart attack while still in his first term in 1955, Eisenhower survived that and eventually six more before congestive heart failure eroded his iron strength and he slid gently into death at 12:25 p.m. Friday.

His wife of more than half a century, Mamie Doud Eisenhower, was nearby when death came as were most other members of his family.

Nixon, who rushed to Walter Reed Army Hospital after the announcement, proclaimed a day of mourning Monday and ordered the U.S. flag flown at half staff around the world for 30 days.

WILL PAY TRIBUTE

After lying in state in the cathedral for a day, with the public allowed to pay tribute for eight hours, Eisenhower will pass by the White House for the last time Sunday.

His body will be carried to a horse-drawn caisson near the Ellipse, a spot south of the White House, to begin the solemn and measured procession up Constitution Avenue to the Capitol. The riderless horse with cavalry boots reversed in the stirrups—symbol of fallen military leaders since the days of Genghis Khan — will follow the casket.

It will be near sunset Monday, after the sad pageantry of the state funeral, when the body is borne by train out of aging Union Station near the Capitol to begin the long journey back to the Kansas plains.

Burial will be in the chapel of the Eisenhower Centre in Abilene, Kan., built on what was a cornfield in his childhood, within sight of the home he knew long ago.

Accompanying the coffin on the 1,000-mile ride to Kansas will be the general's widow, other members of the family, and a number of government officials.

The family decided no reporters would be allowed to accompany them and the train would not make any scheduled stops.

HATED WAR, POLITICS

Eisenhower reached his greatness in a career in two professions he openly disliked—war and politics.

His mother belonged to a pacifist religious sect and wept when he received his appointment to the U.S. military Academy.

He said once while in the army that he wanted only to see "people in my profession permanently out of a job."

"This damnable thing of war," Eisenhower once called it. And, even in the White House, he admitted he didn't like politics or politicians.

Eisenhower had served as a career army officer for more than a quarter of a century without spectacular success when the Second World War erupted. He led the troops that chased the Germans out of North Africa, then swept into Italy. By late 1943, he had become supreme commander of the Allied forces in Europe.

On an overcast day in June, 1944, his soldiers stormed the shores of France and knifed through Normandy in the D-Day invasion that signalled the end of the war in Europe less than a year later.

Eisenhower was there in the red schoolhouse at Rheims to accept Germany's surrender.

CALLED IKE BACK

Truman made him the army's chief of staff from 1945 to 1948 when he retired and became president of Columbia University. But Truman called him back later as commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

In 1952, wresting the Republican nomination from Robert Taft, Eisenhower swept to victory in the presidential election by 6,600,000 votes over Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic candidate.

He won over Stevenson again in 1956 by 9,500,000 votes—a record landslide until Johnson's victory four years ago over Barry Goldwater.

Eisenhower's era as president was pocked with crises, but the U.S. public never lost its confidence in the grandfatherly golfer and leader it loved.

Eisenhower brought an end to the Korean War after pledging in the 1952 election campaign: "I will go to Korea."

He saw the U.S. grow from 48 to 50 states. The man he named as chief justice—Earl Warren—guided the Supreme Court to its historic decision on school desegregation. And Eisenhower sent troops into Little Rock, Ark., to back it up.

CAUGHT IN LIE

But at the same time the Soviet Union crushed a revolt in Hungary. Cuba came under leadership of Fidel Castro. Russia won the race to reach space with Sputnik I. Eisenhower was caught in an embarrassing lie after the U-2 spy plane was downed in Russia, exploding plans for a summit meeting in his last months in office.

Quake Seeress Dies

SPOKANE (AP) — Mrs. Elizabeth Steen, 29-year-old Spokane seeress who had predicted an earthquake for California next month, died Friday.

Doctors said cause of death was a heart attack but that Mrs. Steen had been ill for some time with Collogan's disease. The ailment involves deterioration of the body's connective tissue.

She came to Spokane last November from the San Francisco area. The move here with her husband and children was based on her forecast of an earthquake for the Pacific coast sometime in April.

Mrs. Steen had been the subject of articles in national magazines after predicting Martin Luther King would be shot to death April 6, 1968. He was killed in Memphis, Tenn., last April 4.

Guerrillas Killed

LUANDA, Angola (AFP) — Portuguese forces in Angola killed 15 guerrillas and wounded six others in a series of clashes in the Portuguese West African territory between March 16 and 22, a military communique said here Friday. The government suffered only 11 men wounded, it said, but four civilians were reported killed and one wounded.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The Irish are a happy race. Perhaps one reason is that the weather doesn't bother an Irishman very much. He enjoys it, whatever it brings.

Once, on a spring Sunday, I was driven around Phoenix Park in Dublin as a drizzling rain soaked the greenery and washed the faces of the old Georgian houses. It was not a day for walking unless you were an Irishman. At a crosswalk we stopped for a bunch of 20 or 25 teen-age boys who were hiking with a priest. They were boys from an orphanage. Just about every one of those lads had a pleasant grin on his shining wet face as he sang out to us: "Grand day!"

Later, we drove to the place where the Irish kings are buried in County Wicklow. The rain still drizzled down, so we sat in the car and looked at the hundreds of Irishmen who were sightseeing in the ruins, either unaware of the dampness or not at all discomfited by it.

Growing Menace Of Parked Cars

By JIM HUME

Hume

Ald. Percy Frampton made a valiant bid to halt the "no parking" sign stride on Hillside Avenue last Thursday. In so doing he revealed, without actually saying so, that he travels that road rarely during rush hours.

With 14,000 cars a day trekking between Douglas and Shelbourne on the Hillside route and more to come since the Simpsons-Sears shopping centre opened — it has long been obvious that curbside cars, parked for hours at a time, were a growing menace.

The record of 31 accidents in 21 months is proof enough that the Victoria traffic department had to make a drastic move. It did on Thursday.

No Parking Areas

Parking is now banned on Hillside between Blackwood and Higgins; on the north side between Doncaster and Shakespeare; on the south side between the same two streets; on the south side between Scott and Shelbourne and west of Scott; on the north side west of Shelbourne and on the north side east of Shelbourne.

And so be it, Ald. Frampton's objections duly recorded, the move was long overdue.

The new restrictions will hurt the three-car owners who can't find enough room to park in their drive-ways. But somehow it's difficult to make that an issue.

A couple of weeks ago one of Vancouver's two daily newspapers picked up an exclusive on the people who might run on the Liberal ticket in the Greater Victoria area in the next provincial election.

At the risk of sounding smug, the Vancouver bombshell stating that Mayors Hugh Curtis, Hugh Stephen, and Ray Bryant and Ald. Ian Stewart, of Victoria were front runners was published in the Times about a year ago.

Up-Dating Picture

Just to up-date our mainland buddies in the writing game (and maybe give them another exclusive a few months from now) Stephen has fallen from favor as a strong politician; Curtis is the up-coming president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, is tired of people forecasting his future, and is young enough to have lots of time to wait; Bryant and Stewart are still interested.

And as a bonus, because we know they try hard, look for Speaker William Murray to pop up as a surprise Social Credit candidate for the Victoria seat to be vacated by Public Works Minister W. N. Chant.

With all the forecasts saying Vancouver Island is going to drop into the sea April 4, along with most of the North American Pacific Coast, we may miss the louder explosion due April 10 at Oak Bay High School.

Just in case you haven't noticed April 10 is the date Oak Bay council has set for a public hearing on highrise apartments on the Victoria Riding Club site and a new shopping centre on Foul Bay Road.

Anticipates Event

Of even keener interest to the parties thinking of attending that meeting is the fact that 1925 Foul Bay Road, right on the shopping centre site, is already falling to the wreckers hammer.

Now, now, Mayor Fred Hawes, wouldn't it have been nicer to wait until after the public hearing and the formal, final council decision, before site clearing started?

Or is it regarded as normal to clear a proposed building site prior to both public hearing and the final council motion to rezone property?

Oak Bay isn't alone in putting the cart before the horse.

Victoria holds its preliminary zoning bylaw readings, then calls a public hearing, and then, on the same day, moves final passage of the bylaw.

That's what happened last Thursday when four zoning bylaws were up for final reading. Fortunately, good sense prevailed and two of the four were tabled for further study and decision.

But it doesn't change the rather shaky system which permits people to protest about an hour before a decision is due.

In Saanich they do it the other, and better way. They hold their public hearing, let members of council consider the gripes, and then start the bylaw procedure moving.

Generally speaking Saanich learns from the city. In this case the city can pick up a point or two.

Now that squealing tire drivers can lose five demerit points after conviction maybe the Motor Vehicles Branch will tell us how many points former Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi lost on his last speeding conviction.

Or didn't you hear that Flying Phil did it again in a couple or so weeks ago in Victoria?

Nothing serious, just a mite fast.

Eisenhower in Peace and War Extolled by Friends, Foes

WASHINGTON (CP) — Wartime Allies and enemies, political friends and foes sent tributes from around the world to former president Dwight D. Eisenhower who died Friday.

Eisenhower once said he wanted to be remembered for his contributions to world peace and not for his command of the Allies armies that liberated Europe in the Second World War.

He was.

Said UN Secretary-General U Thant:

"He was a strong and practical supporter of the United Nations, where he is remembered especially for his initiative in promoting international co-operation in the peaceful uses of atomic energy."

The Queen said Eisenhower's death would be as keenly felt throughout the Commonwealth as in the United States.

She said he would be remembered as a "leader of the Allied forces and later . . . for his statemanship which did much to further the cause of understanding between our two countries."

SERVED UNDER IKE

President Charles de Gaulle, who served under Eisenhower as leader of the Free French during the war years, extolled the former president's military leadership.

"The name of Gen. Eisenhower remains gloriously tied to the victory of 1945, to which he contributed in a striking manner. For me, I see disappear with such sadness a dear companion in arms and a friend."

Prime Minister Trudeau sent a message to Mrs. Eisenhower saying all Canadians, "and especially his wartime comrades and his many friends in our country, have learned of his death with sorrow."

Trudeau also sent a message to President Nixon saying that Canadians "will long remember him with respect and affection for the high and invaluable service he rendered as supreme Allied commander in Europe . . . when Canadian forces fought under his command from the beaches of Normandy until the liberation of Europe was achieved."

Senator Paul Martin, government leader in the Senate, also paid tribute to Eisenhower's "fine qualities of humanity and manhood."

MARTIN PAYS TRIBUTE

"Canadians served under him," Martin said. "Canadians now respect his memory."

Of the millions mourning the death, none was more deeply grieved than his old comrade in arms, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery. He said he could not bear to attend the funeral for fear of breaking down.

"Ike was a very great human being, utterly sincere and incapable of anything mean or underhand," said the 81-year-old British war hero. "He had only to smile at you and there was nothing you would not do for him."

Monty, as Eisenhower knew him, often differed with his wartime boss but they were close to the end.

"I am very, very upset," Montgomery said. "Ike was a great friend. He has now left me. Churchill has left me. All my friends are dying off. It is very sad."

At home, warm words came both from political allies and opponents.

Said Nixon:

"As long as men cherish their freedom, Dwight Eisenhower will stand with them, as he stood during war and peace: strong, confident and courageous.

"America will be a lonely land without him," said former president Lyndon B. Johnson, calling Eisenhower a "crusader for peace."

Former president Harry S. Truman counted among Eisenhower's greatest achievements his role in helping strengthen post-war Europe.

"Gen. Eisenhower and I became political opponents," Truman said in a statement, "but before that we were comrades in arms, and I cannot forget his services to his country and to Western civilization."

Pope Paul, in a message to Nixon, said he learned of the general's death with "deep sorrow," and added: "We offer our heartfelt condolences on the loss of this, your dear friend and mentor, and our sympathy to the nation. . . ."

RUSSIA HAD RESPECT

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob Malik said Russia had "great respect" for Eisenhower, and described him as a "great soldier and statesman" who made "a great contribution to defeating Nazi Germany."

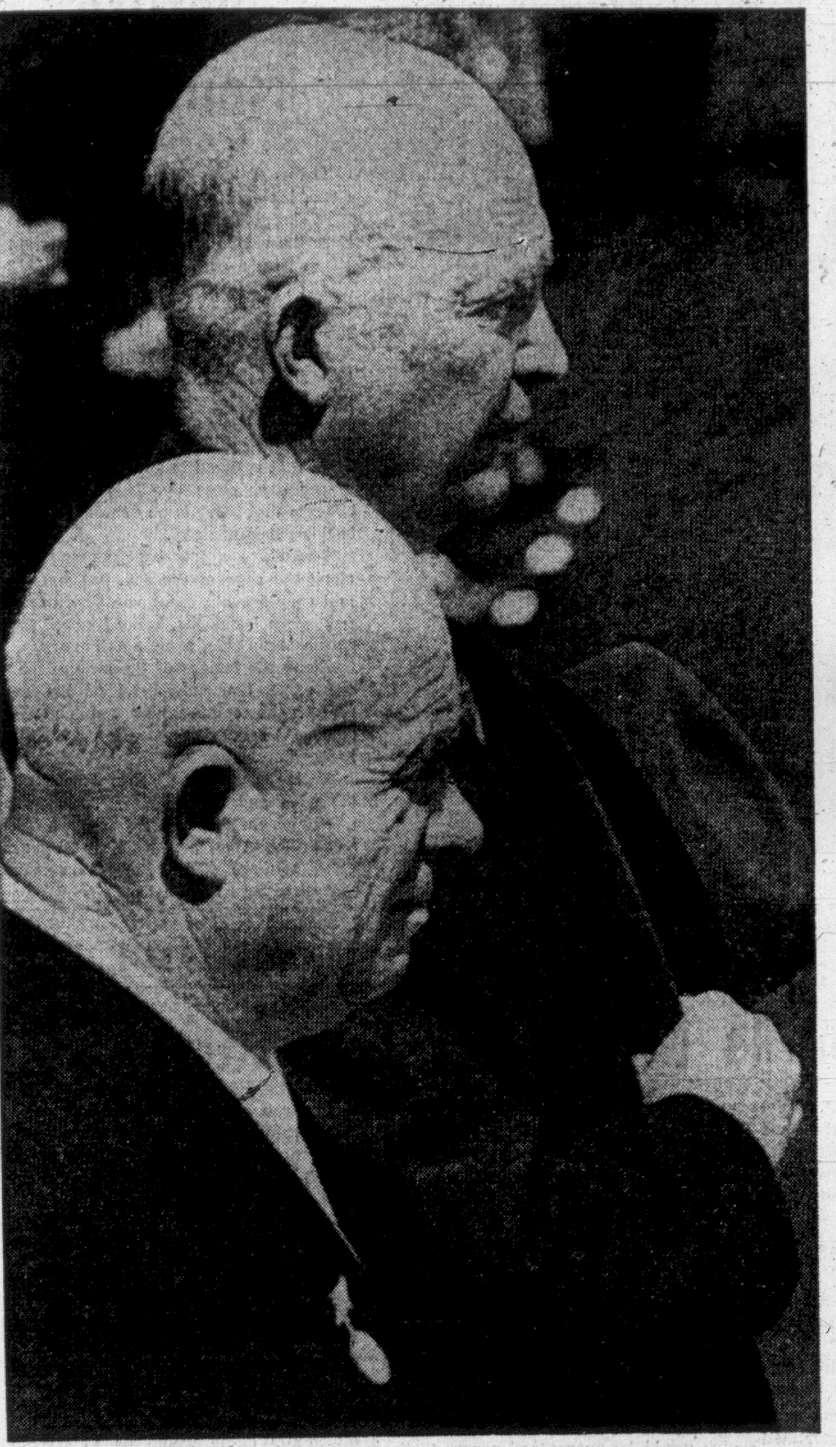
From Belgrade, President Tito of Yugoslavia sent cables of condolences to President Nixon and to Mrs. Eisenhower.

"We recall his personal contribution in promoting relations between our two countries," he said.

There were harsh words, however, from two Communist countries.

East Germany accused Eisenhower of being a stubborn defender of cold war politics.

In Havana, Cuban radio broadcasts noted that during the Eisenhower administration the Cuban sugar quota was ended, diplomatic relations with the United States were severed and the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion was conceived.



SUMMIT MEETING of former Soviet premier Nikita Khrushchev and the late president Eisenhower began on Sept. 15, 1959, as the two stand at attention for playing of national anthems as Khrushchev arrives at Washington airport. (AP Wirephoto)

Ike for President And Truman, Too

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a talk with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at Gettysburg a year and eight months after he left the White House, he told me that President Harry S. Truman had talked to him and proposed an Eisenhower-Truman ticket for the 1948 election.

●

"Truman said that he would back me for president and that if I wanted him, he would run with me for vice president," Gen. Eisenhower recalled.

The old solider told me the story in his office on the Gettysburg college campus late in September of 1962. I had gone up there to interview him in connection with his 72nd birthday anniversary on Oct. 14 of that year.

"Of course," he told me, "you can't mention this until one or the other of us is dead."

I talked to Gen. Eisenhower about the matter a second time on Aug. 26, 1965, when he was approaching his 75th birthday anniversary. My assignment was to interview him and do a story on his late-in-life career as a writer.

●

"Where were you when President Truman made this offer to you?" I asked him, going back to our 1962 conversation.

"In his office at the White House," he said.

"I'll tell you why Truman made the offer," Gen. Eisenhower went on to say. "He was afraid of Gen. MacArthur — afraid that MacArthur would come back from Japan as a shining knight and run for the presidency."

●

Gen. McArthur, then Far East commander and doing an admirable job in conquered Japan, was an avowed Republican, and the Gallup poll showed that his stock was rising among Republicans who wanted to see him in the White House.

Gen. Eisenhower, who was soon to retire as chief of staff of the army, had never disclosed publicly what he was, a Republican or Democrat. But the gallup poll made clear in 1948 that "I Like Ike" sentiment was already powerful and widespread in the land.

Behind-Scenes Deadlock Delays Security Debate on Middle East

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A behind-the-scenes deadlock delayed the Security Council today as it sought to finish debate on an Israeli air raid into Jordan before Big Four talks on the Middle East open next week.

Council delegates said the African and Asian members had proposed that the council condemn Israel for the raid. The United States had counter-proposed that it also condemn "other acts of violence" and the resulting standoff was likely to extend the debate until Tuesday.

Neither side had yet submitted a formal resolution, and consultations on the form it should take held up the resumption of the debate in its third day.

The council had been called into session urgently on Thursday.

A draft resolution—drawn up by Pakistan, Algeria and Senegal at the request of Jordan—condemns Israel for an air attack against Jordan Wednesday during which 18 civilians were reported killed.

The draft form also warns Israel that any new attacks against Jordan would bring immediate punitive action by the UN.

In an effort to broaden the Afro-Asian draft, U.S. Ambassador Charles Yost said the council should condemn the Israeli attack on Es Salt "and all other acts of violence which continue so frequently and so recklessly to violate the ceasefire."

Jordan saw this as a clear but indirect reference to the activities of Arab guerrilla groups, which Israel claimed it was striking against Wednesday.

ATTACH A CONDITION

Diplomatic sources said the Afro-Asians were prepared to negotiate toward a unanimous resolution, but would in no circumstances accept any reference to the guerrilla movements.

Diplomatic sources said Soviet, U.S., British and French UN ambassadors would meet in New York Thursday to start talks on how to settle the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

But in Cairo, the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram says Egypt has already rejected a U.S. proposal for peace submitted to the other three powers in preparation for the meeting.

The newspaper says Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad told UN peace envoy Gunnar V. Jarring the U.S. proposal did not conform with a Security Council resolution on peace passed in 1967. Al Ahram did not elaborate.

The U.S. plan is understood to have called for the Arabs and Israel to reach a voluntary contractual peace agreement.

The Big Four meetings are expected to continue for several months at the countries' missions in New York. Preliminary bilateral talks started Feb. 11.

Stable Wins Airline Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judgment for $35,000 was awarded in British Columbia Supreme Court Friday to the owners of a harness racing horse killed aboard an aircraft when it broke from its stall and endangered the plane and crew.

Mr. Justice Peter Seaton gave judgment in favor of United International Stables Ltd., against Pacific Western Airlines Ltd., for the loss of the stallion Venderford in May, 1965.

General Ike Eisenhower

IT WAS SIGNIFICANT THAT the man who in wartime led the greatest armed force in history and in peacetime achieved the leadership of the world's most powerful nation should have been known to millions of his countrymen, and millions abroad as well, by a nickname. Ike Eisenhower wore his honors and his awesome responsibilities with the humility of a simple man, with the forthrightness of an honest man, with the confidence of a man of good will. He trusted people and they returned that trust, he eschewed hypocrisy and thereby won respect, he was warm with humanity and good humor, and thereby became a president who was loved.

Dwight Eisenhower's military genius lay primarily in his ability to secure the co-operation of the many diverse elements in his vast command. That co-operation, both domestic and international, was essential to the success of the Allied cause. As few military men of his eminence could have done, General Eisenhower made palatable with human understanding and a folksy sincerity the immense personal power which he wielded with such success. When it was needed he had iron backed by a quick temper, but his real strength lay in a talent for winning agreement.

As President of the United States he was criticized for his lack of personal impact on events, for his lack of expert understanding of the intricacies of economics, finance and foreign policy with which he was surrounded. But he presided in an era when his country turned from wars and sudden changes, when it sought stability and an opportunity to find itself in its new role as leader of the free world. What he had to give to his office embraced much of what was needed.

Because of his basic nature, perhaps the most appropriate tribute to Ike Eisenhower may be found by turning aside from all the sculptured phrases that go with high position and world acclaim and saying of him what might equally be said of the humblest of privates in his ranks or the least of the citizens he led: He was a good man who gave his best.

Host and Guest

PRIME MINISTER TRUDEAU'S visit to Washington this week may be termed a success. He established cordial relations with our neighbor's new president. He gave notification that Canada would form opinions and set policies of its own which it feels to be in the best interests of our country and of mankind, and that where these decisions and policies were contrary to those of the United States it would be a case of friends differing and not an attempt merely to pluck the eagle's feathers.

He arranged for further talks at the technical level on international wheat prices and Canadian oil exports. He created a good impression — for himself and Canada — on the large and influential Washington press corps. He put Canada-United States relations once more on the level of personal telephone calls between Parliament Hill and the White House.

All this — and perhaps a good deal more which may not be known for some time to come — indicates two days of very respectable diplomatic success. There were not, so far as we know, any important agreements or commitments by either side, and this was hardly to be expected or desired. But Mr. Trudeau made it clear that Canada will be looking at a number of established situations and giving them fresh consideration as to retention or change. Where this affects the United States' interests there may be disagreement or friction. But both Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Nixon confirmed in public that they were prepared to respect differences between "the kind of friends who tell the truth to each other."

All in all, not a bad basis of neighborly relations to have established. It could well serve as a model for many other parts of the world.

They Too Have Rights

PREMIER BENNETT DID WELL to accept advice on a proposed change in the provincial Mental Health Act. The amendment would have allowed authorities to detain mental patients in hospitals indefinitely. No one questioned the intention of the government in seeking the change—to prepare for the introduction of community care facilities for the mentally ill which might involve long-term treatment.

But a number of MLAs, including a government supporter, argued that the amendment constituted a dangerous power over the rights of mental patients. The premier, to his credit, withdrew the legislation after a number of objections were raised, something a government is always reluctant to do.

The concern of the members was well-founded. Mr. Ernie Lecours, the Social Credit member for Richmond, cited a number of instances in which patients have been held in Riverview Mental Hospital longer than he considered justified in their best interests. The feeling was expressed that mental patients do not now have adequate protection and the proposed amendment would make a bad situation worse.

It was also pointed out that mental patients have the same civil and legal rights as anyone else in the community. Mr. Berger, the NDP member for Vancouver-Burrard, said the problem is serious enough to warrant employment of an ombudsman to guard those rights It is a suggestion worth considering.

A Plea That Should Be Heard

THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE government's First Citizens' perpetual fund — the earnings from $25 million pledged to assist Indians — will be determined by the manner in which the money is used, and it may be natural for members of the opposition to look for political motives in its dispensation. At the same time Premier Bennett's plea for acceptance of his sincerity in creating the fund deserves consideration. So do some of the arguments he has advanced.

Mr. Bennett is correct in declaring that what has happened over the past 100 years is water over the dam and not heaven itself can change that. He says he is searching for a new approach that will reestablish confidence between Indians and the white population and he hopes the funds available will make such an approach feasible, with benefit to the Indians.

No rehashing by either side can undo what has been done by previous generations. Whatever skepticism may arise from political experience, the proposal deserves open-minded treatment. The premier has made his plea. For the sake of the Indians it should not fall on deaf ears.

Parksville, B.C. Sea-Horses —Frank Graves

Nature Rambles

By Freeman King

Let us go back to the beach at Taylor Road, Metchosin.

Walk along the shore to the north. Here the waves have made a fine sandy beach with a gentle slope.

Look along the edge of the tide waters. You can find many kinds of seaweeds from the bright greens of the shallow water to the browns of the mid-tide and some that are red from the deep water.

Perhaps because of the tidal currents there is very little of the large "bull kelp" that is found in abundance in some of the bays close by. This would also indicate that there is no "shelf" close by in this particular bay.

There are a few boulders scattered along the edge of the sea, but you will find very few sea creatures. There are a few acorn barnacles, some limpets and, on the ocean side, some small snails.

Along the fringes of the swamp there are some fine specimens of the red alders, the catkins now swollen with pollen till some of them are six to eight inches long.

Notice some grand firs, stunted by the wind and the salt spray. They are misshapened and gnarled, only a few feet in height but perhaps 50 to 60 years old. They are still fighting to survive against adverse conditions.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

Mideast Accommodation Is Maximum Current Hope

THE key to the puzzle on the Middle East lies in an answer to the question: What kind of objective should lie at the other end of the peacemaking tunnel? Should there be a final, conclusive, contractual peace settlement, as Israel insists? Or a new and stabler system of relationships somewhere between war and peace, with Israel's security guaranteed by the big powers and by a UN "presence"?

Frye

It is extraordinary that, nearly two years after the 1967 war, there should still be no agreement even on this basic question. That is, however, the case, and it explains why peacemaking has been so consistently frustrated.

Whether the Big Four can shake this deadlock loose is by no means clear. The United States broke with Israel on whether the Big Four should intervene at all. Washington decided they should. All three of the other big powers—Britain, France and Russia—had long since favored joint action.

Washington conceivably could also break with Israel on the deeper question of the best attainable objective. Again, the three other powers already question Israel's realism.

But it does not necessarily follow that even if all four powers did unite to urge a less-than-total peace settlement, Israel would bow. Jerusalem seems determined not to be swayed. Mrs. Golda Meir, the new Prime Minister, insisted anew this past week on Israel's refusal to be arm-twisted.

Externally Guaranteed

The difference between a total peace and an accommodation could be great or small, depending on the nature of the accommodation. In practice, the key differences would be likely to be these:

1. Peace would include regional trade relations, communications, uninhibited travel, conceivably even a customs union. Accommodation would simply be an absence of active hostilities—policed and externally guaranteed, with greater or lesser effectiveness, in a hostile or at least an aloof atmosphere.

The difference would be between active co-operation and mere coexistence. In either case, the permanence of Israel would be acknowledged and acquiesced in.

2. In conditions of peace, Israel might be prepared for territorial and security dispositions less stringent than the ones she would consider necessary in an accommodation.

The areas primarily affected would be the West Bank of the Jordan and Syria's Golan Heights. Israel has, and short of a final peace, means to retain, a dominating posture in both places.

Paradoxically, Jordan and Syria are unwilling to envisage the kind of definitive peace in which an Israeli withdrawal might be conceivable; and Israel is not willing to negotiate the kind of limited accommodation in which, for a transition period, the Arabs might conceivably acquiesce in less than total withdrawal. In a sense, therefore, each side is pulling against itself.

3. Peace would find the Arab states playing a significant role in supervision of the holy places in Jerusalem—perhaps even having some form of limited, shared sovereignty. In an accommodation, the most Israel would be likely to give would be guaranteed access to the holy places.

No Sign Arabs Agree

A definitive peace might, therefore, theoretically be easier to negotiate, in some ways, than a mere accommodation. But there is not the slightest sign that it is, or even will be, in the foreseeable future, psychologically acceptable to the Arabs.

Given a choice between permanent peace, which they see as humiliation, and continuation of the status quo—which is, in fact, the choice Israel says they have—they would take the status quo, and try to change it by terrorism and other violence.

Thus the accommodation remains the absolute maximum that can realistically be achieved.

In Arab eyes, the concessions which they would have to make to "buy" even this much—willingness to live with Israel, to let her commerce through the Suez Canal, to recognize her boundaries, to compromise on refugees—are gigantic, and nothing more is conceivable.

But Israel says she will absolutely accept nothing less than a final settlement.

Peace Second Stop

The only visible way to square this diplomatic circle would be to start a process, the first step of which would be accommodation and the second, peace.

If peace could be made to seem imminent enough to satisfy Israel and distant enough to assuage the Arabs, it is just possible that a worthwhile first step toward the easing of explosive tensions could be taken.

Things which today seem impossible might then begin to become possible. The peace which the Arabs could not swallow in one gulp, they might nibble and digest in time.

It would require an act of faith by Israel to set out on such a course. She tried it twice before: once in 1949 and again in 1957. Both times she came away disillusioned. She has sworn never to try again.

But if there is any other answer, diplomats have yet to come up with it.

'General Eisenhower Took the Tide at the Flood'

By FRANK MANKIEWICZ and TOM BRADEN
from Washington

TO those of us who fought in Europe, the later political years of Dwight Eisenhower always seemed less important. We supported him, or opposed him, but never with the political fervor owed the lifelong politician. The memory of Ike in North Africa, in Italy, in England on D-Day and in France was too strong. And it is still strong today.

That mission in Europe, many forget who later criticized his politics, was highly political. Not only did he have to contend with the likes of Montgomery and de Gaulle, he had to worry about any number of quarrels and grandstanding among his own generals. But he organized — and held together — the greatest and most successful campaign in military history, and with none of the acrimony and bitterness that characterized our efforts in other theatres.

Douglas MacArthur, for example, was at the very least a "controversial" man, and probably gloried in it. To this day, his name alone is enough to start an argument wherever Pacific Theatre veterans gather. But not Ike. "Others abide our question; thou art free," seems to sum it up.

And when a weary nation turned to him in 1952, he did what people wanted. He ended the Korean war on terms his own party would have called a "sellout," and he correctly interpreted his mandate as one to avoid experiments, rebuild the peacetime economy, change the face of government (but not too much) and stay out of war. He did it all.

But he did it, of course, not so much through policy and action as by what he was. In retrospect, the ugly assault by Sen. Joseph McCarthy on decency and the rules of the game might have torn us asunder with anyone else in the White House. And if his responses were neither swift enough, not deft enough, nor strong enough to please those who perceived the danger, still it can be said that the threat was blunted, and no one doubted where Gen. Eisenhower stood.

It is fashionable now — but not, let it be said, with President Nixon — to say that the Republican Party suffered under Gen. Eisehower's leadership, and that he shunned political activity to the peril of his party. But this is too simple. The country shunned politics, and Ike's election was almost a repudiation of politicians. He understood this, and if he faced Democratic majorities in both houses through most of his terms, it was because the numerical superiority of Democrats had become fixed some time before.

But the nation had confidence in this straightforward man, and he gave it back to the people. Maybe it was a time of inertia, of drift and inaction, but it was also a time when Americans had confidence in themselves and their country, and that is more than can be said of most of the years that would follow.

We could use some of that inaction now, and we could have used it when we first committed American troops to combat in Vietnam. Writing of our landings in Lebanon in 1958, Gen. Eisenhower spoke of his "political" decision, against the "recommendations of some of the military," to occupy only Beirut and its airfield, and not to try to fight the rebels in the rest of the country.

"If the Lebanese army," he wrote, "were unable to subdue the rebels when we had secured their capital and protected their government, I felt, we were backing up a government with so little popular support that we probably should not be there." Those are the words of a man who understood politics very well.

Time and the tides of history raise some men to glory; others they destroy. Gen. Eisenhower took the tide at the flood — one can easily think of other presidents, and presidential candidates, who might have said with Hamlet, "The time is out of joint; O cursed spite, that ever I was born to set it right!"

Britain Favors 'European Grouping' Within NATO

SOME outside observers are surprised to find the British government avidly defending not only NATO but the NATO status quo. This feeling was evident among some members of the Canadian parliamentary committee on external affairs and defence, following the committee's recent meetings here with British ministers and defence experts.

Traynor

Ministerial presentations do not always fully illuminate the rationale upon which the British attitude is based. There are other factors to be taken into consideration besides the calculations of danger outlined in the previous article. In an address to diplomatic correspondents since the committee's departure, Defence Minister Denis Healey touched on most of the relevant points. What Mr. Healey did not mention has been made plain elsewhere.

It is believed that the present NATO military structure is basically adequate as a deterrent, and that any likely departure from the pattern would carry disadvantages outweighing the benefits. Qualitative improvement of capabilities is held up as a substitute for an increase in force levels which would undermine the British policy of cutting defence expenditure and which would likely provoke a corresponding buildup on the part of the Soviet bloc.

Stimulate German Demands

The current Soviet superiority in non-nuclear strength is thought to be offset by NATO's nuclear capability, always provided there is no weakening of links between Western nuclear and non-nuclear forces. It is argued that a marked strengthening of European contibutions would facilitate the withdrawal of American and Canadian forces, thus weakening the credibility of the American nuclear guarantee and possibly stimulating German demands for an independent nuclear deterrent.

It is believed that the status quo need not prejudice evolutionary efforts. In his address to the diplomatic writers, Mr. Healey demurred at the view of top advisors to President Nixon that NATO has no role to play in East-West detente. Arms reductions in Europe were problematical, but negotiations on the limitation of strategic missiles could and should go ahead. He cautiously approved President Nixon's decision on the deployment of anti-ballistic missiles. As for Britain, deployment of ABM defences had been considered and it had been decided that there were very serious arguments against it.

The defence minister expressed concern that fear of a Chinese weapons buildup might inhibit Soviet-American moves toward control of nuclear arms. The present unquestioned supremacy of the two powers would not last more than 10 years. This had to be set against the possibility that the Soviets would become more amenable to a European settlement as the confrontation with China intensified. It would be vital to bring China into arms control negotiations.

Mr. Healey's immediate preoccupation is with the formation of a European grouping within NATO, one function of which would be to represent European interests in missile negotiations. He also looked forward to close European cooperation in weapons production, and noted that if this materialized it would provide a strong incentive for France to rejoin the military side of the alliance. (Highly authoritative sources have also raised the possibility of some form of Canadian association with this group.)

Increased Responsibility

Notwithstanding the British caution about weakening the American nuclear link, Mr. Healey entertained the possibility of an eventual transfer of greater responsibilities to the European grouping.

Mr. Healey stressed that he was speaking of very long-term possibilities, but even at that he went considerably further than ministers have in the past. On the face of it, this makes the government's attitude seem marginally closer to that of Gaullist France. In the aftermath of the recent Anglo-French diplomatic clash it had appeared that there was not the slightest common ground between the two countries on questions of European security.

Trudeau's Attitude 'Changes Remarkably' on ABMs

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Westell

OTTAWA — President Nixon suggested to Prime Minister Trudeau, during their private talks at the White House this week, that the ABM bases he plans to build near the border will never get off the drawing board to pose an actual threat to Canada's sovereignty or security.

He made it clear that he expects to be able to trade off the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system — which he announced two weeks ago — in a deal with the Soviet Union to limit strategic arms.

This assurance explains, in part, the remarkable change in Trudeau's attitude to the ABM issue during his two days in Washington.

When the Commons held an emergency debate on ABMs last week, Trudeau used the language of high drama to say that he was going to Washington to speak to the President about rules for the survival of mankind.

When he returned and reported to the House just seven days later, the subject had become almost abstract and remote: "I do not think the urgency for the government to take a position on it can be stated in terms of days or weeks. . . . The plan as announced by the United States with regard to two sites (near the Canadian border) will only become operational, if it ever does, around 1973. This gives us, as I say, more than a few days or weeks to take our position."

★

In the galleries, observers and diplomats carefully noted Trudeau's casual tone and his use of the phrase "if it ever does" to cast doubt on the whole ABM project.

There was speculation that Nixon must have confirmed to the Prime Minister, in the closest confidence, the current Washington report that he is having an encouraging correspondence on arms control with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

We may never be quite sure in just what terms Nixon gave his assurances to Trudeau as they sat together on the white couch in the President's office. Both men like to operate in a high degree of privacy which excludes, on occasion, even their own aides.

Trudeau is particularly anxious not to leak details of his talks with the President for fear that Nixon, in future, would lack the confidence to talk frankly to him, thus undermining the personal regard and relationship on which Trudeau is building high hopes.

But the two leaders did continue their conversation on ABMs with a group of ministers and officials. The discussion was in the context of Nixon's hopes for direct negotiations with the Soviet Union.

★

This directed attention to a sentence, little noticed at the time, in Nixon's March 14 announcement of his decision to proceed with the safeguard system:

"Moreover, I wish to emphasize that in any arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union, the United States will be fully prepared to discuss limitations on defensive as well as offensive weapons systems."

It was intended to make clear that defensive missiles as well as offensive ICBMs are on the table for bargaining purposes in the negotiations which the U.S. and the Soviet Union have been preparing for two years.

Former President Lyndon Johnson and Premier Kosygin agreed in principle to talks on limiting strategic weapons, at their 1967 summit meeting in the little New Jersey town of Glassboro. There have since been numerous bilateral contacts, in Geneva and elsewhere, preparing for negotiations.

Nixon is convinced that the Soviet Union is genuinely interested in the possibility of a treaty to control the arms race, and he may have been able to disclose to Trudeau new information that real negotiations are now close at hand.

He certainly emphasized to Trudeau that, during talks with Moscow, he intends to consult with allies through the machinery of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization—evidence of his good intentions to upgrade NATO's consultative importance.

Gentle Persuasion by Nixon?

This will be of interest to the cabinet today, no doubt, as it considers whether Canada should remain in NATO. Nixon's hint suggests that if Canada wants to have a voice in East-West talks on ABMs, it had better remain a member of the alliance in good standing.

Trudeau, in any event, is now prepared to wait a few months, to see what happens on Nixon's hopes for negotiations, before he leads the Canadian government into a firm position.

This does not say that he is fully persuaded by the President's arguments. In Washington he asked sharp questions about the reality of the U.S. thinking that ABMs, once placed in position, can ever be negotiated out of existence.

He also remains concerned that Nixon's decision to proceed with the Safeguard system will be accepted in Moscow as an invitation to a new round of arms escalation—despite the President's argument that the Soviet government had not been disturbed by the 1967 decision in Washington to build the Sentinel ABM defense.

★

But Trudeau's worries are obviously not intense because his decision to wait a few months means that he is surrendering Canada's best opportunity to influence U.S. ABM policy.

Nixon's proposals are before Congress, and the opposition is mobilizing for a major battle. If the Canadian government chose this moment to say it believes ABMs will escalate the arms race—or even to protest that the Safeguard system may infringe Canadian territorial sovereignty—it might have a significant influence on events.

In the Commons last week, Trudeau suggested that he is not opposed to such public diplomacy. He said he would not hesitate to condemn the ABM system if he could not be convinced it was necessary to preserve the balance of power.

In a few months time, it may be too late to influence the basic U.S. decision. But that is a risk Trudeau now seems prepared to take.

'Kindergartens Need Parents'

By FRANCOISE LENOBLE-PREDINE
UNESCO Features

I was brought up in the country and when I came to Paris for the first time I was appalled by the way city families live, with the father going off to work in one direction, the mother in another, and the children spending the day in crowded creches or nursery schools.

Often, the children hardly see their parents at all—just first thing in the morning, and when they come home at 7 or 8 o'clock at night; and sometimes the father is away from home the whole time.

To make matters worse, the city family is a much smaller unit than the rural family, where aunts, uncles and grandparents all live nearby.

These children spend their day in a closed world and, what's more, a feminine world, since the teachers at nursery schools are virtually all women.

Of course people have always said that children should be brought up by women, that it is the woman's job to look after children. But now it is coming to be increasingly recognized that children need a masculine presence, too.

And this is the basis of a new scheme for creating centres for children where parents and teachers would work together.

They could be started for instance in offices and factories, or at any rate nearby, so that parents could come and see their children in the lunch hour or any other time when they have a free moment.

They need masculine presence, too.

We ran a nursery in the Sorbonne for seven weeks during the May-June period last year, for the children of the students, teachers and workers who were there at the time.

We started off in a small room about 10 feet by 15, but soon acquired more space by following the example of the students and simply occupying what we needed!

There were about 35 to 40 children to look after. We had a small basic staff of men and women—and we then encouraged students and older people to come and help out—mainly people with some technical or cultural expertise: painting, pottery, puppetry, dramatics, and so on. The activities were more or less the same as in an ordinary nursery school.

The big difference was that the parents had the opportunity to participate.

Like Grandparents

As well as the students, whom the children could look on as older brothers and sisters, we also had a number of old people from the neighborhood who came in to offer their services, and who were more like grandparents to the children.

The strange thing was that the students—who were after all in the middle of a rebellion against their parents' generation—found that they could talk easily with these old people: they got on well with them straightaway.

Personally, I would like to see old people doing more of this kind of work. It seems to me quite inhuman to shut them away in homes and hostels, and cut them off from the life of society on the assumption that they are no longer productive. During those seven weeks, their experience, competence and affection towards the children was quite invaluable to us and certainly productive.

Students Marry

I think a beginning should be made in the universities. This is probably where the need is greatest, for more and more students are tending to get married.

Also, the universities are more likely to be receptive to this kind of innovation, and married students are more likely to have time to participate than parents working full time.

One aim of the university reform movement is to prevent the university from becoming isolated from the rest of society, to involve it more in the outside world, extend its facilities to the people living nearby.

By the same token, university nurseries should not be restricted to the university itself—their facilities should be made available to the whole local neighborhood.

Any education is only valid insofar as it involves mutual understanding and dialogue between teacher and family; what we want to try and do is encourage the parents to participate actively, so that they will call in to the nursery school whenever they can and help the children in their painting, modelling and so on.

Obviously it is a question of educating the parents as well as the children—the two processes go together.

The Perpetual Loser In the Battle of the Plain

By ART STOTT

Stott

With the resolute defensiveness of a conscientious person who has made a hard and unpopular decision, the lady delivered her announcement. "I have put moss-killer on parts of the lawn today."

With a weary resignation not calculated to promote domestic felicity, I commented: "Here we go again."

The ensuing silence grew brittle.

She broke it with the explanation, still defensive: "It would have been better had you raked out the moss. It's too hard for me. But since you didn't, we have to do something to discourage its spread."

I told her I thought she had the wrong philosophy on the whole thing. Nature, I expounded, serves its manifold purposes. Sure, we'd like to have a well-groomed lawn gleaming green in Kentucky Blue and fescue. But, though we planted that seed, our plot prefers to support Creeping Charlie, crab grass, couch grass and moss. This, I said, seems to be the order of things according to nature. We can, at great expense of time, money and energy, fight Creeping Charlie, crab grass, couch grass and moss. Eventually, however, nature will prevail.

★ ★ ★

So, I added, why can't we learn to love Creeping Charlie, crab grass, couch grass and moss? In springtime they combine to form green cover. Later, if I forget to mow, Creeping Charlie introduces a beautiful powder blue surface with its delightful little blooms. Then comes summer and the whole shebang turns brown — which, also, is according to nature.

We are, I continued, upsetting the balance with this determined assault on the moss. What has been green will shortly turn brown, not in an even blanket, but in splotches, like mange.

"We seem to differ in our concepts of what a lawn should be," she interjected. "Don't you like the way the grounds at the Parliament Buildings look? Didn't you admire the Empress Hotel stretches before Fairy Ring moved in? Have you forgotten the fine sweep of lawn around some of those stately homes we visited in England?"

"I have not forgotten," I told her. "And each in its place is lovely. But I have not the gardening staff to do the job done on the Parliament Buildings or the Empress Hotel. Neither have I the centuries to spend mowing and rolling the grounds as they do in the stately homes.

"Furthermore, I added, "that moss killer is not going to encourage an even blanket of verdure. Its going to create bald patches — as it has done year after year.

"This is getting to be an annual discussion," said the lady. "Have you finished?"

I told her I had.

"But you've forgotten the whole section on the dandelion," she protested. "Don't you remember? It's part of the scheme of things also. You have explained to me that if dandelions were hard to cultivate they would be highly prized blooms, intricate in their structure, gay in appearance and a potential source of nourishment. As you told it, the tender leaves of the plant in spring can be used in salads. The blooms can be used in the making of a domestic light wine."

★ ★ ★

"I have abandoned the dandelion," I replied. "You were apparently not convinced by the case I made on previous occasions and you do not agree that it can be decorative on the lawn. Also, your weed-killer almost eradicated the growth in our grass plot."

"This," she commented, "is small, but definite progress in my effort to educate you horticulturally."

"It is a field of scant interest to me," I replied.

"Nevertheless," she countered, "I shall continue my efforts, unwilling a pupil though you be. In time you may learn to appreciate the merits of eliminating weeds — and moss is a weed in our lawn. Since I am interested, suppose you leave the direction of the garden to me and confine your efforts to the laboring end."

"I have a choice?" I asked.

She said, "No."

★ ★ ★

So once more we have achieved amicable agreement on what to do with the lawn. And, under supervision, I shall be allowed to dig the vegetable plot — which, I guess, is as things should be. In the vegetable plot there is an industrious and robust generation of earthworms, ideal for grilse fishing. From the vegetable plot an easy path leads down to the boathouse — an escape route that can be trodden by a reluctant gardener generally without detection by his overseer. Thence it is a simple progression to freedom of the seas in the small boat.

Who cares what happens to a lawn?

PAY THOSE TAXES WITH A SONG!

By BEN SMILLIE
United Church Observer

Does it ever strike you as odd that we sing the doxology over the quarters that fill our offering plates in church, but don't utter a peep over those fat cheques we mail to Ottawa for income tax?

Perhaps we have made too sharp a division in the spirit with which we render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's.

We have sometimes become quite militant over making sure that Caesar gets as little as possible, pointing out to reluctant givers that what they contribute at church budget time saves money at income tax time.

Through income tax, we have moved a long way from the Lady Bountiful approach to charity, where the poor like Lazarus could get the crumbs from the rich man's table.

We recognize now that patronizing, unsystematic seasonal feelings of good will debase the giver as much as the receiver.

Feeling sorry for people is often a subtle form of self-adulation, thanking God that we are not as other men.

Helping the widow, the fatherless, the stranger within our gates through the stewardship of income tax assures anonymity and is a more equitable method of meeting need.

If we see income tax as a form of Christian stewardship, we will be more careful watchdogs of how Caesar spends our money.

Building obsolete missile sites on Canadian soil in the Pearson regime should have brought a howl from the church in the name of bad stewardship.

Our priorities today should be questioned, too, when the 1968-69 budget calls for spending 18.4% of our money on defence and only two percent on external affairs.

It is, of course, an adequate assumption that stewardship through taxes should replace free-will giving. The pioneer work of the church in education and medicine, made possible through church stewardship, showed faith and risk that stolid government financing was slow to support.

But we are called to look at our stewardship to God in all of life, and although a family doxology over income tax returns may not improve our arithmetic, it will remind us that praising God for what we give to Caesar could widen our horizons on what Christian stewardship includes.

We asked Mr. and Mrs. Heinz Mueller of Victoria what they like best about electric heating:

"Ease of design. We didn't have to build the house around a chimney."

"Running costs are reasonable, too. We had a wide range of experience with other fuels before switching to electric heating four years ago. We're very pleased with the economy."

Peace Hopes Spark New York

NEW YORK (WP) — The stock market broke through its upside bounds this week on hopes that "secret" meetings on Vietnam will make some progress in ending the war.

Prices began climbing higher when the talks were mentioned at congressional hearings and the list continued moving higher as further mention was made through the week.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished with a gain of 15.48 points at 935.48. Oils and non-ferrous metals led the blue chips higher as 22 of the 30 Dow stocks posted gains, while seven lost ground and one was unchanged.

Trading volume rose steadily as the advance continued. At the end of the week, 53.3 million shares had changed hands, up from 50.2 million shares a week earlier.

Advancing stocks took a 972 to 616 lead over declines. In the previous week, 958 issus rose and 606 fell. There were 124 new 1969 highs and 310 new lows. This was the first week this year that new highs and lows were computed on the basis of 1969 prices.

The hints of progress toward ending the Vietnam war—although they contained nothing substantial—took all the credit for the rally. Late in the week there was a hint that the inflation psychology that powered the market last year might be returning.

The Dow industrials' upward move took that average through the 920-930 area that technicians had considered a likely resistance zone. At the moment, the 950 level looks as the next possible stumbling block.

Oil stocks were strong all week on word of discoveries, near-discoveries and possible discoveries on Alaska's north slope, in Canada and in Indonesia. Oil companies with interests in any of those areas were in strong demand and six of them made the list of 20 most active stocks.

Aluminum companies posted a round of price increases, touched off by the aluminum division of Olin Mathieson.

Among blue chips, General Electric was up 2⅞ to 92¼, International Paper added 2⅝ to 42⅝, Goodyear was ahead 2⅝ to 60¼ and Standard Oil (New Jersey), hoping for some progress on settling the Peruvian seizure of International Petroleum, climbed 2⅜ to 82⅛.

Exchanges Ask More Disclosure

MONTREAL (CP) — A ruling by the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges calls on member firms to produce an abbreviated version of their latest official financial statements to any client who requests it.

The stock exchanges said Friday this ruling has been in effect since March 1. They are the only ones in Canada to have adopted the regulation.

The exchanges feel that any client is entitled to know the financial condition of the firm with whom he places his investments.

Fishermen Seek Price Increases

VANCOUVER (CP) — Substantial fish price increases are being sought for British Columbia's 5,000 net fishermen by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

With last year's prices in parenthesis, new demands are: sockeye .41 (.37½); coho and steelhead .35 (.28); pinks .17 (.12¼); chums .18 (.12½-15); spring .45 (12½-35).

U.S. Ready To Relax Controls

WASHINGTON (WP) — The White House is close to a decision to relax controls over movements of American private capital abroad, according to informed sources.

Among the controls expected to be relaxed are those over private investment, administered by the department of commerce, and others regulated by the treasury and the federal reserve board.

The coming announcement came to light during a congressional hearing when Rep. Edward Derwinski (R—Ill.) said he expected it sometime next week.

The department of commerce Thursday released a letter from general counsel James T. Lynn to Rep. Thomas E. Morgan (D—Pa.), chairman of the foreign affairs committee, saying that controls will be eased soon but cautioning against expectations that they will be terminated.

PROTECT DOLLAR

Lynn said the department believes that "our over-all balance of payments situation has not yet improved to the point where the mandatory investment control program can be immediately abolished."

Mandatory controls over U.S. investment abroad and other restrictive measures were imposed by then-president Johnson in January, 1968, in an effort to reduce the drain on the U.S. balance of international payments and to protect the dollar.

Lynn also told Morgan that the commerce department believes two resolutions introduced by Rep. John Tunney (D—Calif.) calling for an early termination of the controls are not necessary.

Moreover, Lynn said, the department thinks their adoption "might create the impression that capital controls will be terminated sooner than would be advisable, on the basis of relevant facts and circumstances."

Fighter Group

Four West European aircraft firms said Thursday they have formed a consortium to develop and produce a new supersonic fighter to replace U.S. Starfighters.

Slump in Golds Week's Feature

By NICK FERRIS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Golds slumped and western oils soared to highlight Canadian stock markets this week. Trading was light.

Golds opened the week with a fractional loss which by Thursday had snowballed to more than a 17-point drop. However, the index picked up almost four points Friday in what analysts termed investors buying back into the market while share prices were at low levels.

Observers said the apparent reason for the drop in gold shares was a statement Wednesday by a prominent British financier that South Africa appears close to agreement with Western monetary authorities to sell half its newly mined gold to the free market and half to official monetary institutions.

David Montagu, executive director of Samuel Montagu and Co. Inc., bullion dealer for almost half the gold sales on the London free market, predicted the free market price of bullion would settle to $39 U.S. an ounce if South Africa sells to the market on a large scale.

The gold price in London Friday was $43.22, more than $8 above the official price of $35 U.S.

WESTERN OILS RISE

Western oils rose more than 12 points by Friday, as a small opening gain increased steadily by the end of the week.

Observers attributed three major reasons to the rise:

—Prime Minister Trudeau's statement in Washington Tuesday that Canada and the United States have agreed to work out new guidelines for a continental oil policy of mutual benefit.

—President Nixon's appointment Wednesday of a cabinet task force to conduct a comprehensive review of U.S. oil import quotas.

—Exploration success in the Alaskan slopes, especially in the Prudhoe Bay area where 17 drilling locations have already been established.

Most Canadian congolmerates were off this week. The U.S. Justice Department has launched an anti-trust suit against one of the larger U.S. conglomerates, Ling-Temco-Vought Inc., challenging the firm's plans to take over Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., the sixth largest U.S. steel company.

Observers said investors are watching the case closely for any effects the outcome may have on Canadian conglomerates.

Oil Sands Firm Not Worried About Alaska

TORONTO (CP) — The management of Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. is not concerned over the potential threat of Alaskan crude oil to its markets, Kenneth Heddon told the company's annual meeting.

"We believe synthetic crude fills specific refinery needs, and should remain competitive despite the recent Alaska discoveries," Heddon said.

He said Great Canadian expects increased production this year as technical and mechanical problems connected with starting up the company's plant at Fort McMurray, Alta., are straightened out.

Great Canadian produced 1.875 million barrels of crude oil since Jan. 1 this year, more than 80 per cent of its total production in the last three months of 1968, he said. This was 50 per cent of the daily production allowed by the Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board.

Shareholders voted to apply for supplementary letters patent creating 3 million preferred shares with a par value of $100 each. The first series, carrying interest at 7 per cent, is to be used to retire and replace 7 per cent notes issued to the company's parent, Sun Oil Co. of Philadelphia.

W. Harold Rea, Great Canadian chairman said the shares will relieve the company of an annual interest burden of about $8.7 million to Sun. The 7 per cent dividend on the preferred shares is not payable until the company begins making a profit.

Boom Economy Aids VMD Output

By G. S. KENT
Business Editor

The current phase of industrial expansion in the Western World gives Victoria's next to last remaining major heavy industry its raison d'etre.

Victoria Machinery Depot, of course, is the firm in question, which has devoted itself entirely to the manufacture of specialized industrial orders since divesting itself of its century-old shipbuilding division 15 months ago.

In that time, VMD has concentrated mainly on sophisticated requirements of the pulp, petroleum refining and petro-chemical industries, which use heavy alloy steel vessels built to fine tolerances and capable of withstanding extreme heat and pressure.

With its 3,000-ton Krupp press — the largest in North America — VMD is able to form plate for these vessels as no other steel fabricator in the hemisphere seems able.

There are other firms capable of similar work, but none have a press of such capacity, making their task somewhat more difficult.

VMD, although based more than 2,000 miles from the largest market and having to pay $1 an hour higher wages, plus high shipping charges, can compete because of its skills and technology.

But president Harold Husband, who has no thought of moving the business from the Inner Harbor, said it is only due to an extended period of industrial expansion that VMD can continue profitably.

•

As long as refineries keep growing, new petro-chemical plants and pulp mills go up — fine. But when the era comes to an end, there may be too few smaller jobs to keep VMD alive.

What is needed is a production line type of mainstay that will keep revenue coming no matter how cyclical industrial development may be. So far Husband has not found one that did not depend on outside stability as well, or on the export market.

Hopefully, a product may be found, securing for Victoria one of its big industries about which there can be no criticism on grounds of air or water pollution as with so many heavy industries in a fume-filled society.

Meanwhile, VMD goes for months at a time at near capacity, forming its heavy pressure vessels. The Bay Street plant is working at about 90 per cent load now and has forward orders to September for a 30-per-cent improvement over 1968.

Not bad for a business that had to close its shipyard only a few months ago.

•

A lacklustre stock market, even bearish, for a good part of the year has been forecast by several sources lacking in enthusiasm. However, a Victoria investment dealer recently returned from Toronto said there was a feeling of more optimism there.

This week has borne that feeling out and killed the fear that New York was "going to belly-out at the 850 level," referring to the Dow Jones industrial index that slid from more than 950 six weeks ago to less than 900. Last week it recovered to the 920 range and on Friday it hit 935.

Canadian Investment Fund points to a 35-year average of Canadian industrial stocks showing seasonal variation is pretty consistent. The table indicates that March, April and May are months in which the market trends clearly upward. October, December and July are peak months.

"The market rarely hesitates. If it has decided to go down it does so emphatically and usually for three months or more. In the past 35 years well over half the months of gain or decline were in sequence with two or more months of movement in the same direction. So the evidence suggests that the life span of a market is at least a season long, often longer."

Forgers, Thieves Help Mafia Infiltrate Wall Street Jam

NEW YORK (UPI) — Between thievery and counterfeiting of securities, brokerage houses, banks and their insurance companies are taking a beating that may run to way over $100 million a year.

Things are so bad one big insurance company, Royal Globe, has stopped writing bonds and theft insurance for brokers. And Wall Streeters have asked a legislative committee in Albany for a law requiring compulsory fingerprinting of brokerage house workers.

The boom in stock thefts has three main causes: the paperwork jam makes it easy because thefts probably won't be discovered for weeks; the acute shortage of help makes it easy for jailbirds bent on stealing stocks and bonds to get jobs in Wall Street; and, finally, the Mafia has moved in to mastermind stealing and fencing of the loot.

Patrick McGuire of Bernardsville, N.J., an expert on graphic forgeries, says the vaults of brokerage houses and banks contain more counterfeited securities than generally believed. The Mafia also masterminds much of the securities counterfeiting business, says McGuire, a government consultant, who has just published a book called The Forgers.

McGuire said the trend to simplicity in modern graphic design has helped forgers. The old fashioned certificate stock with its fancy engraving was hard to counterfeit. Today's simple, streamlined certificate is easy to counterfeit.

Counterfeit versions of either the old fashioned certificate or modern types are easy to market, he said, because most bank officials and brokerage house employees do not know any longer how to tell the genuine from the bogus — the variety is just too bewildering.

Treasury

New 91-day Government of Canada treasury bills auctioned Thursday: $120 million at an average price and yield of 98.385 and 6.58 per cent. Last week, $130 million at 98.373 and 6.63 per cent.

Tax Tips

By P. J. KELLY
Victoria Taxation Office

If your question is not answered here or in the department's tax guide, telephone 382-2173 or write National Revenue, Taxation, Victoria.

Q. I transferred a rental property to my wife last year. Is the income from this property hers or mine for tax purposes?

A. Assuming the transfer to your wife was a gift, you should report the gift in the Gift Tax section of your Income Tax Return and file a Gift Tax Return if necessary. The value of the property for gift tax purposes would be the price for which the property could have been sold less any outstanding mortgages against it. For income tax purposes you must continue to report the rental income from the property as though it had never been transferred.

* * *

Q. My wife and I both work and both file tax returns. Who claims for the family medical bills? We have three children.

A. The family medical expenses may be claimed by either you or your wife, regardless of which one actually paid them. However, medical expenses of a child are allowable only to the person who claims the child as a dependant. Because of the 3 per cent floor on medical expenses it will likely be to your advantage for one of you to claim all of the allowable family medical expenses, but if any of the medical expenses were paid for one of your children, the one who claims the medical expenses must also claim the child as a dependant.

MANITOBA CHAMPIONS GO TWO UP

DAUPHIN, Man. — Dauphin Kings overcame a first-period deficit Friday to defeat Westfort Hurricanes from Fort William, 7-3, and grab a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Western Canada junior hockey semi-final series.

Teams now shift to Fort William for the balance of the series.

Winger Bob Leguilloux pumped in three goals to spark Kings before a crowd of 2,183.

Dauphin enjoyed a clear edge in play, out-shooting the Lakehead champions 49-19 during the game.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Boosting contingent of winners in Bowler-of-the-week competition is Phyllis Bennie, who captured women's fivepin award in 23rd week of annual Times-sponsored contest. Phyllis topped division as she spilled maples for 228-312-334—874 series in Housewives League at Duncan Bowling Centre. All weekly winners are eligible for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs on May 11.

Cougars Deadlock Series For Record Junior Crowd

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Grant Evans said "howdy" to the Lethbridge Sugar Kings, and it's possible the Alberta junior hockey champions deserve a better reception than that after travelling 900 miles.

By way of introduction, Evans has been doing what comes naturally at Memorial Arena and Victoria Cougars find themselves on even footing today in their best-of-seven Western Canada playoff series.

The little centre carried the big torch Friday to fire Cougars to a 7-5 victory over Lethbridge and a 2-2 series deadlock. Teams go back at it tonight in what now amounts to a best-of three-playoff. A sixth game is assured for Monday night and a seventh, if needed, will be played Tuesday.

The series' winners then go against Regina Pats in a Western semi-final round.

Evans was the five-point buzzsaw who helped cut down the slick-skating Albertans. He scored three goals and drew assists on another pair by defenceman John Van Horlick.

Doug Gibson and Lon Miles rapped in the others for Cougars.

Darrell Knibbs counted twice for Sugar Kings while Dave Shardlow, Craig Simmons and Gary Paskuski pumped in singles.

But it was Evans who enjoyed a fine night, and the Sugar Kings need not be embarrassed by his introductory methods. That has been Evans' "style" ever since he joined Cougars last fall.

Grant's Happy Hunting Grounds

He had scored at least one goal in each of the 19 games he played during the regular season, missing one outing because of illness. Evans now has scored goals in four of Victoria's six playoff games at the Arena. Only Penticton Broncos managed to blank Evans, who now has 62 goals in 51 games.

The Don McLean-coached Kings restricted Evans to a pair of assists as they opened the series with 4-2 and 6-5 victories in Lethbridge. Once at home, however, Evans was back to his old tricks. He began it all by scoring two goals and an assist in Cougars' 5-4 overtime decision on Wednesday.

Van Horlick, figuring in three goals from his defensive position, played a strong supporting role as the Cats whipped up a 6-2 lead then held off a third-period comeback bid by Sugar Kings.

RECORD CROWD

Trailing 1-0 after the first and 6-2 after the second, Lethbridge kept 4,323 fans close to their seats by out-scoring Cougars 3-1 in the first seven and a half minutes of the final session.

Friday's crowd, a record for a junior game in Victoria, boosted Cougars' six-game playoff attendance total to 17,273.

Apart from their lapses early in the third period and a few errant moments in the second period, Cougars started to show defensive improvements. They also counted the game's opening goal and out-shot Sugar Kings by a slim 37-34 margin, both series' "firsts."

The strong-skate, good-check tactics of Kings continue to pester Victoria players into defensive mistakes. Good stick checks helped produce three of the five Lethbridge goals.

GOALIES STRONG

Both goaltenders — Don Hall of Lethbridge and Victoria's Ron Grahame — played well.

Grahame was at his best in the second, making several clutch grabs as the Kings outshot Cougars 16-14.

Knibbs, the Alberta League's scoring champion with a record 55 goals during the regular season, was Gings' most dangerous performer and scrappy Gary Paskuski also played well for Lethbridge.

Dwanye Pentland and Reg Cherenko were other Cougar standouts, along with Evans and Van Horlick.

'Not Born to Lose' Czechs Tell World

(Times News Services)

STOCKHOLM—Canada's national team came up with its best scoring display today, but, after 24 hours, Czechoslovakia still remained the talk of the world hockey tournament.

The Canadians, out of the running for a medal of any description, defeated a poor Finish team 6-1 today to clinch a spot in next year's tournament in Canada.

Steve King, Ken Stephanson, Bill Heindl, Gary Begg, Morris Mott and Fran Huck scored Canada's goals. Lauri Mononen scored for Finland.

The win was the fourth in nine starts for the fourth-place Canadian squad. All its victories were against the bottom teams in the six-country tournament.

Wayne Stephenson tended goal for Canada and made 21 saves while hard-pressed Urpo Ylonen stopped 31 as Canada led 2-0 after the first period and 5-0 after the second.

Kevin O'Shea, who drew a match misconduct penalty in Canada's 4-2 loss to Sweden Thursday, was left out of the lineup although tournament officials said he was eligible to play.

CZECHS CELEBRATE

But the Czechs, with their fingers on the world trophy, were still relishing their 4-3 victory over defending champion Russia on Friday. Czechoslovakia needs only to tie Sweden on Sunday to claim the title.

The sellout crowd of more than 10,000 in Johanneshov Stadium spurred the Czechs on with shouts of "Dubcek! Dubcek!"—as the Swedish fans did when Czechoslovakia won 2-0 over Russia March 21.

Out came the Czech banners in the crowd with the words: "We were not born to lose our country" and "Your tanks can't help you here."

WON'T BE EASY

A tie with Sweden Sunday will give the Czechs their first championship in 20 years. But the Swedes, with a chance for a second-place silver medal, aren't about to give anything away.

Sweden meets the United States today in the ninth round of the 10-round tournament, and it figures to be another Swedish win. Sweden defeated the U.S. 8-2 March 18.

Sunday, Sweden will be out to duplicate its 2-0 victory over Czechoslovakia March 19.

Swedish victories today and Sunday, coupled with Russia's expected triumph over Canada in the last game of the two-week tournament Sunday, would throw the final standing into a three-way deadlock.

In that event, Russia would take the title for the seventh straight year because its overall goal spread is so much larger than the Czechs and Swedes.

GAME IN HAND

And the Swedes, with a game in hand, are not far off the Czech spread.

The Holik brothers, Jaroslav and Jiri, stole the show for Czechoslovakia in Friday night's victory over Russia. They figured in three goals, and Jaroslav got what proved to be the winner with less than 10 minutes left in the game.

Jaroslav centres the line, Jiri is the left winger and Jan Hrbaty is on the right.

Czech coach Jaroslav Pitner said his players won because they stuck to their game plan.

"If we play the Russians' way, we are lost. Our plan was to make the Russians play our way. More than that I can't say because this championship is not over."

'CZECH GOALIE BETTER'

Arkady Chernishev, co-coach of the Soviet team, agreed with Pitner only on one point—that Vladimir Dzurila played better in goal than Russia's Viktor Zinger.

The fact the Czechs again refused to shake hands with the Russians didn't sit well with Chernishev.

"We have been world champions six times in a row and teams have always shaken hands with us," he said.

The Czech bitterness over the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia last August still remains strong.

TIMES OPEN GOLF

Pros' Habits Belittle Odds

The odds against a professional winning the annual Times Vancouver Island Open match-play golf championship should be, from a mathematical standpoint, 155-to-7.

That's how the amateurs out-number the pros as the field of 162 starters moved to Gorge Vale on Sunday for the 18-hole qualifying test.

But form and past records tend to neutralize the amateurs' superiority. As well, the qualifying-round results—aimed at declaring 32 starters for match-play battles—will or may further reduce the odds in the pros' favor.

The professionals have been out-manned every year but their names dominate the engravings on The Daily Times Trophy. They have won in nine of the past 11 years.

The earliest years belonged to the amateurs. They held the trophy until Laurie Carroll, then head pro at Victoria Golf Club and now master of a Douglas Street driving range, broke the ice in 1958.

Carroll, also the Island Open king in 1964, is one of the seven pros entered in this year's tournament. Defending champion Vaughan Trapp and Cowichan's Norm Boden, the 1961 titlist, join Carroll as titled favorites to watch. The other professionals entered are Bill Court and Bob Hogarth of Colwood, Dick Silverberg of Glen Meadows and Uplands' Don Billsborough.

Bill McColl, Open champion in 1955, heads the list of amateur contenders. Former finalists Vince Clarkson and Lex Sutcliffe, both of Gorge Vale, are other prominent play-for-fun challengers.

Gorge Vale professional Earl Davies, expressing respect for a flock of young challengers bidding for fairway fame, feels scores of 77 or better over the par 36-37—73 Gorge course will be needed to qualify for the open championship.

Another 32 will be drawn into the Hugh Francis Trophy event on the basis of handicaps.

The starting times are printed on Page 9.

HIGHLAND WEDDING WINS GRAND NATIONAL

AINTREE, England (CP) — Highland Wedding, co-owned by stockbroker Charles Burns of Toronto and sportsman Thomas Hall McKoy of Haverford, Qa., today won the Grand National Steeplechase.

Steel Bridge was second, 12 lengths behind Highland Wedding in the gruelling race covering four miles and 856 yards over 30 tough obstacles. Rondetto was third and Beeches was fourth.

Few of the 31 starters finished the course.

Highland Wedding, a 12-year-old gelding, had been rated the second choice for the 123rd running of the race behind Red Alligator, last year's winner.

Highland Wedding had been entered in the Grand National three times before, but this was his first win.

Woes With Driver Plaguing Nicklaus

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A tightly-bunched pack of par wreckers set out in pursuit of Bob Murphy today in the third round of the $200,000 National Airlines open golf tournament. But Jack Nicklaus and Bob Goalby weren't among them.

Nicklaus, who will be the favorite in the Masters tournament April 10-13, can't seem to find the range with his driver. He shot 73-75—148 here and missed the cut.

Goalby, defending champion in the Masters, had 74-73—147, missing by a stroke.

Both went out to try to find a solution to their woes while other pros took dead aim at the $40,000 first prize here.

Murphy, 26, of Brooklyn, N.Y., forged to the front of the pack Friday by shooting a course record-equalling 66 over the 6,927-yard, par-72 Country Club of Miami course for 135, nine under par.

HAD EIGHT BIRDIES

He had eight birdies in the remarkable round, including four in a row.

Top Canadian was Al Balding of Toronto with a 72-72—144, followed by Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg with 71-74—145.

George Knudson of Toronto had 74-75—149 and Ken Fulton, formerly of Trail, B.C., and now of Montreal, had 76-74—150. Alvie Thompson of Toronto was 74-80—154.

DUNN NAMED AS DIRECTOR

Victoria sportsman G. Fitzpatrick Dunn was named Friday to the board of directors of Ducks Unlimited (Canada) during the organization's 33rd annual meeting at the Empress Hotel.

Ducks Unlimited, which works to preserve and expand wetlands that support North America's waterfowl populations, has previousyl concentrated its efforts on prairie areas. This year, however, the organization plans development of three major projects in British Columbia.

Sneakers Slip But Mets Click In Bantam Meet

SALMON ARM — Victoria teams won and lost in the opening rounds of the double-knockout British Columbia bantam basketball championships here Friday.

Victoria Metropolitans, sparked by Jim Nemec's 17-point display, clipped Penticton Pogos 49-47 in the boys' tournament. The Mets were to face Winston Churchill of Vancouver in their second game this morning.

Salmon Arm Jacks defeated First United Sneakers of Victoria, 53-44, in the four-team girls' tournament.

Jamie Must Travel To Improve Game

TORONTO (CP) — Sweden's No. 1 singles player believes Canada's best badminton prospect will not improve if he continues to play in this country. And Sture Johnsson proved his point by eliminating Jamie Paulson of Calgary 15-6, 15-11, in the quarter-finals of the Canadian open championships Friday night.

"Jamie will not get any better if he stays in Canada," Johnsson said following the match. "He beats them all here easily and has only Channarong."

Johnsson plays Tan Aik Huang of Malaysia in the semi-final which was scheduled to be staged this afternoon. Huang outlasted Muljadi of Indonesia 15-6, 7-15, 17-16, in the tightest match of the quarters.

Paulson's coach, Channarong Ratana-Suang-seang, a former member of Thailand's Thomas Cup team and defending United States nationals champion, agrees with Johnsson.

ROLLICK OUSTED

Meanwhile, Paulson and Yves Pare of Montreal, three-time closed champions, survived the quarters to advance against the Indonesian team of Rudy Hartona and Muljadi. They beat Kurt and Sture Johnsson 15-2, 18-17, but needed to go to points to do it.

Hartona, world singles champion for the last two years and at 19, youngest player ever to win the all-England, knocked out defending titlist Bruce Rollick of Vancouver 15-4, 18-16 in the first round. He plays Tan Aik Mong of Indonesia in the other singles semi-final.

Judy Rollick got by Cynthia Kelly of the U.S. 11-3, 11-5 for the second time in as many meetings to meet Retno Koestijah of Indonesia in the women's singles semi-final.

DAYSMITH ADVANCES

Eva Twedberg of Sweden, 1968 world champion, outclassed Sharon Whittaker of Vancouver and will go against Allison Daysmith, also of Vancouver, in the other half of the draw. Miss Daysmith blanked Alena Mladek of Czechoslovakia 11-0, 11-0.

Bruce and Judy Rollick, the first husband-and-wife team to win the closed title since 1922 earlier this week, were eliminated in the second round by Hartona and Maida Barnett, 15-10, 11-15, 18-16.

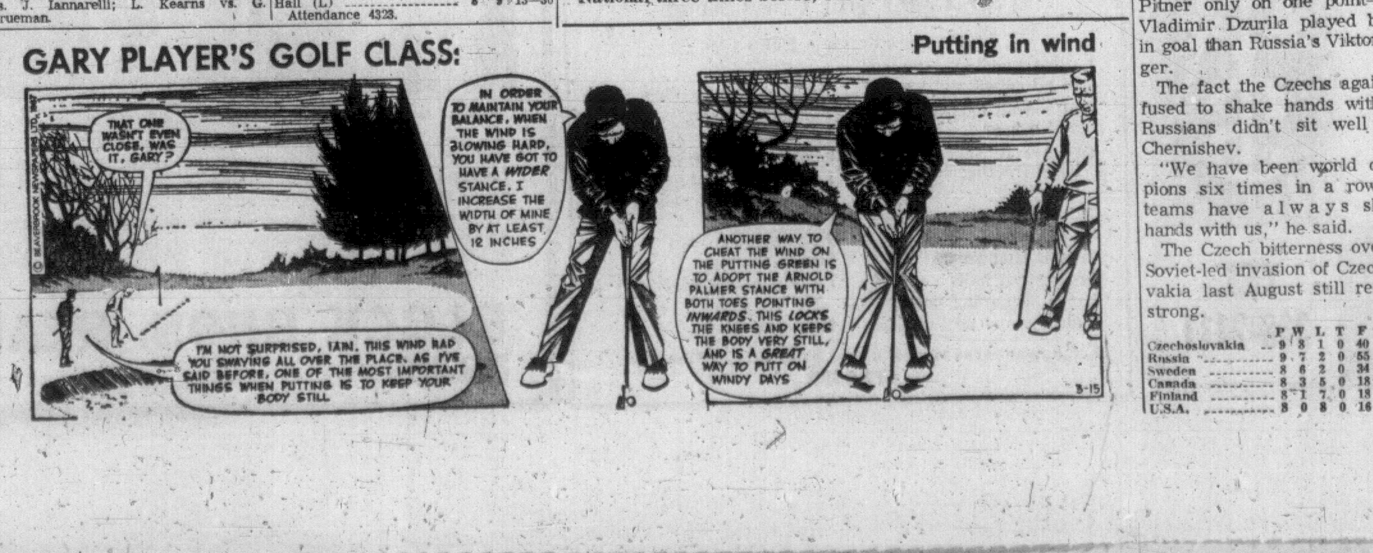
GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

Putting in wind



THAT ONE WASN'T EVEN CLOSE, WAS IT, GARY?
IN ORDER TO MAINTAIN YOUR BALANCE, WHEN THE WIND IS BLOWING HARD, YOU HAVE GOT TO HAVE A WIDER STANCE. I INCREASE THE WIDTH OF MINE BY AT LEAST 12 INCHES
I'M NOT SURPRISED, IAIN. THIS WIND HAD YOU SWAYING ALL OVER THE PLACE. AS I'VE SAID BEFORE, ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT THINGS WHEN PUTTING IS TO KEEP YOUR BODY STILL ANOTHER WAY TO CHEAT THE WIND ON THE PUTTING GREEN IS TO ADOPT THE ARNOLD PALMER STANCE WITH BOTH TOES POINTING INWARDS. THIS LOCKS THE KNEES AND KEEPS THE BODY VERY STILL, AND IS A GREAT WAY TO PUTT ON WINDY DAYS

Sports Celebrity Event Honors the Ladies, Too

SANDRA HARTLEY
. . . gymnastic queen

Don't worry ladies. The second annual Victoria Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel next Tuesday isn't just for the men.

You'll also have a prominent part in the festivities.

First of all, it isn't a stag affair. Gals and dolls, along with males — muscular and otherwise — are invited to attend the dinner, co-sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Saanich and the Greater Victoria Sports Council and scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m.

Also, the ladies will be in the spotlight when sports celebrities are introduced since the head-table guests will include attractive Sandra Hartley, the Olympic gymnast from Vancouver who during the past year has collected the all-around women's titles in the Canadian national, Pacific Northwest and national collegiate meets; and another Olympian, Vancouver schoolteacher Irene Piotrowski, queen of the country's female sprinters.

Men will also grab some of the action at the head table since their numbers will include Frank Barroby, B.C.'s leading jockey in 1968; Al Kennedy, president of the B.C. Professional Golfers' Association, and Tom English, commissioner of the Inter-City Lacrosse League.

Among the dinner patrons will also be several Victoria residents who have earned athletic glory in national and international competition. Some have been enshrined in Canadian and provincial sports halls-of-fame.

But don't forget, one of Tuesday's awards is strictly for the distaff set. That's the one that will be presented to the person selected as Victoria's best female athlete of the past year.

FIELD DOWN TO THREE

In that one, preliminary voting has narrowed the field down to three candidates — track stars Barbara Dallimore and Anne Langdale, each holder of a pair of national records, and University of Victoria volleyball ace Anne Jeffrey.

Selection rules dictate that no person can win the same award in two successive years and that means that basketball star Mary Coutts and Olympic hurdler Bob McLaren, award winners last year, are out of the running this time despite outstanding performances in the past 12 months.

However, Mrs. Coutts may help the girls grab another award because she was one of the big reasons Victoria Maplettes won the Canadian senior women's basketball crown earlier this month.

COUGARS IN RUNNING

Maplettes are one of the three finalists in voting for the team-of-the-year award. Their rivals in final balloting are Victoria Cougars, B.C. junior hockey champions currently battling Lethbridge in a Western Canada semi-final, and Saanich (Chew Excavating) Hornets, who staged an unbeaten march to the B.C. juvenile football title.

Still in contention for the trophy that will go to the city's top male athlete are Ron Grahame, star with both the Cougars and Hornets, national junior figure skating king Paul Fisher and Canadian junior gymnastic champion Rick Johnson.

Major award of the evening, to be presented by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, is the one that will go to the person named as "sportsman of the year." Despite the title, women are eligible to win that one, too.

BOSS OF VIKINGS

Besides offering city sports fans an opportunity to see noted athletes, the dinner will also present capable speakers who have had colorful careers in professional sports.

Scheduled to be introduced by master of ceremonies Gorde Hunter as main speakers are Jim Finks, former quarterback and coach who is now general manager of the National Football League's Minnesota Vikings; Dewey Soriano, former Pacific Coast League president who is now head of Seattle Pilots, new expansion club in major league baseball, and MLA Herb Capozzi, former pro footballer who spent several years as general manager of the B.C. Lions.

It all starts at 6:30 and it should add up to an interesting evening. Tickets, costing $10 each, are available from Kiwanians, Sports Council members, the area's three main arenas, Dorman's Men's Wear and Gar's Trophies.

Technical Difficulty

"Technical difficulties" have forced a weekend suspension of skiing on Green Mountain, it was announced Friday.

Totems dropped third-place San Diego Gulls 4-1 in Seattle and are a point behind with two games to go. Gulls have one game remaining, against league leading Portland Buckaroos Sunday.

Canucks climbed up to 86 points by edging Denver Spurs 6-5 in Vancouver, dropping Spurs back into the cellar. Meanwhile, Portland tied 3-3 with the roadrunners in Phoenix.

Playoffs open in Vancouver Tuesday with Canucks against the fourth-place club.

Stockers Enjoy Penalty Parade

Stocker's North Americans threw the emphasis on power-plays and took a refreshing lease on life in the Vancouver Island Hockey League final.

Coach John Merrifield's Stockers prolonged the best-of-five championship series Friday by tripping University of Victoria Vikings 7-3 before 1,545 fans at the Sports Centre.

Vikings now lead the series 2-1 with the fourth game scheduled Sunday afternoon, starting at 1:30.

Stockers did it by making the most of the penalty parade. Stockers took 11 penalties, Vikings eight.

EITHER WAY

But Stockers fared best with advantage and disadvantage. They skated off all but one of the disadvantages and did even better on that one when Nick Nicoletti connected while the Stockers were shorthanded.

Les Bergman, Brian Whitten and Dennis Ferrill counted other Stocker goals while the Vikings were shorthanded.

Tom Mullan, Errol Goulden and Jim Schwarok rapped in Stockers' other goals while Ralph Halsall, Mick Brown and Jim Haddrell replied for Vikings.

FIRST PERIOD

1. Stockers, Mullan (Bergman, Sproule) 4:29.
2. Stockers, Nicoletti (Lancaster) 11:21.
3. Vikings, Halsall (Westover) 14:28.
4. Vikings, Brown (Hales) 15:42.

Penalties—Shkwarok (S) 10:57; O'Neill (S) (misconduct) 17:27.

SECOND PERIOD

Spotlight on Speed At Sandown Meeting

It takes time to get thoroughbreds into top condition and spring racing usually favors speed more than endurance. When horsemen are delayed in training schedules by snow and ice in January, as they were on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island this year, the accent is more than ever on quickness.

That's the way it will be at Sandown Park next Saturday when the 1969 B.C. racing season opens on the Sidney strip.

All eight races on the first meeting have been carded for the sprint distance of three and one-half furlongs by Stan Goddard, racing secretary for the B.C. Jockey Club.

That includes the Colonist Handicap, Sandown's traditional opening-day feature which is expected to attract a field of sprinters that will have Indian Bug, Milact, Lonk, Yankee Fighter, Hard to Forget, In Solid, Never Charge and Hermine's King going to the gate.

FEMALE JOCKEY

Expected to get considerable attention from fans is Mary Cowan, the 32-year-old mother of three who has applied for a riding licence.

She'll have some tough opposition to beat in order to get a spot in the winners' circle with other riders expected for the meet including Frank Barroby, B.C.'s top jockey last year; Brian McLeod, leading apprentice in 1968; Basil Frazier, Kerry Sam, Maurice Milne, Charlie Ulrich, Ronnie Arnold, Jim Arnold, Jimmy Broomfield, Gene Salas, Raphael Estapper, Jim Gilbert, Tim Evans and Al Ventrella.

Racing will continue on a Friday and Saturday basis until the final day, Monday, May 5.

First post time each day will be 2 p.m. and buses to the track will leave Victoria from 12 noon each racing day. Season tickets for the Sandown meet, costing $6 each, are now available at the Century Inn.

Training activities are continuing at a brisk pace on the strips at Sandown and the lower mainland's Lansdowne park. The following workout times were recorded Friday:

Subdivision Plan 'Will Destroy' Small Creek

By BOB MITCHELL

A new subdivision, a lot of sewage and an unpolluted salmon stream.

These are the ingredients of a struggle developing between Sooke residents and a local housing developer.

It's no tempest in a teacup.

What's at stake, say the people, is the future of the most important salmon stream south of the Cowichan River; others, perhaps reluctant to get involved, point to the need for more houses in Sooke.

One thing is clear: until now the developer, Oakwood Homes Ltd., has been far less vocal in its defence than the critics who oppose it.

●

Oakwood Homes proposes to build an 80-unit subdivision on the former Mapleridge farm, just on the outskirts of Sooke village, and adjacent to the Sooke ball park.

Less than two weeks ago copies of an applicaton for a permit under the Pollution Control Act were posted in the vicinity of the proposed subdivision.

Signed by the company's consulting engineer, the forms said 20,000 gallons of sewage would be discharged into DeMamiel Creek every 24 hours. Point of discharge would be 1,000 feet upstream from the Phillip Road bridge over the creek, or about a quarter of a mile upstream from where the creek joins the Sooke River.

When word of the sewage applicaton got out, things began to happen.

Last week members of the Sooke Harbor marine protection committee met and decided to circulate copies of a petition protesting the sewage disposal method in local stores.

●

The petition will be picked up today and delivered to F. S. McKinnon deputy minister of lands, forests and water resources. Letters have also been sent to federal Minister of Fisheries Jack Davis, Minister of Health and Welfare Ralph Loffmark and Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical officer of the metropolitan board of health.

This week Oakwood Homes president William Laird issued a statement explaining the company's policy on the issue. He said discharged sewage would be treated by a plant which met standards set by the Pollution Control Board.

The "plant" as described in the company's application to the board would be an oxidation ditch clarifier, designed to aerate sewage before discharging it.

"It is not the intention or desire of the proponents of this subdivision to pollute or destroy DeMamiel Creek in any manner. . . ."

DeMamiel Creek is not a large stream. This week the water level was down to the point where a man could almost jump across it. Yet every fall 25,000 chum and 3,000 coho spawn in it.

It's not hard to deduce that with 20,000 gallons of sewage, treated or untreated, discharging daily into the creek, the life of any fish who ventured up it wouldn't be worth a plugged nickel.

During the summer water flow in the creek falls off so much that fish are restricted to deep pools.

Jack Brooks, Sooke fisheries officer for 18 years, said the salmon run is worth $40,000. For the past 12 years he has built a dam of sandbags at the lower end of Young's Lake, the source of DeMamiel Creek.

●

During the summer he periodically opens the dam to send fresh water downstream to fish occupying the lower reaches of the stream.

He said the stream is one of the few left providing fish for Indian fishermen on southern Vancouver Island.

A Phillip Road resident said he depends on the creek for seepage into his well; his neighbor takes his water directly from the creek.

Gerald Marriner, chairman of the marine protection committee, said the group is not only concerned about the salmon run but also with the affect an effluent would have on the Sooke Basin, a partically land-locked body of salt water without fast-running tides.

"Anything dumped into the creek would not only destroy the fish spawn, but would gradually wash down the river and fill up this basin — after a while it would just be a cesspool"

●

He said the metropolitan board of health required East Sooke residents to locate their septic tanks so that they would not drain into the basin. One resident even had to pump his sewage uphill in order to meet the board standard.

"We're not trying to stop progress," said Marriner. "We just want to make sure progress doesn't take place at the expense of our environment."

Oakwood Homes president Laird declined to comment Friday on details of the company's proposed sewage disposal.

He said he understood the process but felt he was "not qualified to go into the details."

Consulting engineer Erik Hoel could not be reached for comment.

Still on Brink Of Extinction

The whooping crane, North America's largest bird, is still on the brink of extinction, Ernie Kuyt, federal wildlife officer, told members of the Northwest Wildlife Society Friday.

While the plight of the whoopers was not as serious as it was a few years ago because of strict protective measures, a storm at their wintering grounds in Texas or disease could wipe out the flock, he said.

There are only 50 wild birds left.

Nineteen whoopers are in captivity.

He said under a joint Canadian and U.S. Wildlife Services program, a fixed number of whooping crane eggs are now removed from their nests in the Northwest Territories and incubated artificially.

The program started in 1967 was proving successful, he said.

In 1967, six eggs were taken — four survived.

In 1968, nine eggs and one young were taken from nests. Three birds died. Seven survived.

Death Ruled Murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury Friday ruled that Kum Toa Lee, 75, was murdered. He was found beaten and robbed in his Chinatown home last Friday and died two days later in hospital. The jury heard evidence that when he was asleep burglars broke into his home and took several hundred dollars. No suspects have been arrested.

Vote to Gauge Grit Policies

CAMPBELL RIVER — The outcome of the April 8 Comox-Alberni federal byelection will reflect confidence or non-confidence in the Liberal government's policies, said national NDP leader T.C. Douglas Friday night.

Speaking on behalf of NDP candidate Tom Barnett, Douglas said the government has made "very clear moves" in increased personal tax, postal rate hikes and fishing licences and the way people vote here will gauge public opinion of these policies.

On the American anti-ballistic missile debate, he said "the basic issue of the anti-ballistic missile controversy is not fall-out but whether the establishment of this system in the U.S. would escalate an arms race.

"This is why Edward Kennedy, Mansfield and a host of American senators are opposing it."

He added that if the ABM project did get approval it could trigger serious internal strife in the United States that could be an even greater threat than an arms race.

"Our party managed to force a debate in the House last week on this issue—we have to know what it would mean in terms of Canada."

He said he hopes Canada will propose that the U.S. and Russia try to reach an arms agreement.

So far in the campaign Douglas has drawn the biggest crowd with Conservative leader Robert Stanfield a close second and Health Minister John Munro lagging behind.

EXECUTION HALTED

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A judge ordered a halt Friday in a scheduled execution next Tuesday that would have been the first in the U.S. in almost two years. Lester Morford III, who pleaded guilty in 1963 to killing Jack Foster of Medford, Ore., won a reprieve from Judge Bruce Thompson who granted a stay pending a new appeal. The last execution in the U.S. was in Colorado in June, 1967.

Taxes Asked On Wrecked Building

PORT ABLERNI — Alfred Ablitt, a Port Alberni businessman, is contesting a claim for taxes levied on a building which fell down during January's heavy snowfall.

He operated the Purity Bakery. Heavy snow caused the building to collapse early in January and it had to be demolished.

Ablitt told Port Alberni council he plans to fight "this absolute injustice" to the highest government level.

A car accident last July prevented Ablitt from carrying on his business. He is still being looked after by a bone specialist and was unable to remove snow from the bakery during the winter.

Because snow caused the building to collapse, an insurance policy did not cover the damage. Ablitt said.

"I've lost my business and my building," he told the council.

The cars with the electronic brains. They're still Volkswagens at heart.

Just because the 1969 Volkswagen Squareback now comes with a revolutionary computerized fuel injection system as standard equipment, don't think we're going to let our electronic brains go to our heads.

You still get an air-cooled engine in the rear that never needs water or antifreeze. You still get around 31 miles to the gallon. (Our computer wouldn't think of wasting gas. Its electronic sensors flash back information on engine speed, temperature and load, so it can calculate precisely how much fuel is required.)

You still get Volkswagen dependability. (Because the computer is made up of transistors, it can never blow its mind.)

What you don't get are carburetor problems like flooding, icing and stalling. Because you don't get a carburetor.

And as if a fuel injection system as standard equipment wasn't enough of a bargain, the Squareback still gives you even more than you bargained for:

A double joint rear axle like the kind they use in racing cars. (In fact, it was even designed for us by the same engineers who design the Porsche racing cars.)

There's enough room in the back for all the beach balls, picnic coolers, golf clubs and suitcases (6, by actual count) you and your family need for a weekend vacation. And remember, because there's still another trunk up front, where most cars have their engine, there's still room for all the stuff you almost forgot. You also get an electrically heated rear window. Electric clock. 49-position seats and padded headrests.

The 1969 VW Fastback, Squareback and Notchback are the only cars in the world with computerized fuel injection as standard equipment.

For a lot less than you'd think, you can now be the proud owner of your very own electronic computer.

And a brand new Volkswagen to carry it around in.

Human Values Drive Advocated by Munro

HAMILTON (CP)—The Liberal Party must put itself in the forefront of the younger generation's movement to recover human values, Health Minister John Munro said today.

He told delegates attending the Ontario party convention there is a "humanistic counter-revolution" of the post-war generation—a fight to preserve justice, equality, opportunity and freedom in a society where people feel threatened by technology.

"What we need to do is re-direct technology to make it serve humanity."

Mr. Munro warned that people who feel cut off from society became a threat to it. He found "many disturbing similarities" between the social alienation of today and the economic alienation which Karl Marx described in the 19th century.

The way to forestall this alienation before it destroys society is to elect governments "truly committed to the new humanism of the young and the ageless values it represents."

Technology, properly re-directed, is the only tool with which to achieve the social justice and equality for which the humanist conscience strives, he said.

The text of Mr. Munro's address was released to the press in advance.

Laval Baits Tory Chief On Language

QUEBEC (CP)—Laval University students heckled Robert Stanfield with shouts of "Let's go, Robert" and "Speak white" when the Conservative leader delivered a speech in French at the university Friday.

Stanfield calmly weathered the storm, completed his speech and answered questions in French later.

He ignored the heckling throughout. Some students claimed they could not understand his replies in French and got him to repeat them in English.

At one point, a student climbed onto the stage with a chocolate bar and glass of water, sat down near Stanfield and ate his "lunch."

Stanfield accepted the offer of a piece of chocolate and the student left the stage, throwing the water remaining in his glass toward the speaker.

NOT SERIOUS

The federal Oppositon leader told the students he does not recognize any "particular status" for Quebec, and has never seriously considered the possibility the province would break with the rest of Canada.

He called on Quebecers to help eliminate what he called the climate of suspicion in the country.

"You are wondering if the West thinks or worries about you. But have you ever worried about the problems of the West?

"Is there an equal effort on both sides?"

Stanfield acknowledge that the Conservatives were beaten in the last federal election, but said "this does not prevent me from wanting to rebuild my party and from desiring seriously the prosperity and the unity of Canada."

Ontario Liberals Re-Elect Robert Nixon Party Leader

HAMILTON (CP) — Murmurs of dissent were inaudible Friday night as Robert Fletcher Nixon, a St. George, Ont., farmer, was re-elected leader of the Ontario Liberal party.

Dissident Liberal efforts to draft Judy LaMarsh, former secretary of state, and federal Transport Minister Paul Hellyer fell through when neither expressed interest in the post.

Mr. Nixon, 40, won his second straight leadership challenge by acclamation.

He was first acclaimed in January, 1967. A constitutional provision calls for a leadership vote within two years of a provincial election. The last election was in October, 1967.

The former teacher succeeded his father, the late Harry Nixon, as member for Brant in 1962. He heads the official Opposition of 28 Liberals in the legislature against 69 Progressive Conservatives and 20 New Democrats.

Aware of the criticism of his caucus, Mr. Nixon said in his acceptance speech that it is not the role of the Liberal party to "present a monolithic approach on every issue."

And he said the Liberal caucus has placed an emphasis on directing funds through provincial programs into Northern Ontario development.

"There are so many special policy issues concerning the North that we already plan a joint policy meeting in Northern Ontario next October."

Ian Wahn told a policy committee meeting that Liberals who want to see Canada withdraw from the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance face a tough fight within the party.

The member for St. Paul, chairman of the federal external affairs and defence committee, spoke shortly before 1,500 delegates approved a resolution calling for Canada to play a continued but reduced role in NATO.

Mr. Wahn said his committee, which toured NATO installations in Europe earlier this year, expects a cabinet decision this weekend on its main recommendation — that Canada continue its NATO commitments to the mid-1970s.

MEMBER DISAGREES

John Roberts (L—York Simcoe), a member of Mr. Wahn's committee who resigned to present his own separate report to the cabinet, said Canada should convert its NATO defence units to a lighter, more mobile force.

Escott Reid, principal of Toronto's Glendon College who was a top Canadian negotiator when the NATO pact was formed 20 years ago, said Canada should start to work out withdrawal of her armed forces in Europe, completing the withdrawal in about four years.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

Victoria Alderman Ian Stewart speaks with unforked tongue when he tells city council that the province shirks its responsibility toward rehabilitation of its alcoholics. But to present the grant-seeking Salvation Army with this fact instead of a grant for its Harbor Light Centre doesn't make council look too good, either.

Our B.C. government, whatever its faults, at least contributes through the Salvation Army to the care of the down-and-out.

I suggest also that councillors who vetoed the grant have disregarded one applicable truth about Sally Ann's approach to the broke, the hungry and the derelict. In her eyes, the alcoholism that afflicts many of them is incidental to the fact that they are humans in immediate need.

I'm not sure why council should withhold this modest grant from a civic purse that seems elastic enough to accommodate a multitude of other works. Admittedly, the applicant is a religious organization — but surely no other such would grudge it funds from the city with which to carry out Christ's directive!

In any event, since Sally Ann has received no more than a limp handshake from the city, she must look elsewhere for needed funds.

Turning to the 1968 Community Chest statement of funds available for allotment to agencies, I find $30,727 earmarked for the Boy Scouts of Canada. This is a worthy outfit, but one whose presence on the list, let alone the size of its allotment, never ceases to surprise me.

Reduce this figure by $6,000, I suggest. Allot that sum to the Army for its Harbor Light Centre, and the principle upon which the Community Chest is based might be better served.

As for Sally Ann, she would be spared such buck-passings as rewarded her at City Hall this week.

To the young, there was no special reason to waste much thought on the old man who passed from one heart attack to another. He had been famous in his time, but that time was long past.

Among many Canadians of middle-age, however, the news that General Eisenhower had died brought a touch of personal sadness. He wasn't one of ours, but he seemed more human, somehow, than most American presidents, and his passing brought back memories of an era.

Churchill was in it, and the second Roosevelt. So was Stalin, and Montgomery of the Eighth Army, who lives on.

Eisenhower goes with a time of continuing crisis in which the British Empire — which predeceased him — and the United States were bound in a single striking force.

Monty was the Commonwealth's military hero, but though we gave him less adulation, we took comfort from the balding American with the easy grin and the stubborn trace of his country's Middle West in his speech.

"I like Ike," the campaign buttons worn in Republican lapels proclaimed. It was a sentiment shared by many on this side of the border during the years when Eisenhower served his country as president during anxious post-war years.

But as a warrior he stood taller, and it is as commander of the Allied West that he will be best remembered.

Battle of the logs begins at Dallas waterfront

Youth Monument Has Roots In Ancient British Shrine

By BOB MITCHELL

Two dozen logs and a little stamina will combine this spring and summer in the construction of a unique monument in Victoria.

Woodhenge, as it is called, will be a log prototype of that ancient and mysterious British shrine, Stonehenge. It will be built virtually cost-free because all the work will be done by volunteers affiliated with the Victoria Youth Council.

Work on the project began today as VYC members met at Clover Point to begin transporting logs from the beach to a vacant lot at Carberry Gardens, more than a mile away.

The land was made available by Bill Scott, a friend of the VYC. Successive Saturdays will see holes dug for the placement of vertical timbers, and, finally, the actual raising of the logs with the help of an A-frame.

CAN JUST LOAF

When completed it will be much more than a simplified model of the Stonehenge: it will serve as an open-air theatre, art gallery, walk-in sculpture, and laboratory for meteorological experiments.

This is probably the way ancient Britons used the Stonehenge. It will also be a spot where you can go to just loaf in tranquillity.

Woodhenge was designed by Bernard Kenny, a technician for the University of Victoria geography department.

Twelve vertical logs arranged in a circle 35 feet in diameter will rise 13 feet from the ground. Their tops will be joined by 12 horizontal logs or lintels 11 feet long.

Vertical timbers will be sunk three feet in the ground, and all logs in the structure will be roughly two feet in diameter.

IN GREAT WORKS

(The 8:13 ratio between horizontal and vertical logs is a universal constant found in nature and in great works of architecture such as the Parthenon in Athens.)

"I saw all those massive logs lying on the beach and I thought 'What the heck can we do with them?' " said Kenny.

Soon the logs crystallized in his mind into the Woodhenge, then into an idea for a VYC project.

He deplored the lack of outlets for the energy and talents of young people in Victoria.

"They're told 'go!', but they want to stay in Victoria — can you blame them? — It's a beautiful town.

"What these kids are really doing is searching for values. They're living in a value void, and when you're faced with that situation you can do one of two things: you can either create new values or you can go back to basic values.

BASIC VALUES

"Building something like Woodhenge represents a return to basic values."

Worship of the sun is one of the basic values. Each vertical log in the Woodhenge will be named after a sign of the zodiac, and anyone, no matter when he was born, will be able to relate to the structure.

With help from Dr. E. Harvey Richardson of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory the VYC will later use parts of the Woodhenge to make a sundial.

Woodhenge is not a new idea. Remnants of 30 log structures thought to be prototypes of Stonehenge have been discovered in southern England. They were apparently built with logs that floated across the Atlantic Ocean from North America somewhere between 10,000 and 3,000 B.C., Kenny said.

"If they were able to lift those heavy logs without any mechanized equipment then there's no reason why we can't do it on a smaller scale."

SUIT CLIMATE, CONDITIONS

Made-to-Order Animals Due

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Man will create animals which don't exist today, within 10 years.

The prediction was made Friday by Dr. Ian McTaggart Cowan, dean of graduate studies, University of British Columbia, at the annual convention of the Northwest Wildlife Society meeting at the Provincial Museum.

Cowan, one of the world's leading wildlife biologists, said the new animals might not look much different but they will have different capabilities.

As an example, he said, Canada would be interested in creating a meat-producing animal which could withstand the rugged climate of the north.

★ ★ ★

"At present the cariboo is one such animal," he said, "but a far better type might be brought into being by modifying some of the existing animals we have learned to live with."

New animals would be created by grafting genes to the chromosomes of other animals, he said.

Biochemists had reached the stage where they understood how genes worked, but the mechanics or practical application of using them to create animals had yet to be determined, he said.

"In 10 years they will have found the solution," he stated.

Cowan raised the question of creating animals in stressing the need to preserve rare and vanishing forms of wildlife.

★ ★ ★

Vancouver Island and islands along the B.C. coast had 49 species and sub-species of animals which were not to be found elsewhere in North America, he said.

"It's our responsibility to see that these animals survive."

Some of the animals listed as unique to B.C. coast islands were the Queen Charlotte deer, a species of woodpecker, a weasel, a marmot, about 10 kinds of white-footed mice and a number of shrews.

The Vancouver Island wolf, wolverine, marmot and the peregrine falcon in the Queen Charlotte Islands were endangered or rare animals, he said.

Church Split Looms In Sunday Sport Vote

Petitions Likely In City Theatres

A campaign for Sunday paid-admission sports and movies is considered a certainty in Victoria this year.

And it appeared likely the issue will split some local church groups.

The stage was set for the controversy in the B.C. legislature Friday when a bill to permit Sunday sport and entertainment was given final reading.

When the bill was introduced Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria said he favored an open vote in December. He said the question would be broached to a council committee and then to full council.

Although Greater Victoria Sports Council spokesmen were not available today, sporting circles generally predicted a campaign for a yes vote.

Hockey, baseball, football and soccer games are common now on Sundays but with a silver collection only.

Two local movie managers, Jack Armstrong of the Odeon group and Martin Cave of Famous Players, both said it is almost certain their companies will take part in a drive for Sunday movies.

Both said that in Vancouver, where movies have been legal on Sundays for years (Vancouver has its own charter and did not require to wait for the bill amending the Municipal Act), the experience has been good.

Sunday movies have proven popular and have been well attended. Theatres in Vancouver, when a similar controversy was rampant there, gathered petitions from theatre-goers.

They were instrumental in obtaining a yes-vote in excess of 60 per cent, which will be required by law here.

It is in church circles that experience has shown the hard core opposition is centred — but some Victoria churchmen today indicated a liberal outlook unknown a few years ago.

REV. GRAHAME BAKER
. . . not personally opposed

Canon Grahame Baker, chairman of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, said today, "I imagine there will be a strong reaction. There is such a wide range of opinion."

He could not predict the strength of opposition at this time.

But speaking personally, he said, "If a person worships on the Sabbath and then finds recreation, this is fine."

Avoid Making People Work

He added he believed there is nothing wrong in Sunday sports but every attempt should be made to avoid making people work on Sunday.

Dan Webster, chairman of the local committee of the Christian Businessmen's International, was staunchly against any commercialism on Sunday. He thought his organization should take a firm position for a no-vote.

He said he believed Frank Hunter, long-time city clerk in Victoria and recent political candidate, "would be able to give us good leadership."

Hunter said he would be willing to work for such a campaign.

"I'm definitely against it. We should recognize the Sabbath for what it is. An open Sunday in sports and entertainment will only contribute to our degredation."

The new bishop of the Anglican diocese of British Columbia (Vancouver Island and the Islands) Bishop John Ogle Anderson said he personally would not oppose relaxation of Sunday blue laws.

"You can't legislate people into church," he said, speaking from Winnipeg.

"We have Sunday sport and Sunday movies in Manitoba and I see no objection to them. Certainly they haven't affected church attendance.

"People who want to go to church will go regardless — and they may see a game or a show before or after.

"Why should people be able to attend symphony concerts on a Sunday afternoon, when film fans are denied their kind of entertainment?"

(In Victoria, civic authorities have for years been looking the other way while symphony concerts charged admissions contrary to existing legislation.)

"Does this imply that music is more sacred than the film? Surely this is a matter of individual taste," said the bishop.

"Then there is the question of social discrimination.

"People with money can get Sunday sport any time they want it—skiing in the mountains, golfing, horse-riding. Who is to say that golfing or horse-riding are more sacred than watching a baseball game?

"Some say commercial sport means employing people on Sundays. But surely people are employed at golf clubs, skiing lodges, hotels and horse-riding academies."

Rev. John Moore, minister of Central Baptist Church, Victoria, and recently minister of the famous Tent Hall in Glasgow, said:

"We would certainly oppose Sunday sport and Sunday shows. Unfortunately the desire for these things is evidence of the secularization of society today and the secularization of Sunday.

"It is very regrettable that people feel they cannot go without being amused one day a week."

FLAGS DIP FOR IKE

Flags on all British Columbia government buildings will fly at half staff Monday in honor of former president Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Premier Bennett said:

"He was a great man in fighting for the defence of the free world and a great man for peace as well. . . .

" 'I Like Ike' was not just a slogan; it was really genuine and from the heart, irrespective of party."

PCB Ruling May Unravel Controversy

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A major sewage disposal application may prove to be the key to unravelling the sewage disposal controversy.

Earlier this week, after a policy statement was issued by the Pollution Control Board, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said he is "quite confident" local municialities can dump raw sewage into the sea off beaches not declared a recreational area.

But Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, whose department issues certificates for disposal, said Greater Victoria will have to plan primary treatment plants and no increase in the amount of raw sewage will be permitted in fresh or salt water between Campbell River and Sooke.

MACAULAY POINT

The issue has boiled down to whether the sewage should run through a treatment plant prior to disposal, or whether comminution (shredding) and disposal, at a good depth and length and with tidal action, will acieve the same result.

The issue should be solved, or at least indications given, when the Pollution Control Board makes a ruling on a four-month-old application by the Capital Regional District for extension and rebuilding of Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

There has been no word from the PCB since the application was made last Nov. 29.

The district, responsible for a new system of trunk sewers and outfalls, wants to extend the Macaulay outfall from the beach to 4,800 feet from shore. No treatment plant was included in the application.

The city of Victoria earlier applied to extend its Clover Point outfall to 1,200 feet, again with comminution but no treatment plant.

But city engineer James Garnett said it was not proposed to do the work until next year, there would be more tidal studies in the spring and the PCB was not holding up the 15-month-old application.

★

POLLUTION POLICY

A declaration of pollution control policy, based on the consensus of the restructured British Columbia Pollution Control Board, issued by F. S. McKinnon, chairman of the board, includes these points:

1. That discharge of untreated domestic sewage to enclosed or confined bodies of salt water be prohibited where there is any doubt as to the adequacy of the flushing effect of the tide.

2. That the discharge of untreated domestic sewage to any body of fresh water such as a lake, a river, or a tributary to a river, be prohibited.

3. That, regardless of the flushing action or assimilative capacity of salt water bodies, the discharge of untreated domestic sewage be prohibited in any area designated by order as a recreational water or beach area.

4. That, insofar as health matters are concerned, the health department is to set quality standards of the receiving waters to protect the public health and the Pollution Control Branch will ensure that any permit issued contains prescribed effluent standards to ensure compliance with the health department standards.

5. That, where a sampling program is to be undertaken in any area where there is a matter of health significance, it shall be deemed expedient that such a program shall undertake to co-ordinate the respective interests of the health department and the Pollution Control Branch in a single joint effort.

These policy declarations are carried out through the issue of control permits. Regulations governing procedures are summarized to encourage a better public understanding of the responsibilities involved.

F. S. McKINNON
. . . chairman

● As already stated, under the Pollution Control Act it is necessary that a permit be obtained to discharge waste. The details of the procedure to be followed in obtaining a permit are set out in the regulations pertaining to the Act.

● These regulations require that, upon receipt of an application, the director of pollution control forward copies to the various government departments such as health, water resources and recreation and conservation, which are directly concerned in pollution control activities. This requirement has been established to ensure that the interests of these agencies on behalf of the public are co-ordinated in any permit issued.

● It is the responsibility of the Pollution Control Board to incorporate the various control requirements into a single permit. Health determines the water quality standards which must be met from a health standpoint. Recreation and conservation prescribe standards for fish, wildlife and recreation. These examples serve to indicate the individual responsibilities of affected departments and agencies.

● The regulations also provide that any person who considers his rights would be affected by either the issuance or non-issuance of a permit may, within 30 days, present objections to the director of pollution control.

NLF Sounds Out Saigon on Post-War Role

By DAVID HOFFMAN

SAIGON (WP) — The National Liberation Front (NLF) has asked United States diplomats to sound out the Saigon government on what role the NLF might play in postwar South Vietnamese politics, it was reported here.

According to South Vietnamese government sources, the NLF is insisting that the concept and methodology of post-war elections be agreed to before the Front will discuss any other political questions with the Saigon government. Sources did not disclose how the NLF position was communicated to South Vietnamese officials here.

The Front's political future presumably would be discussed in Paris, during the private bargaining sessions suggested Tuesday by South Vietnam's president Nguyen Van Thieu. Without laying down a single precondition, Thieu declared South Vietnam's readiness to engage in secret talks with NLF and Hanoi representatives. But the Communists have not yet responded, he said.

VOTE FOR COMMUNISTS?

Those familiar said the NLF's discreet inquiry raised at least the following questions:

Under what circumstances would the Saigon government agree to Communist candidates in post-war elections? Could South Vietnamese citizens vote freely for Communist candidates? At what level would Communists be excluded from the political process?

Washington and Saigon reportedly agree on the general principle of "one man, one vote." But they interpret the principle differently. To Saigon, one man is one non-communist — a distinction few U.S. diplomats are prepared to make.

As to the NLF's role in post-war elections, Thieu said Tuesday it would have to dissolve itself "and become another political party." Repeatedly he declared that a Communist party "as such" would never be tolerated by the Saigon government.

WESTERN STYLE

But he implied that known members of the Front would not necessarily be excluded from the political progress, "provided they agree not to practise any Communist ideology." In justifying that stand, Thieu cited South Vietnam's western-style constitution which contains the following clause:

"The Republic of Vietnam opposes communism in any form. Every activity designed to publicize or carry out communism is prohibited."

South Vietnamese hawks generally construed Thieu's declared readiness to talk privately with the Communists as a unilateral concession. But other observers voted that Thieu did not simultaneously relax terms the NLF must meet to participate in post-war politics here. Throughout last year and this, Saigon politicians have insisted on at least the following:

The Front must dissolve itself. Members must lay down their arms. Former communists must pledge allegiance to the government of South Vietnam. No form of coalition government will be tolerated.

Despite Saigon's consistently tough terms, ranking U.S. diplomats see within them the seeds of compromise. Under one compromise being proposed, the Front would change its name and check military activity of the Viet Cong. As its quid pro quo, Saigon would permit known communists to run for office.

RUN-OFF ELECTION

In 1971 — when the next national election is scheduled — or perhaps even earlier, communist and non-Communist candidates would compete at the polls. Since a profusion of non-communist candidates would be expected, the one collecting a plurality would be matched against the communist in a run-off election.

U.S. analysts believe that a majority of South Vietnamese would vote against the Communist candidate if the electoral system was structured to provide a clear cut, either-or choice. In making that judgment, they emphasize that a large fraction of the vote would be against the Communist, not for the non-Communist.

But most Vietnamese seem to believe that Thieu's surprise declaration Tuesday was largely prompted by American pressure.

Another theory suggests that Thieu, in conjunction with the Americans, or perhaps at their urging, switched tactics, instead of repeatedly raising the possibility of U.S. troop withdrawals, apparently to pacify U.S. public opinion, Thieu switched to suggesting secret talks, quite possibly for the same purpose.

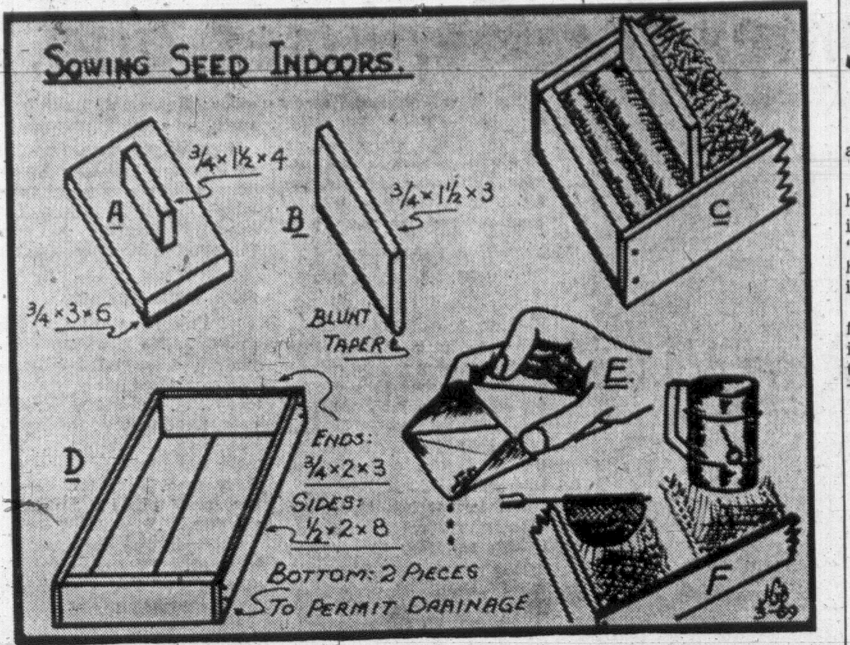
Quizzing The Gardener

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. Very few of the bulbs I put into porch boxes last fall are coming up. Does this mean there will be no flowers, or will there by any next year if I leave them in?—T.T.D., Cobble Hill.

A. I'm afraid bulb losses in small planters and tubs will be high this season. The soil in these small areas froze solid and then thawed with snow and rain soaking in, followed by freezing.

These will not flower, since there are really no bulbs remaining now.



Failure in Plant Raising Leads Often to Success

By JACK BEASTALL

To the beginner there is nothing so frustrating as failure, yet failure is experience and experience leads to success.

Jack

Many plants are raised from seed but few beginners have success until experience has been gained by trial and error.

This week's article, with drawings to clarify a few points, is based on 25 years of raising plants successfully from seed.

The amateur gardener is often satisfied when only a few seeds germinate and grow, but the commercial grower expects 101 plants from every 100 seeds he sows.

Therefore the procedure outlined here is a modified commercial method.

The box in which seed is germinated is shown at (D). For the home gardener it is advisable to keep these boxes on the small side. Dimensions shown will hold 300 or 400 seeds for germinating, ample for the average home garden.

★ ★ ★

Sow only one kind of seed to a box, whether all the space is used or not. Different kinds, even different varieties of the same kind, have different periods of germination.

It is disastrous to have some seedlings sprouted and needing cooler, lighter conditions while other seeds still require covering and warmth.

Pile the seedbox full of soil mixture and slide a piece of lath along the top edge, to remove the excess.

Tips for The Home Gardener

Press the soil firmly into the four corners with the fingers, then use the row marker (B) to firm it along sides and ends.

Level the surface and firm it gently with soil tamper (A). When firmed, soil level should not be more than one-quarter inch below top edge of seed box. If lower, add more soil and press again.

This level is important. When soil is too low, seedlings tend to stretch to light and become thin white threads instead of two sturdy green leaves right at soil level.

It is easier to handle seedlings, and tell them from weeds, when seed is sown in rows about one inch apart.

The row marker (B) is used to make depressions (or seed drills) one inch apart and one-eighth to one-quarter inch deep. Depth always depends on size of the seed, and drills are made crossways of the seed box. See detail(C).

★ ★ ★

To sow fine seed one by one is something most gardeners find difficult, but it can be done with the simple aid of the seed packet. Carefully lift the gummed flap and fold it back, then take the packet in the right hand as shown in detail (E). Squeeze gently and the flap will form a spout.

When held at correct angle and tapped sharply with the first finger, seeds move down the spout and fall one by one into the drills.

Seeds germinated indoors need little soil cover. In stores run by various charities there are old flour sifters and kitchen strainers that can be purchased for a few cents (detail F).

Using the soil mixture, or sand, put some through the sifter or strainer and just cover the seed. Then gently press with the soil tamper (A).

Put the seed box in a container of water until moisture is just visible darkening the surface of the soil. Drain well, cover with a piece of glass and a double thickness of newspaper and put into a warm place.

Turn the glass first thing every morning and again at mid afternoon so that condensation does not form into drops and fall on the seedlings.

As soon as white dots are showing in the seed rows, remove paper and put box into good light (not sun). As the dots become recognizable as seedlings remove glass or the seedlings will spindle within a few hours.

WEEK'S WORK

Rose pruning can be completed in all areas.

Cut back lavenders which have been badly winter damaged. They may recover from growths lower on stems.

Hardy border fuchsias with the small flowers need cutting to just about ground level. Also leycesteria, the flowering nutmeg.

Stamps Span All Ideas

TORONTO (CP) — What's in a stamp?

Douglas Patrick, for 20 years host of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.'s Stamp Club, says "there's almost no subject that hasn't been covered by stamp issues."

He has been collecting stamps for 53 years and has been fielding all sorts of questions—sometimes with help from his library—every week on his program, Assignment Stamps.

Besides acting as host on the program, Mr. Patrick writes a weekly stamp column, attends stamp shows throughout North America and, with his wife Mary, has published six books on his pet subject.

For him, Assignment Stamps is not work in the sense that the word is often used. First and foremost, it's a fascinating hobby, and one that has earned him international recognition. He says membership of the CBC Stamp Club has passed 60,000 and is spread over more than 60 countries. It is almost equally divided between children and adults, and between males and females.

What's in a stamp?

"Philately," says Mr. Patrick, "covers almost every field of human endeavor."

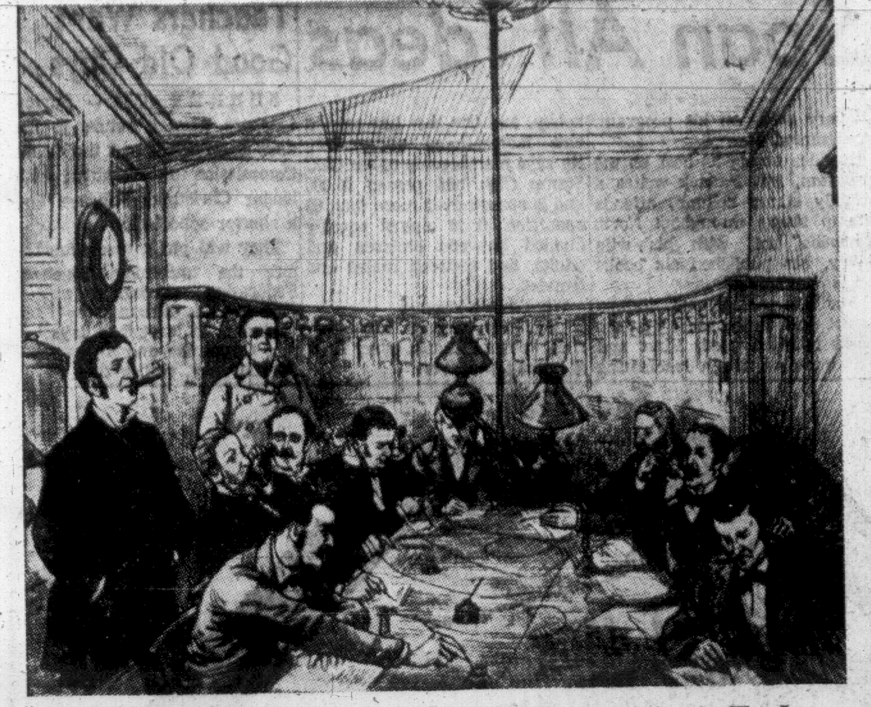
Hard Times for Geniuses and Pioneers



EVEN MONTREAL'S supposedly cynical reporters were impressed as they tested Bell's telephone in this illustration appearing in The Inventors.

SAUCY SIREN of 1893 models her bathing costume at the popular Lake of the Woods in picture from The Pioneers.

The Inventors; Great Ideas in Canadian Enterprise, by J. J. Brown, and The Pioneers; The Picture History of Canadian Settlement, introduction by J. M. S. Careless. McClelland and Stewart, $4.95 each.

Reviewed by R. G. LAWRENCE

Two volumes in the Canadian Illustrated Library have come to hand at the same time, providing a good excuse to commend the publishers for the entire series, which began in 1966 as the Canadian Centennial Library; conjointly the two series now total 18 volumes.

The format has invariably been a successful one, although naturally the subject matter that excites one reader may be of limited interest to another. (My favorite is Great Canadian Painting, but Canadian Sports Stories didn't hit me at all.)

This series, which has so astutely combined succinct text with generous quantities of sketches, engravings, photographs, and paintings (all within about 150 pages per book) has made Canadians much more conscious of many aspects of their country.

FAIRLY SPECIALIZED

The Inventors is a fairly specialized volume; it will be of interest to readers from the world of business and manufacturing, and, obviously, to ambitious inventors.

One learns with considerable pride about the variety of Canadian contributions to technology — in the areas of aircraft development, radar, hydrofoils, atomic energy, telephones, phonographs, farm implements and hundreds of other pieces of machinery (many of them illustrated).

However, the impressive list of inventors and their inventions is not the principal point which this book makes. The repeated message is concentrated in stinging excerpts like these:

SLUG-LIKE GROWTH

"Canada's slug-like growth . . .No Canadian company was interested in gambling on these ideas, so that today . . . By and large, our past treatment of inventors has been contemptible . . . If there is a lesson in this book, it is that Canadians rarely recognize their inventive geniuses . . ."

Although The Inventors is interesting (if frustrating), I reserve my larger enthusiasm for The Pioneers.

I know of no other book of comparable price and size that captures so effectively the Canadian past and brings it once more to life.

The concise essays by six Canadian historians (among them J. M. S. Careless, a visiting professor at the University of Victoria) are admirable in their analysis of the settlement of the major areas of Canada, but it is the wonderful collection of old sketches, reproductions of paintings, and photographs from many periods that will send a reader back to this book repeatedly.

SHABBY LIFE

No one can forget the noncommittal immigrant faces photographed in railway stations, the communities of unpainted square houses surrounded by stumps, the modern pictures of reconstructed pioneer villages (Upper Canada Village, Black Creek, and Ste. Marie-among-the-Hurons, all in Ontario), the bygones (furniture, implements, toys, costumes) the forbidding forests, the rivers, and the reproductions of seven Krieghoff paintings.

The photos reveal the isolation, the hardship, the shabbiness of pioneer life. Yet the cameras caught moments of vivacity and pleasure, too.

Here are two pieces of Canadiana to be recommended for quite different reasons, with The Pioneers particularly urged for parents, to whom their own pioneering ancestors may be now a legend, who would give their children some knowledge in attractive form of what Canada once was.

Canada's Cultures Blended In Hell-Fire Wittiness

THE MAGIC FIDDLER AND OTHER LEGENDS OF FRENCH CANADA, text by Claude Aubry, graphics by Saul Field. Peter Martin Associates Limited. LE VIOLON MAGIQUE, Les Editions de Deux Rives. $20.

Reviewed by Ann Saddlemyer.

It is not often that a modern book is pleasing in its entirety—satisfying in its text, exciting in design, beautiful in print and illustration.

The Magic Fiddler and Other Legends of French Canada is an artistic project in other ways also. Conceived out of an artist's designs, enhanced by witty offbeat versions of national legends, embellished by the first Canadian typeface, and published simultaneously in both French and English, this handsome book represents the smooth rich blend of Canada's two cultures without either violence or incendiarism.

Except, of course, in the tales themselves, where both fire and damnation are despatched with rapidity by those heroic figures, the Devil, the Black Robe and the Fiddler.

It all began with the artist. Saul Field, a Montreal-born printmaker and lithographer, began collecting French-Canadian legends for a portfolio of prints.

Two libraries then entered the picture. The chief librarian of the Toronto public libraries suggested the prints form the basis of a book, and the publishers in turn commissioned the director of the Ottawa public library, Claude Aubry, to provide the text.

Folklorist Dr. Marius Barbeau provided a preface and some of the original research; the late Carl Dair conceived the basic design and format and contributed his newly-designed typeface, Cartier.

The Canada Council provided a grant for the English translation by Alice Kane, and two firms co-operated in the publication.

Aubry is noted for his children's books, but the 10 tales of The Magic Fiddler are adult in style and matter. We are constantly reminded that legends are old hat in this modern, tongue-in-cheek age: "Happiness so perfect," the author comments of the lovers of Perce Rock, "cannot endure, especially in a legend."

The tales are also, however, revealing: "Certainly, in our legends the Devil seems to have been an omnipresent personage among French-Canadians, doubtless constituting in their eyes, along with the English and the clergy, a three-pronged fork, the trident of Neptune itself. Now you see why our forebears were unhappy and had so many children."

WITCH CANOE

Various types of legends are represented in the collection—tales of the Iroquois, the lumber camps, well-known place names, but most interesting of all, tales of the supernatural.

The Devil struggles with the Blacksmith Fiddler for possession of the magic fiddle and plays the villagers hellward on Ash Wednesday; the witch canoe transports lonely lumberjacks through the clouds to a New Year's celebration; the werewolf attacks the lonely miller; the priest rescues Rose Latulipoe from the Black Stranger; the Great Serpent enchants an entire Huron village.

Saul Field's 10 vivid graphics, reproduced here in five colors, retain the excitement of the original engravings, but convey equally with the text the special qualities of the French-Canadian legends on which they are based.

Both artists have done their research well, and have together produced a book for the most demanding art collector and chauvinistic bibliophile to possess with pride.

Petty Characters In a Nothing Book

THE MILITARY PHILOSOPHERS, by Anthony Powell. Heinemann, 244 pp. $4.95.

This is the ninth sequence in Anthony Powell's continuing novel A Dance to the Music of Time. The advantage of the roman flueve is that it allows the author space and leisure. Part of the atmosphere of Powell's world derives from this rambling quality. He creates the impression of an enclosed, self-absorbed society caught up in its own petty squabbles and oblivious to the greater storms on the outside.

The disadvantage of Powell's design is that this particular book lacks urgency and its world has become too little. One's credibility begins to strain when one finds the same group of characters interlocking around Nicholas Jenkins in the same old way.

Mr. Powell is in danger of becoming a pointilliste, spinning out precise and controlled but airy nothings. In the course of this book, he brings Jenkins to the end of the Second World War, but there is very little that really happens.

As a reflection of a type of war, Powell captures the time-consuming sterility of military bureaucracy, but his canvas is too limited to provide an enduring picture of a particular time in our recent history. The upper classes seem cut off from any real action. Perhaps this is the point, but as a consequence the book has very little to say to the present generation either.

One hopes that now Jenkins has reached peacetime he will again enter the main current of English life. But as an admirer of the earlier books in the series, I confess myself disappointed with this one and a trifle apprehensive about the success of the next.—A. W. J.

A Clergyman Talks Religion To Death

CONTEND WITH HORSES, by Grace Irwin, McLelland and Stewart, $6.95.

Reviewed by Lionel Adey

The hero of this novel is a Toronto clergyman, Andrew Connington, who has lost his wife. He struggles on despite his bereavement, the estrangement of a son badly smitten with the Oedipus complex, and the activities of modernists busy selling the pass to the enemies of the faith.

The plot contains two elements, the vain attempt of a rich widow to tempt him into marriage, and the successful attempt by Andrew and his daughter to stop the son marrying a Roman Catholic. There are, however, many events, of which the most the unscrupulous female lawyer whom Andrew warns of divine judgment for having had a rich old lady declared insane, and who promptly drops dead of thrombosis.

TEDIOUS CHATTERBOX

For the most part, Contend with Horses might be described as a continuous interior monologue by an intellectual isolated by his religious orthodoxy from all but the faithful few who recognize his sincerity and devotion.

One sympathizes profoundly with his predicament, but inwardly he is such a chatterbox that long stretches of the book are insufferably tedious.

Until someone involves him in social action, he seems able to think of nothing but religion and how to present it to woolly-minded skeptics who do not know their facts and will not listen while he explains them. I can quite understand how he talked that lawyer to death.

Though many of the author's reflections upon religion in the modern world are of value, and though there are some quite absorbing scenes, mostly domestic, Contend with Horses cannot be commended as a novel. It is the fifth in a series and ought surely to be the last.

Rights of Man

LEVIATHAN, by Thomas Hobbes. 729 pp. $2.15.

This is a handsomely produced edition of a work which analyses the rights of man and the sciencce of power. These problems are crucial to our own century, too, and this document of the English Civil War makes a timely addition to the Pelican classics series. The introduction by the editor, C. B. MacPherson, is comprehensive and admirable.

It's Enough To Make One Jump a Plane

GRAND TOUR TODAY, by William Sansom. Clarke, Irwin and Co. 206 pp. $6.

Every now and then a truly significant travel book comes along: a book that is more than the ubiquitous travellers' aid and that succeds in capturing the very flavor of a country. William Sansom's Grand Tour Today is just such a book.

The same eye for detail that he shows in his novels enables him to recreate the atmosphere of a particular place in half a page. He uses details sparingly, but they bring us to the core of a city or a landscape: "But, above all, Athens is a town of straight lines."

"So the black womb of the gasworks assuages; as do the rounded limousines, the curved people, the green half-circles of the fanning acacias. But against these modifications there rises a further and most formidable reinforcement of the rectangle — the Greek capital letter. It is everywhere. . . ."

Reading the book, one finds oneself nodding in agreement with his perceptions or learns to see familiar places through new eyes.

Mr. Sansom gives us a quick journey through a dozen or so countries as he searches, in this contemporary grand tour, for the differences that modern industrial life has imposed on Europe in the last 10 years. He is a witty and cosmopolitan guide without being superficial or patronizing. He made me want to rush out to the nearest airliner, and for the seasoned globe-trotter or the arm-chair traveller the book will be a real delight. — A.W.J.

The Jewish Mama Debunked in Four-Letter Words

Portnoy's Complaint, by Philip Roth. Random House. 274 pages. $8.50.

Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins

Somewhere in the course of this outrageously funny monologue, Portnoy explains how one of his more proper girlfriends reacted to his perverse sexuality. Many readers will certainly ask the same sort of questions about the book itself. "Why, she asked so plaintively when we were alone, why had I to be so 'unattractive?' What on earth had I 'proved?' 'Why did you have to be so pus-y like that? It was so uncalled for.' Pus-y being Debutante for disagreeable."

Portnoy's Complaint is undoubtedly "disagreeable" in places, but the uncompromising earthiness of the language is essential to the way Philip Roth debunks the cliches of the American psychological novel, of Freudian analysis itself, and of the surface folksiness of the comic Jewish family.

Mix-Up of Sexes

The result is a scorching tour de force which, despite its bizarre subject matter, is unflinching in its truth.

Alexander Portnoy is 33, a bachelor and, some would say, a success. All his life he has been concerned over the oppression of racial minorities, and he now finds himself assistant commissioner to the New York Commission on Human Opportunity. Yet beneath his social conscience, the "Great Humanitarian" is crippled by his compulsion to break out from the values of his middle-class Jewish upbringing.

As he tells it, stretched out on the couch of his analyst, Dr. Spielvogel (Playfoul?), Portnoy's life-story sounds like the traditional music hall situation in which an overbearing Jewish Mama emasculates her weak little husband and dominates her sensitive and intelligent son: "if my father had only been my mother! and my mother my father! But what a mix-up of the sexes in our house!"

ROTH

. . . 'ha, ha, Myron'

Toilet Training

Mama supervises Alexander's toilet training, treats his minor disobediences as high tragedy, and stands over him with a knife whenever he refuses to eat. The only part of him that Mama can't control is his sex; she can only beat on the bathroom door in frustration, demanding to inspect the toilet bowl for signs of diarrhea, while her son obsessively masturbates and worries whether he had in fact locked the door.

If such details sound unsavory, let it be said that they are only the beginnings of Portnoy's complaint. His sexual illness takes a more savage turn in his adult life, as he relieves his passions upon the goyim whom he had been taught to fear. When he does find a Jewish girl, he is attracted to something that reminds him of a photo of his mother which he had seen in her old high school yearbook. Naturally, with a girl who stirs such memories, Porthoy fails to make it.

Yet despite the fact that Portnoy's confession is liberally sauced with four-letter words and Anglo-saxon epithets for the sexual organs, the book is not really about sex, and it is certainly not obscene. The vocabulary is savage because Roth is determined to reveal the pain behind the schmalzy comedy of life with a Jewish mama. After all, the milk-and-honey aspect of the Jewish family has been done to death.

If one were to believe someone like Sam Levenson, the good Jewish son smiles through his tears and works his way diligently to the top. Roth's version is positively visceral, a farcial King Lear: "Spring me from this role I play of the smothered son in the Jewish joke! Because it's beginning to pall a little at thirty-three! And also it hoits, you know, there is pain involved, a little human suffering is being felt, if I may take it upon myself to say so — only that's the part Sam Levenson leaves out! . . . 'Help, help, my son the doctor is drowning!' — ha, ha, ha, ha, ha, ha, only what about the pain, Myron Cohen? What about the guy who is actually drowning!"

However this may sound, there is nothing indulgent about this novel. Even though he complains, Portnoy is not allowed to revel in his pain. The very interest he shows in his own case, his penchant for giving his personal hang-up the full Freudian treatment, leads him nowhere. It is only another aspect of his unhealthy fascination for himself: "But then all the unconscious can do anyway, so Freud tells us, is want. And want! And WANT! Oh, Freud, do I know!"

Through his portrait of Alexander Portnoy, Roth leads us beyond the particularities of a Jewish household to reveal the absurdity of the modern American. Portnoy's principal girlfriend wants a home and respectability; whereas he wants her for his own degrading passions . . . and yet he hates himself for feeling that way. Portnoy is, in fact, left with nothing.

No New Gods

He has no belief in Judaism and little respect for 'his family. He knows too that his humanitarian facade is made a mockery by his sexuality which makes him treat women as objects.

And yet despite the fact that he has no faith in the old gods, he is unable to replace them with new ones, like Freud, nor can he really escape his ethnic conscience.

Once the furor over this book has died down, one should be able to see the novel as a major achievement, a stunning parody of the type of American novel in which the narrator analyses himself ad infinitum. Like all good satire, it has something positive to say in its own right. The speed and punch of the dialogue is dazzling, and the portrait of Sophie Portnoy raises a stock figure of comedy to gargantuan proportions.

Goodbye Cream For the Young

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Goodbye Cream; Polydor, 543.024; Trumpet agogo 3; James Last. Polydor 249.239.

With seasonal self-denial I have spent the last couple of days trying to bridge the generation gap by listening to Goodbye Cream with the close attention I would lavish on a classical recording.

I failed, but now at least I have an inkling of why I cannot enjoy this music and some understanding of why, at my stage in life, it is right that I shouldn't be able to.

●

Completely baffled by the popular music-making of this talented group, I asked several young listeners to help me to an appreciation of that kind of recording.

With characteristic diffident exclusiveness they tried to palm me off with vagaries and meaningless cliches like "it's really groovy", or "It turns you on." When I forced them to be more explicit this is what I learnt.

This is the music of a particular age group, as ephemeral and transitory as youth itself and is bound up with all sorts of connotations no longer within the grasp of older people.

Diamond In the Groove

The smooth big-band sounds or crazy jitterbugging blare of our youth spelled romantic evenings of dressing-up, dancing, flirting and generally being lifted out of our everyday existence. Just so the Cream recordings suggest the flashing psychedelic lights, stunning engulfing volumes of sound and the intoxicating rhythms of primal dancing spasms of the modern Palais-ago-go to younger listeners.

●

So much more familiar with teasing dissonance in music, these young people demand "strangeness" of instrumentation.

In this respect the Cream are supreme for their discs are filled with a variety of unusual, often amplified, sometimes dissonant, electronically distorted sounds.

In describing the effect of such music on her, one young lady explained, "It isn't really just music, it's more like sound-effects that build up a whole roomful of mood you can lose yourself in."

Though she admitted that the five-minute selections would not stand up to listening except as a background, another girl insisted that the beat was essential; "You have to be able to dance to it if you want to," she announced.

"But it hasn't any shape or tune" I ventured.

"There is a sort of tune" she countered, "and who needs a tune anyway?" And thus melody, one of the most important requirements in my sort of music was summarily dismissed.

Careful listening will winkle out a variety of instrumental treatment and the sort of shape found in early jazz before its wild improvisations were smoothed to meet the demands of the commercial market.

●

The words seem to contain gems of youthful philosophy but as very few are audible, they cannot be essential.

For instance, no matter how hard I listened nor how many times they reiterated the phrase, I couldn't be sure whether the singers were glad because they were glad or sad or mad or just bad.

Foolishly, as I discovered, I had thought that the more moderate trumpet agogo series would be equally acceptable to young and more mature listeners alike.

Despite their uncontrollably tapping feet and twitching ears, my young friends hooted at the idea of dancing to such a beat.

James Last's presentation of many old and familiar songs revved up with new emphasis, enhancing descants and a warmed-up beat, sounded gay and pleasant to my old-fashioned ears.

●

Agreeing that this record was better than Bach and Mozart and all that stuff, my young antagonists scornfully pointed out that there was nothing strange or queer-sounding in the instrumentation.

The sweet-toned trumpet, because recognizable as a trumpet, just didn't please them so at this point I gave up.

They don't need a tune, the sound-effects are to be experienced rather than listened to, an instrument is not worth listening to unless it is distorted out of all recognition and above all the beat must be loud and clear and urge them to dance.

Having done my penance and tried my hardest I gladly say goodbye to The Cream and sink back to the restfulness of a lively samba played with seemly sprightliness by Trumpets agogo.

Schools' Orchestra Salutes Festival

A concert saluting the 1969 Victoria Music Festival will be presented by Greater Victoria Schools Senior Symphony Orchestra and soloists, Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at McPherson Playhouse.

The soloists, many of whom have been bursary winners and class toppers in past festivals, are Geoff Pearce, French horn; Roderick Booth, Geoff Cragg, Ronald Comber and John Rigby, violin; Chris Salm, piccolo and Bruce Milne, trumpet.

The orchestra, which will be conducted by Thomas Tucker, will play the Ormandy transcription of Handel's Concerto for Orchestra, Beethoven's Egmont Overture, Leroy Anderson's adaptation of Bluebells of Scotland, Variations on a Southern Mountain Tune by Walter Watson, and Enesco's Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1.

Mrs. D. Berringer, president of the Music Festival Association, will introduce the program.

Victoria Artist Known Everywhere

TORONTO (CP) — The prints of Pat Martin Bates of Victoria are known around the world.

When Mrs. Bates went to Yugoslavia last summer one artist flung his arms around her in ecstatic recognition. He had seen her work in the seventh Yugoslavian print biennial show in 1967.

Mention her name in Chile, Argentina, Poland and Japan and the same reaction will come from that ingrown circle—the international printmakers.

Three prints from her exhibition here have been sent by the National Gallery of Canada to the sixth print biennial show of Japan. Mrs. Bates was the only Canadian printmaker chosen to represent Canada.

NOT A GIMMICK

She said in an interview that the limitation of color—black, white, silver—in her series is not a gimmicky insistence. It was an expression of the ancient mysteries of the sun, moon, earth.

But she agreed her sensitivity to surface may have been shaped in childhood when she would play dominoes for hours with a blind great-aunt. The markings on each piece were built up to help the fingers of the blind.

Mrs. Bates has studied and taught continuously since her graduation in 1957 from the Academie Royale des Beaux Arts in Belgium.

CUBES DANGLE

The technical quality of her work excited fellow-printmakers, many of whom she met last year while travelling in Europe on a senior Canada Council grant.

In her current collection she has experimented with silk screen on plexiglass. Sometimes the cubes dangle from the ceiling or stand free on pedestals.

In one large revolving cube of black-sprayed plexiglass an inner light blinks intermittently through tiny perforations in the silver silk screen circles.

Of her work, which has been included in major world print shows since 1963, Mrs. Bates said she naturally prefers glass.

"But I found glass was so breakable and so hard to send around to shows, and plexiglass gives me some unusual relections and effects which glass could never do."

Lemmon Movie To Stop Time

Jack Lemmon who is no stranger to comedy, is adding the element of fantasy to his next movie. It's called "The Girl, The Gold Watch and Everything," and is based on John D. McDonald's 1963 novel about a timid fellow who inherits a magic watch that can stop time at the owner's behest.

'I Have to Disturb,' Says Film Director

LONDON (AP) — Roman Polanski, director of the controversial witchcraft film Rosemary's Baby, gave one of his long thoughtful looks and said:

"I have to disturb. I have to make people question themselves."

Polanski, 35, said he thought the film, starring Mia Farrow, as "the perfect thriller."

The Polish-born director said he was handed the story as soon as he reached Hollywood.

"They said, 'Read it tonight.' I thought I'd read it the next morning. I was exhausted after a long journey. But I was curious to see what it was about.

"I didn't stop reading it until 4 a.m. I found it thrilling and fascinating material for a film. Immediately I went to London and wrote a script and two months later we started production."

The action was typical of this small energetic man with a quicksilver brain.

CENSORS CUT FILM

He said he was staggered when the film—his first Hollywood movie—ran into trouble with the British censors.

They cut 15 seconds from the film in a scene where Mia Farrow is raped by a devil figure.

Why did they do it?

"Apparently it belonged to 'kinky' sex," Polanski said with a laugh.

"I heard that Britain is quite 'kinky' in this area. You must understand my astonishment when I heard they were going to cut it here when the film had no problems in other countries, including Italy, Latin America and the United States."

The film, which centres on a witchcraft cult in a New York apartment house, fits in nicely with Polanski's philosophy of shaking people out of rigid beliefs.

His favorite word in conversation seems to be "Why?" Friends are disconcerted by his habit of greeting statements of the obvious with the word.

"Some people don't even know the word 'why' existed," he snorted.

"Healthy doubt. That's what 'Rosemary's Baby' is about," he said. "The older I grow, the less certain I am of things.

"So I show people something so obviously impossible as witchcraft. And I say to them, 'Are you certain it is not true?' Very often, you know, we are the victims of illusion. Things are not always what they appear to be."

BREAK TABOOS

Polanski regards breaking taboos as a duty. "A taboo is the result of superstition, and that's a thing which causes the greatest unhappiness, and cruelty, in society," he said.

"Sex is a taboo. But the genesis of it is religion. What really fixes us is religion."

NBC Creates New James Dean

By AL FORREST

This week NBC unveiled Along Came Bronson, a feature movie that serves as the pilot for a new fall series.

Bronson is a young man who quits his job to roar around the United States on his motorcycle looking for the meaning of life.

Apparently the meaning of life is riding a faster motorcycle, because it eludes him.

In any case, the movie was only mildly interesting and the series promises to be a bore.

On assumes that the planning sessions went something like this:

"This new fall series . . . we need some outdoor action thing with cars or something. You know . . . like Route 66."

"Yeah, but let's change it a bit. No sports car. Let's take our hero . . . what's his name? . . . Bronson? Right. Put Bronson on a motorcycle."

"Hey, I'm getting something. Let's have him roam the country . . . you know . . . a western on wheels. . . ."

"Great! Great! And he rescues beautiful maidens. . . ."

". . . Only they're Hippie types, right? They've got lots of hair and hang-ups."

"But Bronson can't get married. That slows it down too much."

"Hey, I'm getting something. He rescues the girl and then rides off into the sunset alone."

"At the end instead of kissing the girl, he kisses the motorcycle?"

"Exactly. That cycle means more to him than. . ."

"I was kidding. . . ."

"I'm not. It doesn't sing to me unless he's in love with that cycle."

"Okay, he's in love, he's in love. The important thing is what sort of man is Bronson? Hell's Angels? Rock Hudson? Jerry Lewis?"

"I'm getting something. He's a lonely kid with deep problems. . . ."

". . . in love with his motorcycle. . . ."

". . . with deep problems and he mumbles in an appealing sort of way . . ."

". . . just a minute . . ."

". . . all quiet and shy. . . ."

". . . hold it Fred . . ."

". . . shy but deep down tough but he talks with his head down . . ."

". . . no you don't, Fred. . . ."

". . . with his head down and his eyes half-shut but he's hell on wheels and everybody loves him and . . ."

"You can't do it, Fred. Nobody will buy the resurrection of James Dean."

"Let it happen to me . . . Michael Parks . . . Dean . . . I like the way it's talking to me, Fred . . ."

"It's a natural . . . the cycle . . . the loneliness . . ."

"But his hang-ups. . . ."

"So he loves his motorcycle . . ."

"Well, everybody's got to love somebody."

Guest Maestro For Program Of Slavic Music

The beauty of Slavonic music interpreted by a Slavic conductor, adds still another fresh experience to a fine season for Victoria Symphony goers.

Sunday's and Monday's concerts at the Royal Theatre will bring the 1968-69 series to an end on what will no doubt prove to be an exciting level.

Prominent Cechoslovakia conductor, Dr. Otakar Trhlik will be on the podium.

The orchestra under Dr. Trhlik will perform Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 and Smetana's lyrical From Bohemia's Woods and Fields.

Programmed also is the ever-popular "Unfinished" Symphony of Schubert.

Dr. Trhlik has been noted in Europe for his sense of style, the strength of his rhythms and sensitive details of his interpretations. He is said to display typical features of the Czech art of conducting.

While Dr. Trhlik is in Victoria, the Victoria Symphony's musical director and conductor, Laszlo Gati, is conducting concerts in Prague.

Sunday's concert begins at 3 and Monday's at 8:30 p.m.

KNOWN across Canada for his talent as a comedian, Victoria-born John Sparks returns to the home stage next week when he will star with Vancouver's Linda Sorenson in the RPA production, The Owl and the Pussy Cat. Like its famous antecedent, The Four-Poster, the comedy has only two characters and has been greeted as hilarious by critics wherever it has been performed. John Sparks began his acting career with the Victoria Theatre Guild as a 10-year-old, later was an oustanding member of the University of B.C. Players' Club, an organization with which he toured the province on many occasions. A professional actor, he has appeared on CBC television shows and with major Vancouver pro organizations as well as with theatre companies in Eastern Canada.

Gail lends charm and ability.

City Dance Star Joins Touring Show

The Breath of Scotland was accompanied by a bright glint of sunshine from Victoria, Friday, when the touring variety show played the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in Vancouver.

Victoria's Senior Amateur Canadian Champion Highland dancer, Gail Bamford, accompanied by Pacific International professional champion piper, Jamie Troy, appeared with the show and will again Monday when Breath of Scotland comes to McPherson Playhouse.

Famed Scottish performers Alec Finlay, Will Starr, Dennis Clancy and Sheena Andrew are featured with the touring group.

IN CAST

Among the cast there is also George Hill, a musical entertainer who features the guitar and banjo in his act, and teen-aged Linda Scott, a bright new talent who is already a known radio and television personality in Scotland.

Charming Gail Bamford is a Grade 11 Oak Bay Secondary School student who, although she holds a long list of Highland dance championships going back to her preteen years, confesses that she is pure Sassenach.

EIGHT YEARS

She has been dancing for eight years as a pupil of the Adeline Duncan Dance Studio.

Besides the Canadian Senior Amateur Championship which she won at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, Gail has won the Dominion Championship at Halifax and the Western North American Open and Western Canada titles.

In the immediate future Gail hopes to go to Scotland in July with her eyes on the world championship. She also expects to compete again for the Canadian championship in Toronto in August.

It is her intention to pursue dancing as a career by opening a studio of her own when she has finished formal schooling.

Curtain time for Breath of Scotland, Monday, is 8:30 p.m.

Edmonton's Citadel Has Come a Long Way

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton's Citadel Theatre has come a long way in four years—from an abandoned Salvation Army building to a paid-up subscription list of 4,000 and an annual budget of $193,000.

Now it's branching out with a mobile unit known as Citadel on Wheels to bring the theatre to students in schools throughout Edmonton and elsewhere. In January, four actors piled into the vehicle and travelled 60 miles in sub-zero weather to the Hobbema Indian reserve to put on a performance at the Ermine Skin grade school there.

Current spark-plug at the Citadel is Sean Mulcahy, widely known for his work in theatres and the CBC, who took over last October as artistic director. He speaks almost daily to various Edmonton groups, lectures from time to time at the University of Alberta and cracks a strong whip in his production of Citadel plays.

Citadel Theatre was the brain child of Edmonton lawyer Joseph H. Shoctor.

The curtains opened late in 1965 before 277 filled seats, and the 1965-66 season saw 25,000 attend eight plays which had runs of three weeks each.

NOW . . . Lights Bother Ducks

By RUSSELL FREETHY

Freethy

Last Friday night at Esquimalt Senior Secondary School, Mother Tucker's Yellow Duck was the featured group for a very successful POET sponsored dance, and they were well received by the enthusiastic audience Their entire performance would have been flawless, had it not been for several power failures caused by the light show overloading the school's inadequate stage circuitry. Most unfortunately, two of these disturbances happened during the group s own hits, One Ring Jane and I.

This, as any musician knows, can cause the rest of the show to suffer, for the performer is then acutely aware of his complete dependence on electricity.

●

Mother Tucker's, not surprisingly, were easily able to overcome this dilemma, and carried themselves through the remainder of the energetic sets with their usual exuberance.

The first set opened with Green Grass of Home and One Ring Jane, and included a unique arrangement of Spooky (an unusual number for the group), the standard Get Out of My Life Woman, and several others.

The second set was built into an extensive jammed excursion around For What It's Worth, complete with a few lines of Jezebel done up by Roger. A thirty-minute session like this is rarely attempted by even the devisive Duck. A splendid, singular set!

MTYD really get their heads onto some good things while performing. With their excruciatingly exalting effects, they entice the audience into doing their own individual things while they listen to this fascinating five-man band.

●

The Duck are leaving in April for Toronto, where they will play The Rock Pile on the same bill with the Butterfield Blues Band. Cliff Moore, the group's manager, is hoping for a booking into New York's Electric Circus while they are back east.

With One Ring Jane a national hit and getting some exposure in Europe, it is quite possible that Mother Tucker's Yellow Duck will be yet another Canadian group to break out into the international music scene.

Bob Dylan once remarked Some people say that I am a poet — Tim Hardin is a poet.

The Way It Is incorporated an interviewed recording-session with Tim Hardin into last Sunday's show; and, via videotape, displayed to us a partial picture of a true artist.

●

Hardin's songs are deeply personal, and he sings them out on the edge of heartbreak. You can feel this poet's perceptions of a world that is all too hauntingly real. His poetry has been available on Verbe Forecast. He now records for Columbia.

The Collectors' Grass and Wild Strawberries album has been getting a good deal of coverage by New York FM stations. This has tied in nicely with their appearances in the Filmore East where the crowds have been really digging what the group is putting out.

These Eyes, the recent Canadian single-success for the Guess Who, is really breaking for the boys below the forty-ninth. RCA is giving the record a push and several stateside tours are in the offing for the group.

A most solid set of compelling blues is Cotton In Your Ears (Verve-Forecast FTS 3060). Hert, The James Cotton Blues Band plays with much meaningful feeling, but always keeps it under control.

●

Cotton's singing is excellent, and Luther Tucker steps out in two fine vocals of his own. The best track, and they are all good, is Motorized Blues.

With American acts not quite making it with European audiences, I wonder what sort of reception Frank Zappa and his Mothers will get when they land in England next month. They will be in Vancouver again this summer.

If you dig the "blues" as they are being put down by the British these days make it to the Agrodome in Vancouver on Good Friday and see three of England's "blues-powerhouses" explode in an exciting burst of energy and sound.

●

Deep Purple, John Mayall and Jeff Beck will be appearing on the same show. Deep Purple will blast you back into your seats; Mayall will coaxingly draw you forward and out of yourself; and Beck will literally bend your mind and body .

Why not make a weekend of it and stay over for Saturday night's show in the Pacific Coliseum with Canned Heat and the Grassroots.

Wow! What a wicked weekend!

It's More Craft Than It Is Art

By TED LINDBERG

Carole Sabiston teaches art at Oak Bay Junior Secondary School. John Clazie teaches law and economy at Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School. Until April 5 they are respectively showing stitchery and jewellery at the Print Gallery in Oak Bay.

Stitchery, as referred to in art circles, is making pictures and compositions of fabrics, yarns and related materials. It is a medium that lies somewhere between painting, collage and weaving, more craft than art. Patchwork quilts are stitchery, too; but of a less liberated sort.

Lindberg

Miss Sabiston, with an art background, is more inclined toward making non-objective designs. They are bright and feminine and have proven extremely popular on the local scene.

An exhibit of her work, shown at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria last fall, was completely sold out — a first for any one-man show ever installed there.

These fabric compositions are done in a lighthearted vein, and as such don't warrant ponderous critical analysis. When I consider the pieces themselves, I think of them less as aesthetic statements, but am drawn or left indifferent to the colors, choice of materials and craftsmanship.

●

The thing that intrigues me is the popularity of these objects among many who wouldn't buy or take a non-objective painting of comparable quality.

I've decided it's conditioning. People have learned to admire texture, material quality and dyes in yarns and fabrics, even if they don't feel the same way about paint.

At the Gallery

Women, particularly, spend a lot of time considering such things.

They have learned that color and textured patterns may be enjoyed for themselves, and don't necessarily "mean anything." Clothing and drapery and upholstery fabrics carry no intrinsic message: they just are for their own sake. Ditto stitchery —they dig it.

People simply aren't conditioned to an appreciation of paint, except for interior decoration or auto finishes.

●

This is naturally somewhat galling to local painters, some of whom work along similar stylistic lines, but attract little attention. Miss Sabiston's recent works may all be sold before these words are committed to print.

They are handsome, decorative pieces, which may in their way teach people about meanings, and eventually, I suppose, about art.

The freest ones are best, and the occasional representational works seen last year at the Art Gallery are now completely absent.

It is interesting to see how she works out the problem in relatively non-plastic materials. These materials are not "worked" — they are fastened and interwoven according to careful pre-planning, and thus are bound to lose a certain spontaneity inherent in painting and collage.

Perhaps this is the weakest aspect of the medium of stitchery. It is achieved at snail's pace.

A large composition titled "Noir Et Blanc" comes the closest to a really successful liberation of forms and movement, but it is still held back by the niceness, the cleanness, the brightness and shininess (which is all right in its place —say, in the minimal print—constructions of Pat Martin Bates, but inimical to the kind of abstract abandon I think Miss Sabiston is after).

What I mean is, the very things that would attract an unsophisticated audience, with their fixed, atrophied sensibilities, are those things that put me off: new yarns, free-form patches of new leather, new fabric backgrounds.

●

I wonder what Miss Sabiston could do with un-appealing materials, like rag-bag remnants, string, rotting canvas, old nylons, corset covers, organic fibres: the junk and obsolescence the world is largely clothed in.

Silk purses out of sows ears have always been more impressive in collage and stitchery. This does not mean that art must be morbid, sinister or sobering to be effective; but prettiness is not enough.

I found "Sea Forms," a large wall-hanging, beautifully and laboriously executed in greens and golds, browns and blues — wools and velvets, with tendrils of raffia, very impressive in its way. It suggested a suspended transparent jelly-fish and a brown polyp, entwined among horizontal zones of rich greens and blues. Yet if the same design were a painting, it would be merely pedestrian.

●

This is the most vexing fact that will forever keep the crafts separated from the fine arts; and the most difficult to pin down. By what criteria do we distinguish either?

All I can offer is that art must more forcefully transcend mere technique or craftsmanship to the point where some real revelation or insight is demonstrated; where it challenges one's mental capacities; where it truly stuns or appalls or evokes. It doesn't matter whether the medium is gold leaf or knitting yarn.

Others of Miss Sabiston's pieces which approach these condition are "Complements," a three-dimensional composition of "holes within holes," revealing layers of fabric, green through natural linen to hot reds and pinks; "Bone Chains," a more daring wall-hanging of white and brown free-form vertical stripes, garnished with sections of bleached bone; and "Textural Homage," a complex and engaging composition in which all her devices are brought to bear.

●

Mr. Clazie's jewellery in silver is interesting mainly because it is hand-crafted, even a number of rings which appear to be cast. It has little to commend it in terms of design innovation, but like Miss Sabiston's work, it is getting freer. From a sculptural standpoint, the pieces composed of knobby, textured bone-like fragments are more unique than the flat forged things.

Some of the pieces include rather neutral settings of semi-precious stones and pearls. We ought to see work by other local jewellery-makers, to arrive at more worthwhile comparisons.

Pandora's Box Gallery on Wharf Street is again open, with what we may hope to be a new lease on life. The first major spring show is to open on or about April 4.

Schifrin Hot Today

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — From an office on S. Beverly Drive, amid smart dress shops and talent agencies, Argentine-born Lalo Schifrin pours forth a seemingly endless supply of music, from rock to symphony.

Schifrin is the hottest new composer in films today. His album of themes for Mission Impossible won him two Grammies from the recording academy and a gold record, having sold more than 250,000 copies. His score for Cool Hand Luke netted an Oscar nomination.

Among his other recent scores: The Fox, The Brotherhood, Bullitt, Hell in the Pacific, Coogan's Bluff.

He now is working on the score for 20th Century-Fox's Che. Other projects include a jazz-and-symphony piece commissioned by the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

PASSED UP LAW

Except for a number of happenstances, Schifrin, 37, might now be practising law in his native Buenos Aires. That was what his father, concert master of the Buenos Aires philharmonic, planned for him. But young Lalo had other ideas.

During his law studies, he discovered jazz. His musical ability won him a scholarship at the Paris Conservatory of Music, where he studied classics by day and played in jazz cellars by night.

PHILLIP YOUNG . . . mutual benefits

By AUDREY JOHNSON

As Phillip Young sees it there are two major aspects to his function as new chairman of the University of Victoria School of Fine Arts music division.

At 42, Mr. Young is leaving New Haven, Conn., and his post as executive officer of the prestigious Yale School of Music, to take up the Victoria appointment.

He was in the city this week to meet with faculty members and house-hunt before coming here permanently with his wife and 18-month-old son in three months' time.

The present chairman, Dr. Gerald Hendrie, will return to full-time teaching and research within the music division at the end of June.

A notable musicologist, Dr. Hendrie is also preparing an extensive scholastic work for publication.

●

Top priority must alway be given to requirements of music division students, but there is also, in Mr. Young's view, the desirability of liaison with community musical organizations and need to find a mutually satisfactory plan for working in conjunction with them.

This opinion from the new fine arts chairman touches upon a significant aspect of Uvic's development.

It's an aspect that must be taken into account, by the public, by the artists and craftsmen of the area and by university governors.

This is the fact that of all areas of the university, the one that makes the greatest and most immediate impact on the public is the School of Fine Arts.

In the majority of instances when citizens in any number visit the campus it is to attend concerts, recitals or plays.

●

And conversely, when the university reaches out beyond the campus it is in the same areas.

In fact, I think it would not be too much to claim that if it were not for fine arts activities, most citizens except those directly involved through members of the family, would scarcely be aware of the university's presence.

Incidentally, it appears odd that, considering Victorians in their hundreds as well as up-Islanders and mainlanders are visiting the theatre each year, no attempt has been made to enhance the exterior of the building that stands in at present as a campus theatre.

It seems to me that the fine arts school as well as arts circles in the community, must neither lose sight of the advantages to be reaped by town and gown involvement nor of the conflict of interests that could foreseeably arise in certain areas.

These areas would specifically be the available talent pool or, more seriously, the entertainment portion of the community's purse.

●

Concern has been expressed to me by some leading figures, that it is unfair for the university with its resources provided from the public treasury, to come into the community on a basis competitive with organizations already established.

This attitude seems to me to be excellent fuel for a spirited debate. For myself I can see both a pro and a con.

It has never been my belief that we should mollycoddle mediocrity or support it on purely sentimental grounds when there is a chance of something better.

But on the other hand it would distress me deeply to see an organization that has served the community long and to the best of its resources, that has almost never been smug, but has constantly striven to improve its service, driven into a back-to-the-wall, defensive position.

●

Could this happen, say, to the symphony orchestra?

It could, conceivably. But I don't think it will.

If for no other reason, than that it would be a highly unpopular action with a lot of people.

But what is far more positive and encouraging, is Phillip Young's vision of the campus and the community as he expressed it to me this week.

"The role of the university fine arts department should be to strengthen and reinforce what is good in the community," he commented.

In the city two days, he is already impressed with much of what he has heard and seen.

He attended the Malcolm Taylor scholarship concert on the campus Tuesday night.

It involved music division and Victoria Conservatory of Music faculty members and two outstanding students.

The Sounding Board

Of the Brahms Trio played by Robin Wood, Jack Kessler and James Hunter, he remarked that "I don't expect ever to hear it better played."

He is enthusiastic about the affiliation of the conservatory with the university, seeing it as a master stroke from which both institutions should gain much.

Expressing interest in the various musical organizations in the city, he anticipates a high level of mutual co-operation.

"The presence of organizations doing competent work is vital to us," he points out. "If instrumental students can get the experience they certainly require through playing with a symphony orchestra, this is of great value."

He looks forward to an interchange beneficial to the music division, the conservatory and the symphony.

"Mutual consideration of each other's needs is essential," he says.

●

Among things he hopes to see come to pass is a fine string quartet in residence whose members will play with the symphony and teach at the conservatory.

Phillip Young is not only a skilled administrator, but an active musician, a bassoonist and conductor of wind ensembles. He has taught art history as well as music courses and has pioneered research into early American musical instruments.

He has a book in progress on the subject and is a collector of old instruments.

Mrs. Young is a singer with a Master's degree from Eastman School of Music and with wide experience in recital work and the teaching of vocal literature.

Reclamation Clarification Sought

Clarification of the principle of land reclamation and provision for appeals by mine owners are included in recommendations of the legislature's select standing committee that studied proposed legislation to control strip mining in British Columbia.

The committee reported Friday after 12 meetings during which they heard 31 briefs from mining associations, unions, wildlife and conservation associations and boards of trade.

"Without exception, the submissions received endorsed the idea of reasonable reclamation laws.

"Some asked for concise, clear-cut definition of what was meant by the term 'continuous and progressive restoration, reclamation and conservation of the surface of the land.' "

The phrasing is from the sections governing land restoration in the two bills to control strip mining now before the house.

SUBMISSIONS

The committee reports that while there was general agreement, some submissions claim the requirement "imposed an unreasonable and unworkable restriction on the mining industry."

So its major recommendation is that the word "restore" be removed from all sections of the legislation, to be replaced with the phrase "reclamation and-or conservation" of the surface of the land or water course affected.

In making this recommendation, the committee concedes that some terrain — such as the top of a mountain — is beyond actual restoration.

To get around some instances where "continual and progressive reclamation" cannot be carried out immediately, the committee recommends imposition of a stiffer performance bond to pay for future reclamation.

The legislation now calls for mine-operators to post a $500 bond for each acre to be strip mined. Impositoin of the new bond requirement will make operators pay the difference in cost between the initioal bond and the estimated cost of the approved reclamation program.

The committee recommends that the sole-power of the mines minister to approve reclamation programs be diluted.

Now the mines minster's approval should come after the plan has been submitted to the lands, forests and water resources minister, the recreation and conservation minister and the agriculture minister.

Gaglardi Expense Account Provides Hectic Session

By JOHN SLINGER

An acrimonious second meeting of the legislative public accounts committee Friday returned to the question of who pays Phil Gaglardi's hotel bills but it didn't come up with an answer.

The apparent contradiction between the minister without portfolio's claim the government pays his hotel bills and Premier Bennett's claim that it doesn't kept the committee in a state of suspended agitation for an hour.

And then it decided to pursue the question in camera at another time.

During this morning's open meeting, Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skillings accused the New Democratic Party of "trying to get" Gaglardi for the last two years.

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan thundered that Skillings' statement was a "damned falsehood."

CONTRADICTION

Committee debate centred on an inter-departmental memo which appears to contradict Gaglardi's statement to the committee Wednesday that the government paid for two weeks of his Hotel Vancouver room bill during last years' legislative session.

In the memo, departmental comptroller James McDiarmid told deputy finance minister G. S. Byron:

"... I have pointed out to the minister without portfolio that inasmuch as a living allowance is received during the session by all members of the legislature while the house is sitting, it would not be possible to reimburse him for expenditures from any other appropriation during the sitting of the house."

The memo added that Gaglardi "agrees and this office is no longer accepting expense accounts as from the opening of the legislature."

SENT IN BILL

(Gaglardi missed most of the last session, during which he resigned his highways portfolio under fire, and spent almost all the time in Vancouver where instead of using his own personal expense allowance as an MLA he told the hotel to submit his room bill to the government.)

(The opposition also claims the government has maintained a Vancouver hotel suite for Gaglardi since the last session but the legislative rules prevent discussion of any bills paid beyond the March 31, 1968, end of the last fiscal year.)

SKILLINGS
... defends Phil

Health Minister Loffmark moved that the committee prepare a report of proceedings in the Gaglardi matter and present it to the house. Hunter Vogel (SC — Langley) said the committee must meet in camera to do this.

'... you've been trying to get Gaglardi for two years ...'

This brought NDP charges that the government members of the committee are trying to sweep the matter "under the rug."

Strachan demanded that any report to the house must include the fact that the departmental memo told Gaglardi he could not charge his bills to the government, but vouchers presented to the committee show this was done.

"This is completely contrary to the statement given by the departmental comptroller," he said.

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) insisted any report is "premature" while the error in statements between Gaglardi and Bennett is not cleared up.

"Quite improperly, in the year under review, Gaglardi was receiving expense accounts when he should be paying from his own allotment as a member of the legislature," he said.

GAGLARDI'S VIEW

The memo also says Gaglardi's opinion is "that as long as he keeps within his expense account he is entitled to stay where he wishes (providing the rates are in line with everyday accommodation.)

"Any expenditure for a hotel room is part of his travelling expense and is incurred while he is on official business."

(During Gaglardi's stay in Vancouver last session he spent several days moderating and participating in a radio "hot line" show and also said he was seeing a doctor about a jaw ailment which prevented him from replying to opposition attacks on his handling of the highways department in the house.)

Skillings stood to say he did not want to hide anything.

The matter had already recieved a "tremendous amount of publicity" when considering that the province has a billion-dollar budget and the committee was arguing "about $44."

PRINCIPLE INVOLVED

Dave Barrett (NDP — Coquitlam) interrupted to say the question involved a principle.

Skillings said there has been althogether too much "playing to the press."

Opposition members demanded Skillings name who was playing to the press.

"What I want is the public to get this in perspective," retorted Skillings "You've been trying to get this member for the last two years."

The minister agreed the comptroller should be called to explain the memo, then added: "All I want to say in the minister's defence is that he has been placed in a most invidious position."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer suggested pressure might have been put on McDiarmid who, as a civil servant, "places himself in jeopardy" if he refuses to approve a minister's expense account.

GOING? GOING? NO SALE!

The legislature Friday briefly sounded like a car market.

Garde Gardom (L —Vancouver Point Grey), criticizing the Social Credit government's new no-fault auto insurance bill, said increasing numbers of persons won't take out collision insurance.

He cited Alex Macdonald (NDP —Vancouver East), a lawyer, as one motorist who preferred to save the premium price and assume the risk personally.

Turning to Macdonald, Gardom asked "that dear old heap of yours, what's it worth? $7,000?"

Macdonald jumped up and said "Sold!"

Gardom quickly added:

"For goodness sake Mr. Speaker don't crack your hammer."

Student Builds Windmill

Most university students spend May to August earning money to go to school during the winter.

Lyn Hagglund went to Africa last summer and helped build a windmill in Basutoland.

She was one of 27 Canadians and 200 American students who participated in Crossroads Africa, a program that sends young North Americans to Africa where they work side-by-side with Africans on local projects.

Miss Hagglund, a third-year education student at the University of Victoria, described some of her experiences during her two months in Africa at a meeting of the Esquimalt As-One-That-Serves Club.

The meeting was also attended by 17 members of the Duncan AOTS.

She said her experiences were "no tourist joyride" but were something she would never forget.

Sir Philip was born in the valley.

He's Every Inch An Officer And a Gentleman

By Ed Gould

From the aristocratic tilt of his head to the shining, expensive shoes on his feet, Sir Philip Livingstone of Maple Bay is every inch the well-bred English gentleman.

His title, conferred on him by King George VI, tops a list of honors and medals: KBE, CB, AFC, FRCS, DPH, DOMS, KHS.

However, Air Marshall Sir Philip Livingston, specialist in opthamology, former director-general of medical services for the Royal Air Force, and honorary surgeon to King George VI, was born, raised and educated right in the Cowichan Valley.

Like many of the "long stocking" tradition (Colonel Maxwell Edward Dopping-Heppenstal, Colonel Ireton Eardley-Wilmot, Robert Hew Fergusson-Pollok and Lieutenant-Colonel T. V. Sandys-Wunsch) Sir Philip is the product of a pioneering family who settled in the Cowichan area with limited means, worked small land holdings, and still retained all the outward trappings of English country gentlefolk.

So dominant was their influence that it lingers still in the accent of the third and fourth generation descendants.

Sir Philip's family arrived in 1891 and established a home at Cowichan Bay where Philip was born two years later at "Clevelands"—not far from the Corfield store where Yukon poet Robert W. Service lived and worked.

"He played whist with my family at weekends," Sir Philip recalled in an interview at his Maple Bay home.

'It Was a Good Life'

It was a good life. Fishing for trout in the Cowichan and Koksilah rivers. Riding horseback (English saddle, of course) across lush green fields to tennis and cricket. Swimming in Maple Bay and skating on frozen Quamichan Lake.

His father became general manager of Tyee Copper Mine on Mount Sicker and there "was an extremely happy social population." The problem was education.

"The schools in the early days were—for the most part—distinctly below par," Sir Philip said. He attended Cowichan Station school at six years old, "but I was not very good and chiefly absent."

Maybe the school deserved its end because, "it became a chicken run and later was levelled." After a brief attendance at Somenos school, education began in earnest for him at Quamichan school. (The building still stands at Maple Bay Road and Indian Road where it now serves as a Boy Scout hall.)

For it was here that Philip met P. T. "Scrimmy" Scrimshire, a newly-arrived English master who believed in hard contact sports and strong discipline. "He didn't spare the switch and we all prospered from it," Sir Philip said.

'Scrimmy' Did His Best

Despite "Scrimmy's" attempts to raise the level of education in the Cowichan Valley through the medium of one wooden school house, it was not high enough to suit Philip's father. With another five longstockings of the same frame of mind, he founded Quamichan Lake school.

(No longer standing, it was located on Dr. Stoker's Hill, on the Maple Bay Road, not far from St. Peter's Church.)

Quamichan Lake school was set up to offer the very best that an English public school could provide and P. T. Scrimshire as head master.

"Scrimmy saved me from educational disaster," Sir Philip said. "He taught Latin, French and Euclid at a time when none of these was available in co-educational B.C. schools."

The courses were tough and the students were tougher.

"The worst things we did to each other was to throw fir cones soaked in water and embedded in snowballs," Sir Philip said. "How we kept from blinding each other is a mystery. No one even got concussion."

He recalled how a lifelong friend, war ace Joseph Fall of Cobble Hill, was his "fag"—an English public school term meaning, "junior who does service."

"I always kid Joe that the reason he was able to look 36 Jerries in the eye while he shot their aircraft from under them was because of the practice he got in not blinking while I alternately threw a cricket ball at one side of his head, then the other."

Loyal Britishers Produced

The school turned out more than just eye surgeons and pilots; it produced politicians, soldiers, and real estate magnates. And probably the loyalest group of Britishers since the War of 1812. "One hundred per cent of us went to war in 1918," Sir Philip said.

Many also served in the Second World War as well, like Sir Philip and the other part of "the Three Musketeers"—Dr. E. H. Elkington (retired Victoria eye surgeon) and L. Y. Bazett (who now lives on the Isle of Man).

Philip's education didn't end at Quamichan Lake school, of course. After a great deal of hard work he got into Jesus College, Cambridge. He had to learn six years of Greek in six months.

The story of his college life, his attainment of fame and world honor would fill a book—in fact, it has: Fringe Of The Clouds, is the doctor's own account.

Looking back on those early days Sir Philip has strong views on what may be lacking in today's "soft" approach to youth and education. A deep feeling of family devotion and obligation drove him on.

"After two appalling world wars we have destroyed the cream of our civilization," Sir Philip said. "All we have left now is the skim milk. The faith to aspire to something beyond is gone. Kids today are clamoring for the leadership they are not getting."

Oh, "Scrimmy"—where are you now that we need you?

Oyster Farming Steadier Than Trolling for Salmon

* * * * * *

. . . And There Isn't Much Competition

Roy Pardiac, 33-year-old skipper of the fishing vessel Pachena, is an oyster-picking fisherman.

He is probably the only one of his kind in the steadily-growing oyster industry along the east coast of Vancouver Island.

There are other oyster-pickers in the area, of course. The difference is that while others harvest their crops with landlocked operations, Pardiac uses a 60-foot converted salmon seiner to make the rounds of his oyster beds. And the vessel does double duty as a towboat for hauling his crop by barge to his shucking plant on Denman Island.

The Courtenay-based fisherman has fished salmon most of his working life in West Coast waters. He has made a good living at it. Yet he has entered the oyster industry, a field that requires considerably more physical labor and hardship than fishing.

AT HOME MORE

Pardiac's choice is not without good reason. He prefers oyster picking because he is home for at least part of every day, the work is steadier than fishing, and he makes good money.

For a few months during the summer, during the "off-oyster" season, he uses the Pachena as a fish packer. But nearly every day from October to the end of May he heads out of Comox Harbor for his oyster beds, towing a barge and timing his arrival to coincide with the receding tides.

Pardiac went into oyster production about six years ago when he bought the 60-by-14-foot Pachena from Ron Francious, of Duncan. A few years before this, he sold real estate and did some logging. But it was only a brief respite from a fishing career that had started at the age of 17 when he bought his first boat, the Pandora, from a Namu fisherman.

He now makes his home at Courtenay with his wife Janet and their children, Ken, 8, and Shelley, 6.

The oysters, housed in grey, twisted, barnacle-encrusted shells, are in such abundance they almost literally cover the flats where they are found. Pardiac says it may not always be this way, but the oyster crop has been good since 1958 and he plans to keep at it as long as it lasts.

DENMAN FLATS

His oysters are mainly plucked from flats in the vicinity of Denman Island. The beds are in lease areas registered with the provincial government; and from unregistered areas, under a provincial government permit.

Oysters feed on microscopic marine life which they filter out of the water. In polluted waters they become contaminated with microscopic garbage. To assure that commercial oysters are fit for human consumption, the provincial department of health makes monthly tests of the bivalves and the water from which they are taken.

Commercial oysters, therefore, are taken only from registered areas. Those from unchecked beds must be transplanted in registered lease areas for two weeks — ample time for an oyster to cleanse its system — before being marketed.

Pardiac's oysters are graded and packed, then shipped immediately to market. some go to the Coast Oyster Company in South Bend, Washington; the rest to Vancouver.

Oysters in the Courtenay area are in exposed abundance at low tide. Gathering them for a living would seem a cinch. But harvesting this type of crop is not without its bad moments. To say that the constant bending is hard on a picker's back is a considerable understatement; and this is probably the least of the problems.

During the busy season — the winter months when low tides occur mainly during the night — pickers must endure the cold dampness of a soggy beach, working under the dim light of gas lamps. Added to these miserable conditions is the uncertainty of weather, which can present a particularly hazardous situation when a fishing vessel is swinging at anchor close to shore.

ANXIOUS MOMENTS

In some exposed areas it is difficult to hold the anchor and there is danger of the boat drifting. And strong winds and rough seas can give crews many anxious moments if they are trying to ride out a storm at night in a confined area.

This is one of the reasons Pardiac likes the Pachena. The 60-foot vessel has a comparatively shallow draft, which makes it suitable for working close to the shoreline. And a new Caterpillar D333 turbocharged and aftercooled marine diesel engine provides the necessary speed and power to move the vessel against wind, waves and currents — particularly when towing an oyster-laden barge.

One of the biggest problems an oysterman can have is finding pickers. But thanks to the seasonal aspect of the forest industries, Pardiac fills his needs with unemployed loggers during winter, his busiest months.

His shucking crew, which numbers up to five at any one time, consists mainly of housewives in the Denman Island area who welcome the opportunity to make some extra household dollars.

An industry which is closely allied to oyster harvesting is clam digging. Pardiac has not yet gone into this. Although, in preparation, he has acquired a special hydraulic clam digger from the East Coast. This is a device employing jets of water to wash clams to the surface of the beach where they can be gathered with a rake-like implement.

MORE CLAMS

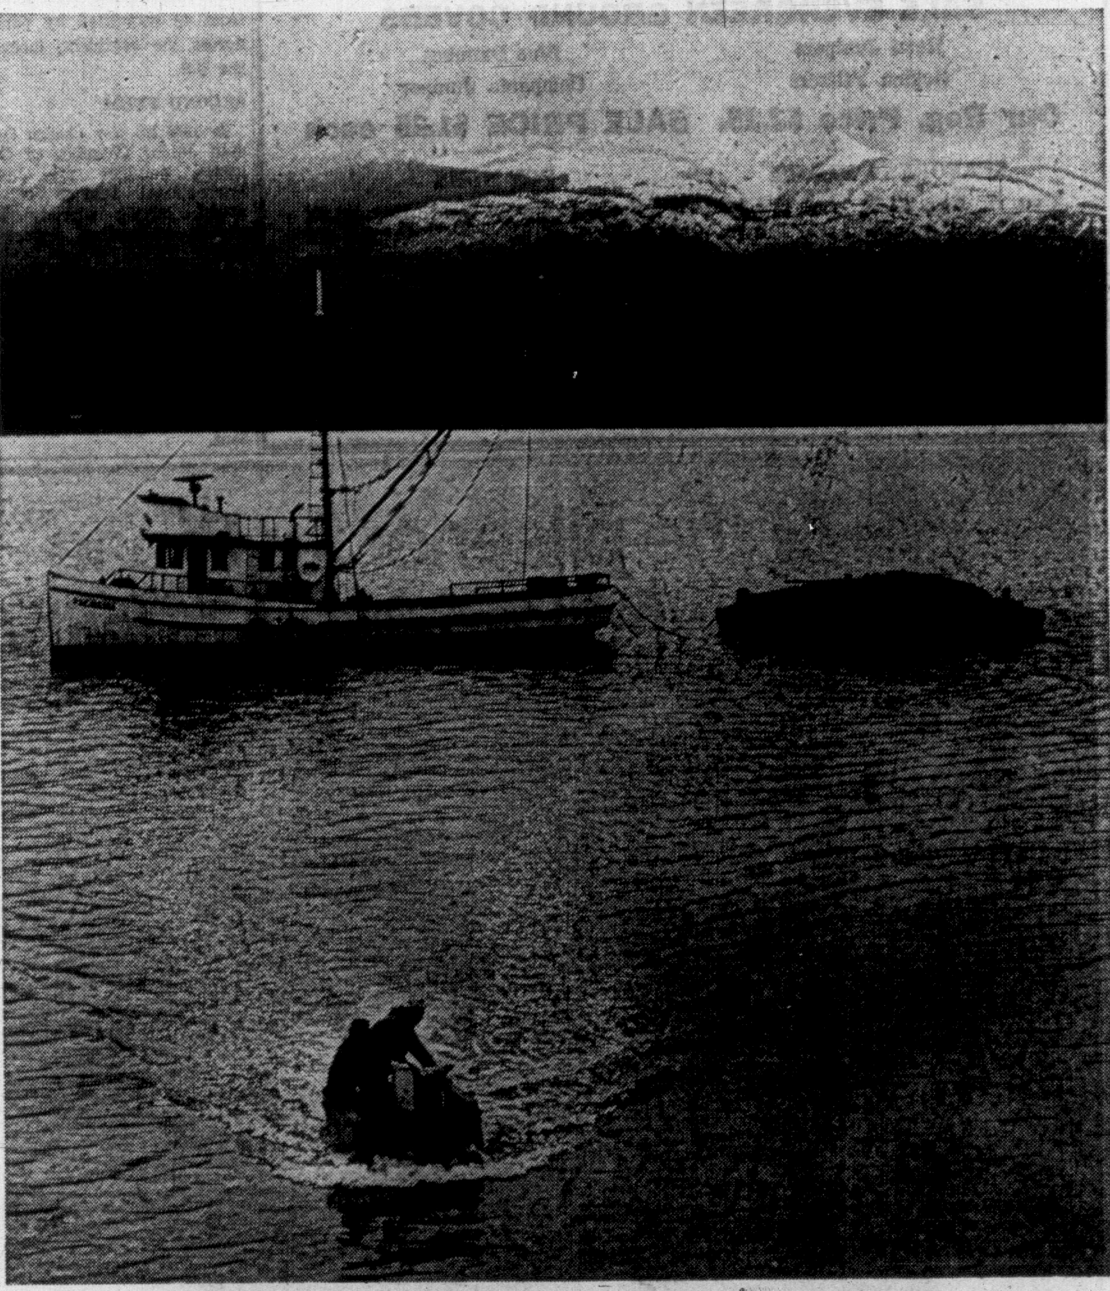
Using this machine, one man can dig 500 pounds of clams in an hour, which is more than twice the amount by conventional means.

At present, he is too busy with the bumper oyster crop to bother with clams. But he has his eye cocked to this market as a future business venture, particularly as something to fall back on if the oyster population dwindles.

The oyster industry may not appeal to all fishermen. The secret to the success of any oyster operation, Pardiac says, is the willingness of the company's owner to work alongside his pickers, matching their efforts pound for pound.

He tested this theory by leaving a crew on its own, and found that production fell off sharply. He has worked alongside his men ever since. Picking oysters off a beach is not the most pleasant job in the world, he says, but it's a chore he can't personally sidestep and stay in business.

At helm of Pachena is Roy Pardiac who looks upon his converted salmon seiner as the backbone of his company's oyster operation.



Pachena lays offshore near Denman Island shucking plant as two pickers head in with flat-prowed skiff at half tide. Soon they will be filling 10-gallon buckets with the tasty sea-morsels.

WHEN YOU ENTER GOOD SHEPHERD SHELTER . . .

160 Barking, Tail-Wagging Dogs Say Welcome

By Pat Dufour

PERFECTLY AT EASE in the arms of Sister Mary Julia, this young goat crosses her hooves and prepares to enjoy a little pampering.

The noise is thunderous ... almost deafening ... as you pass through the entrance of the Good Shepherd Shelter at Cobble Hill, to be greeted by the raucous barking of the 160-odd dogs housed on the 15-acre property.

It seems impossible that all of them, including an assortment of aged horses, cats and goats, could be adequately cared for by 79-year-old Mother Cecelia and five Sisters of the Love of Jesus.

Yet, cared for they are, with a personalized attention that proves the Sisters have good memories, as well as good hearts.

Sister Mary Julia, a ruddy-cheeked Sister from Iowa, can name every puppy, dog, cat, goat and horse as she makes the rounds with visitors.

Many of the animals she has named herself.

In spite of the clamorous welcome, visitors soon become aware of a certain serenity. The animals, many of them victims of former owners' cruelty or neglect, seem aware that they have reached a haven.

For some it is a halfway house, a resting place until they're taken into a new family circle.

Other "unadoptables" will spend the rest of their days with the Sisters.

Among the latter are two old horses. One is being coaxed back into eating regular meals. At 20 years, before he reached the shelter, he had forgotten how.

The other, an old-timer at the shelter, has a spinal condition that has given him a spastic gait all his life. Sister Mary Julia is proud of the fact that he now walks better than he has ever done before.

There's a magnificent Pyranees dog that fell victim to a marital crisis.

His master, according to Sister Mary Julia, bought him as a surprise for his wife, having him shipped from England at a cost of $2,000.

It was a surprise all right. The dog stands the height of a well-fed pony.

As the Sister says, "His owner had to decide whether he was to lose his wife or his dog!"

There's no hint at the Shelter of the strained relations that occurred in April 1965 when the Roman Catholic Church ordered the shelter closed.

Mother Cecelia carried on in spite of official pressure and accusations such as the one made by Fr. Andrew Heber, Mission City. He said, "I share the conviction of many who think that the work done at the shelter not in the best interests of animal welfare."

Mother Cecelia's supporters rallied and the conflict, at least publicly, died.

The Sisters' affection for animals is obvious even in the manner of their burial.

In the animal cemetery on a sunny slope there's a poignant marker for each animal buried there. They include ones for a black cat from Boston, a small dog poisoned in Newark, Ohio, and a three-month-old Pekinese hit by a car and left to die in Houston, Texas.

If life at the shelter is serene, that of Mother Cecelia has been anything but commonplace.

She has survived onslaughts from both neighbors and the Church in her determination to keep the shelter in existence.

She's not talking but rumors have it that a book on her life is being written and will be published later this year.

Mother Cecelia shrugs off questions on the book. She prefers to talk about the animal clinic which she hopes to add to the shelter.

Meanwhile, she and her Sisters find ample doses of loving care are often effective antidotes for pain and terror.

BUZZ FROM A BUDDY is a great way to start the day and this young Bowser isn't slow in greeting Mother Cecelia. (Robin Clarke Photos)

Pat Bay Route Slammed

The provincial government was condemned Friday for its attitude towards the public on highway work.

Chamber of Commerce transportation group chairman George Farmer told a director's meeting:

"I think the chamber should go on record as condemning the provincial government for its public relations."

He was annoyed that the city's plan to connect the Rose-Blanshard Street extension with the Trans-Canada and Patricia Bay Highway system as a main downtown access had been dropped by the highways department despite an earlier promise, the fact that Victoria and Saanich were agreed on joint plans, and that the city has virtually completed its part of construction.

LACK OF LIAISON

Farmer criticized the lack of liaison between the highways department and local authorities, and got support from directors for the stand taken by Mayor Hugh Stephen and Mayor Hugh Curtis for completion of the planned route.

"The provincial government won't meet us to discuss it," Farmer said. "At least Gaglardi (former highways minister P. A. Gaglardi) came to our meeting — he didn't tell us anything — but that is more than we can get out of the present gentleman."

Directors asked for an immediate meeting with Highways Minister Wesley Black.

The chairman reported that plans for the visit of several summer cruise ships to Victoria had been laid for this summer, but that if Ogden Point docks are not fixed they may not return as hoped.

Manager Post Given Jaycee Man

Esquimalt baker Brian J. Small was named Friday as manager of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, a post vacated this month by Earl Dicknoether, industrial development officer at Dawson Creek.

Small, who operates Esquimalt Bakery will quit the bakery business prior to assuming his new job April 15.

His application was selected from 48 submitted by persons across the continent, including the U.S.

SECOND TERM

In 1968 he was chosen Canadian Junior Chamber of Commerce nominee for Jaycee international senator of the world, having already been chosen oustanding Jaycee in B.C.

Currently, Small is completing his second term as managing director of Victoria (Jaycee) Exhibition and has been associated with the Victoria junior chamber for 12 years, including a year as president and as Vancouver Island district president.

Chamber Eyes Promotion Of Tourism

A private society to promote and assist entertainment groups during the summer season applied for incorporation Friday through Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Directors were told at a luncheon meeting that chamber president Clare Copeland, lawyer Hugh Henderson and director A. G. Coning had formed Greater Victoria Tourist Attractions Inc. It will be part of the chamber's efforts to expand tourist activity by offering theatical, musical, cultural and athletic programs to encourage visitors to stay a day longer than average.

The chamber claims $3.4 million in extra spending could result if only 10 per cent of summer visitors to the capital stayed an extra night.

GRAPHIC ARTS

Coning said the society would be an umbrella over the performing aad graphic arts of Victoria.

Among the first to benefit, Henderson said, would be the Symphony Society, Bastion Theatre Group, the Victoria Conservatory of Music and the Art Gallery.

Businesses would be invited to subscribe to the society and it would be empowered to receive bequests, gifts and donations for its promotional activities and help to charitable causes.

The chamber favors a program of activities spread over the whole tourist season and is trying to co-ordinate a spring festival program for next year in conjunction with a similar event in Vancouver.

Judge Kills Self

ROME (Reuters)—An Italian Supreme Court judge threw himself 90 feet to his death from the top of the Colosseum Friday. Dr. Achille Ciocca, 65, had been president of the Rome courts before becoming a judge in the Supreme Court of Cassation — one of the highest legal posts in Italy. Police said preliminary inquiries showed he had been suffering from extreme nervous exhaustion.

Before the Magistrate

Two men with criminal records each were sentenced to three-year penitentiary terms Friday in central court on separate offences.

Ronald Quiring, 23, of 1631 Kings, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering with intent.

Cyril J. Jackman, 60, of 1168 Oscar, pleaded guilty to gross indecency.

Sgt. Ernest G. Bennett said Quiring climbed to the roof of Victoria Collision, 1321 Quadra, March 22 and removed a pane of glass from the skylight.

He then made his way to the floor 15 feet below and when police came was found underneath a car. Nothing was reported stolen.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Quiring's record included jail terms for breaking and entering and theft in 1967, 1966 and 1964. He also has convictions for theft and possession of stolen property, court was told.

Quiring said he was on parole, due to expire May 30, after receiving a two-year term in July, 1967.

When he heard the accused's age Magistrate William Ostler noted the man "already has a shocking record."

Jackman pleaded guilty to committisg acts of gross indecency with a 12-year-old girl. A folio of pictures was introduced as an exhibit.

In passing sentence Magistrate Ostler said Jackman was a depraved and vile old man not content only to wallow in filth but also to contaminate a young girl.

He said he proposed to send him somewhere where he could receive psychiatric treatment.

Trial of John Vosper, 38, of Vancouver, charged with fraud was remanded to April 2 to continue.

Witnesses said he purchased a watch at Eatons on Jan. 24 worth $89.50 with a credit card in the name of J. Bradshaw. He signed that name to the bill court was told.

A Vancouver pawnbroker testified Vosper sold him the watch several days later for $30.

At the end of the Crown's case defence counsel David Wilson moved the charge be dismissed as there was no evidence to show the store had suffered a loss from the alleged fraud.

Magistrate Ostler reserved decision on the motion.

Howard Leverington, 731 Goldstream, and Lloyd Konopski, 790 Hutchinson, were each fined $300 for impaired driving.

Dale Wellar, no address available, was fined $350 for impaired driving Thursday.

Police Plea Unanswered, Court Told

Requests from two police officers and from a youth engaged in a struggle on a city sidewalk and watched by a crowd of 50 persons brought no response, central court heard Friday.

On trial was Sylvester Gutkowski, 17, of 1025 Nicholson.

He was convicted of assaulting city Const. Walter Sagert March 11 and remanded to April 3 for sentence. Earlier he appeared in juvenile court.

Const. Sagert said during the struggle on Douglas near Yates he asked several citizens to give him a hand while trying to handcuff the youth but "not one would."

He also said the accused screamed "some one get these cops" to his friends. No one moved.

The incident began as Sagert and Const. Tom Sibbald saw the accused standing on the corner and he yelled an obscenity at them. Sagert got out of his police vehicle, approached the accused who continued to yell and scream obscenities at him, put his hand on his shoulder and told him he was under arrest for causing a disturbance.

At this Gutkowski pushed him away and then kicked him twice on the shins.

STRUGGLE ENSUES

When the two officers tried to get the youth into the police vehicle the three of them fell to the ground and a struggle ensued during which Sagert received several blows to the head, back and eye.

Sagert also said he received injuries to two fingers, his hand and wrist and had to go to the hospital for treatment.

Officers testified the youth was intoxicated but not so that he didn't know what he was doing.

Sagert described the language used as "phrases I wouldn't find in the dictionary."

Gutkowski said he was under the influence of liquor.

COUPLE OF YEARS

When asked why he swore at the officers he said it was because "I haven't liked policemen for a couple of years." He said they didn't seem to be friendly.

Prosecutor John MacIntyre said it was absolutely outrageous police were interferred with and abused in this manner. He said it was a disgraceful state of affairs and one that shouldn't be tolerated.

He said a prison term was the only answer.

In agreeing to a suggestion that a pre-sentence report be prepared Magistrate Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre added that he wasn't going to use the probation service for coddling criminals.

Empress Plan Nearly Ready

Final proposals for an Empress Hotel convention centre are expected to be made to the city within two weeks, Chamber of Commerce directors were told Friday.

Convention centre group chairman Douglas Abbott said a new meeting between Canadian Pacific Hotels, Northern Realty and city representatives was due within two weeks and that the chamber should have a firm idea of what to consider after that.

The chamber intends to promote an acceptable proposal prior to a referendum that is tentatively planned for June.

Project Shut Down

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A reconstruction project on Highway 16 near Rainbow Lake, where 20 members of the Rock and Tunnel Workers Union walked off the job Wednesday in a dispute over travel allowances, has been shut down until further notice.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Sometimes 1930 bidding could look scary to anyone who has read any bridge book of the last 30 years.

Today's hand was played in a match between the Culbertson team, that had just won the American Bridge League championship, and an English team that had done nothing to distinguish itself but that was captained by Lt. Colonel Walter Buller (Ret.)

Buller advocated a common sense system. Needless to say, the Culbertsons won handily but the common sense system showed up well on some hands.

The bidding in the box is that of Culbertson and Lightner. We don't know exactly what Ely's three-spade bid meant and we doubt if Lightner did. But Teddy raised to four on the theory that Ely had a good hand with lots of spades.

Ely revalued his hand and bid five diamonds as a slam try but Lightner wisely felt that his club and heart honors would not be worth much and bid only five spades.

West opened the ace of hearts and shifted to a trump that was won by dummy's seven. Ely was rightly suspicious of that heart lead but saw an easy way to make his contract. He cashed his ace and king of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He returned to his hand by ruffing a club, drew trumps and conceded a trick to the jack of diamonds.

The common sense system did even better. There were no forcing bids available so Buller simply opened four spades and played the hand there.

We wonder if in a 1969 team match both sides would stay out of this slam contract. We did know one thing. No one would open with either three or four spades.

PRICES ARE TERRIBLE AREN'T THEY?

It's getting so that a man with a REALLY BIG family just can't buy a home that he can afford unless the kids share bedrooms and line up at the ONE bathroom to wait their turn. But once again that man DON BACON has come up with the answer. At 1631 Kings Road there is a stucco home with SIX BEDROOMS and TWO BATHROOMS at a price you CAN afford. The bedrooms aren't big mind you, but there ARE six of them. There is also a DEN and a LARGE FAMILY dining room. Big laundry room ON THE MAIN FLOOR to save mother steps. The lot is rather narrow (meaning, low taxes), but it goes back 130 feet, so that there is ample place for small children to play. Fruit trees, too. Two blocks to OAKLAND SCHOOL, and walking distance to Lansdowne Jr. High. Full basement with workshop for dad. Rewired and OOM heat. Can you imagine getting all this for only $18,900? The line forms on the right for appointments to view. Call DON BACON, 385-2458.

. . . McGILL

the commercial and business blocks immediately south of the university and roamed loose, breaking shop windows and setting fire to the contents of public trash-baskets.

Police sweeping operations continued until after 1 a.m., some two hours after the main body of the demonstration was first broken.

SUBURBAN ALLIES

The march began peacefully at St. Louis Square, a mile east of the university.

Bus loads of demonstrators began arriving at 7 p.m. and milled about for an hour, chanting such slogans as "McGill Francais", "Quebec for Quebeckers" and "we have brutes of police."

They carried the black flag of anarchy, the red flag, a green red and white flag linked to the Papineau Rebellion of 1837, a Union Jack with swastickas on it and posters of Che Guevara.

Many hundred of them had little plastic whistles which they blew in unison.

"They will paralyze the police operation by drowning out their whistles," explained a teen-aged demonstrator.

But when the march reached the university, after a mile's peaceful struggle, it turned out that the police were using walkie-talkies.

The whistles did drown out with complete success two efforts by march leader Raymond Lemieux to tell the demonstrators why they were there.

SPEECH SHORTENED

Lemieux's first attempt to speak was cut short by a string of popping firecrackers that was aimed at the police line just behind him but fell short.

In his next effort, from well behind police lines, he just managed to get out "remember, we're civilized people," when more firecrackers began exploding, a huge Roman candle began lobbing balls of red blaze into the university grounds and an approving whistle chorus for this performance blotted out his words.

The marchers were there, they kept telling each other in chanted slogans, to make McGill French, make Quebec French, start a revolution and put the workers in power.

They had the support of such groups as the "Taxi Liberation Front" — an assortment of small separatist and Marxist clubs, societies and movements — the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Montreal Labor Council, the Quebec General Students Union and a handful of McGill students.

DISAVOWALS

Such major nationalist groups as Rene Levesque's Parti Quebecois, and the St. Jean Baptiste Society, pointedly disavowed the march well in advance.

The junior college students carried it. A majority of them seemed opposed to violence and in a playful mood. Some spent most of their time necking.

A comparatively small number worked actively to promote violence and a substantial minority egged them on.

The March and demonstration were meant to bring into one converging movement such disparate forces as the handful of ultra-radical McGill students clustered around Stanley Gray, the unilingualist movement led by Lemieux, and the discontent of the poor and unemployed mobilized by several Maoist-Marxist-Leninist sects.

McGill was seen as the symbol and cornerstone of "Anglo-Saxon oppression," "Capitalist domination" and "bourgeois privilege."

Ecumenical Talk

ROME (AP) — Pope Paul and seven American Protestant leaders discussed ecumenical cooperation between Protestant and Roman Catholics in the United States for 45 minutes Friday.

Turn-Around For Mayor On Property

Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich, who helped the federal government 30 years ago to expropriate a piece of waterfront property, is now trying to buy it back for the public.

The five acres on the southwest side of the Department of National Defence wharf at Patricia Bay were acquired in the Second World War for the RCAF but never used.

DND is now making arrangements to turn it over to Crown Assets for disposal.

"I've been trying to buy it for use as a park since I've been in office," said the mayor. "A park is needed for the southwest corner of the municipality."

During the war, the mayor was involved in government construction projects and assisted in acquiring the property for DND.

It was bought for $4,200.

"I don't think we will get it for that now," said the mayor. "But if the price is reasonable we should acquire it."

66 Strikes Lockouts Last Year

There were more strikes in Birtish Columbia last year than in any year since 1953.

This is shown in the annual report of the labor department, which lists 66 strikes and lockouts. They involved 140 employers and 12,179 workers and resulted in a time loss of 406,729 working days, or 0.264 of the total time worked by the labor force.

Previous high figure for strikes and lockouts was 54 in 1967. Total time loss was exceeded by only one previous year, 1959.

Biggest time-loss strike was the southern interior timber workers, totalling 280,013. It began in October, 1967, and ended the following May.

Hundred Miles His Goal

The Hundred Milers are students in schools across Canada who have been walking around the grounds at lunch time and recess until they've finished the equivalent of a 100-mile hike.

At View Royal School, where 400 circuits of the playing field equals 100 miles, eveyone is particularly proud of Chris Rayham, who has already chalked up six miles.

Two years ago, Chris couldn't walk at all, and now, on crutches, he plans to finish the hundred miles with the other students.

Cerebral palsy, contracted when he was a baby, left him with weakened muscles in his legs, and it was only a year after he had an operation in Montreal that Chris began to get around on his crutches.

That first year, he went to a special school, but the doctors suggested to his parents that Chris was ready for public school last September.

TEACHERS DROP OUT

Now, at 9, Chris can walk a bit without crutches, and is getting along well at school.

Even if Chris doesn't make the full 100 miles, it won't matter—he won't be the only drop-out.

Last year at View Royal other children dropped out, and only two teachers made it. When, at prize giving Miss Helen Becker and Miss Sheila Stewart presented awards to children who completed the 100 miles, they presented awards to each other, too.

Chris, with another 94 miles to go, may not complete the 400 circuits by the end of the year, but it won't matter.

His school friends and the teachers at View Royal are very proud of what he has achieved during the past few weeks.

History Professor To Speak

Dr. Toby Jackman, history professor at the University of Victoria, will address the Women's Canadian Club Monday on "Premiers of B.C."

A Harvard graduate, Dr. Jackman has been educated in British Columbia and the United States. He also spent some time in Clare College, Cambridge, England.

He has been teaching at Uvic four years and is the author of four history books.

Dr. Jackman will speak in the Newcombe Auditorium of the Provincial Museum, at 2:30 p.m.

AS SERVICE TO ELDERLY

Co-Op Car Pool Proposed

Mrs. A. Morgan wants to organize a co-operative car pool for people who have trouble getting around.

"There are a lot of elderly people in Victoria," she said, "and I have observed a lot of them getting on buses. They seem to have some difficulty doing so and then, too, they have to wait so long for a bus—that's hard on an elderly person.

"Then there are mothers who want their children to go to music or dancing lessons but are hampered by a small baby; and housewives who have to take the bus to go shopping."

Mrs. Morgan's proposed car pool would provide these people with transportation.

"Of course there would have to be a fee, to cover gasoline and car upkeep. Then if a lot of people wanted the service we would probably have to pay the drivers because this would be an all-day service, six or seven days a week."

But all this is still conjecture. Mrs. Morgan has thought of the idea but must contact other people to discuss ways and means.

Anyone interested in helping form this proposed co-operative car pool can contact Mrs. Morgan between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. at 383-8224 after Tuesday.

Grandmother Steers Bull by Its Tail

CALGARY (CP) — A bull weighs about 15 times as much as Edith Santee, but the perky little grandmother from Ponoka, Alta., steers it around by the tail.

At a recent sale she tucked an armful of hay in front of a bull's nose as it lay like a lump of red clay in the straw.

Then she pressed her thumb in the bull's back at a point just above the base of its tail. It struggled to its feet and stood quiet as a lamb.

She grabbed its tail and began to twist. "See, you just turn it this way if you want him to go in the opposite direction. Works every time."

Edith has been coming to Calgary bull sales for nearly 15 years. She and her husband Oron raise purebred Herefords on a farm near Ponoka, 110 miles north of here.

"It's the very spot where my grandparents lived in the early days and I love it," she said.

"It's those cows and calves that get me. They get to be like your own family. In that cold weather this winter my cattle were in the open shed and corral. They froze a little around their noses when it got to 62 below but they held their own."

A couple of years ago, she recalls, "I had one little bull calf that I found outside during a cold spell."

"I thought he was dead. But I took him in the house and bedded him down in my sewing room.

"I rubbed him all evening and gave him a shot. By golly, around midnight I heard him thumping around. I've got him here at the sale."

Edith likes meeting the visitors who come to buy her stock. She keeps a freezer stocked with baking so she can put on the coffee pot and serve a snack while they are at the farm.

"When I retire I want to go around and visit all the folks who bought our bulls. They've all been so nice."

She was only hurt once by an animal. Her apron blew up in the wind and scared a bull which then kicked her in the thigh.

"But he brought $1,000 at the sale that year so I didn't feel the kick very much."

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

In your Easter bonnet . . .

Take our word for it . . . if you dream of sauntering forth on Easter morning wearing the most beautiful hat you've ever owned . . . the only place to shop for such a chapeau is Miss Frith's . . . because they have one-of-a-kind models which are absolutely stunning! . . . Take the beautiful wide-brimmed natural leghorn hat with the Christian Dior label, for instance . . . There's a band of white organdy edging the brim . . . a big, feminine organdy bow in front . . . Here's a hat in the romantic tradition . . . lovely foil to your prints . . . smashing with a plain suit! . . . Another Dior hat is of white toyo panama with a mohair and organza pleated frill around the brim . . . a touch of color is the narrow turquoise ribbon encircling the crown . . . New is the "petticoat" brim which appears on another white imported hat . . . layers of mohair and straw braid rippling like the bottom of an old-fashioned petticoat . . . Another wide brimmed leghorn hat which caught our fancy has a big bunch of flowers at the back . . . and there's a delicious mint green toyo with round crown, turned-up brim full of green lilies of the valley and other flowers we can't put a name to . . . We also noticed numerous very smart straw hats, tailored in mood, in various colors at . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Hairstylist Vidal Sassoon of London, has now opened a salon in Toronto.

Something for everyone among Wilson's dresses . . .

Wilson's buyers . . . who've been covering Europe pretty thoroughly for the past couple of months . . . are due home this weekend . . . and we've been kept informed, via the mails, of the beautiful and exclusive merchandise which will soon be arriving at Wilson's for the delectation of Victoria shoppers . . . No need to wait, however, because Wilson's have some very exciting imported clothes right now . . . Don't think we've ever seen a better selection of dresses for spring and summer . . . fresh, light, easy to wear and to care for dresses . . . with the definitely new look of 1969 . . . There's something for every woman in this group . . . no matter what her size . . . or her age! . . . You'll find beautifully cut, classic shirtwaist dresses in pure silk . . . lovely little gossamer—fine printed wool dresses from Vienna . . . English crimplenes, which not only look terrific, but actually improve with laundering! . . . There are Liberty silks . . . some delightful printed chiffons with the new panel pleat skirt and wide-cuffed long sleeves . . . Moygashel linens in white or sunshine shades . . . Many of the new dresses have sleeves . . . short or long . . . there's more shape than we've seen for some time . . . and skirts tend to pleats and flares . . . so flattering to most figures . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Do as the French do . . . thread a long scarf through the links of a chain belt . . . to wear with slacks.

Rain-and-shine coats with admirable chic . . .

We don't know why they're called "Gangsters" . . . because seldom have we seen anything less gangsterish in appearance . . . but that's the name of some new raincoats hot off the ship from London . . . and now reposing at the Madam and Eve Shop . . . These are light-as-air 100% nylon, with an almost cire shine . . . They zip right down the front, and are elasticized at the waist . . . come in bright yellow, red, and navy . . . and we consider them very modestly priced at just $27 . . . If you're planning any travelling, one of these coats is just the thing to stow away in your suitcase . . . Nice for defying summer showers here at home, too . . . We also saw a couple of natural tussah coats at M & E which we were surprised to learn are also raincoats . . . One has a concealed front closing, with the popular half-belt and panel pleat in back . . . the other style has low belt running through gold buttoned tabs . . . inverted back pleat for easy striding . . . Both these models are extremely smart, and could be worn as appropriately under the sun as in the rain . . . Perfect coat to see you through the summer, and not expensive at $55 . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Soapy Problems Solved by Gripper

By PENNY SAVER

Gladys came into the kitchen shaking her hair out of its shower-cap crumple. Her face, completely free of make-up, had the bright pink glow that only hot water and a brisk towelling can give. "Showers," she observed, pouring herself a cup of coffee, "are marvellous. But I do wish the man who designed this house had thought to put the soap dish a bit higher." I made an agreeable noise and we both slipped into silence. "Then there is the washcloth," she said suddenly. "It always falls to the bottom of the tub and I have to bend over at great risk to life and limb to retrieve it." Again I nodded. "There must be something that will help," she concluded with a sigh.

There is, Gladys. I was walking through a store just the other day when I came across packages of rubbery discs, perhaps three inches in diameter, covered on both sides with many, many little suction cups. These, the packages proclaimed, were soap grippers.

Each is made of an odorless, flexible, easy-to-clean substance and there are several colors and white to choose from. When this gripper is dampened it will stick to any smooth surface, for example the wall of the shower. Then when one wants to put the soap down, one just presses it to the other side of the gripper and it is held on the suction cups. This will work with any size or shape of bar. This same gripping action makes these discs ideal coasters for glasses or cups. For 69 cents there are plain discs while a disc with a double prong for holding a wash cloth and perhaps a bath brush is 79 cents. The prongs are made of metal tipped in plastic for safety.

Sliding Towel Bar

The husband of one of my friends decided to remodel the area around her kitchen sink so there would be more useable cupboard space. One of his additions was a sliding towel rack to keep dish cloths and drying towels out of sight and he told me where the average handy man can buy one. These sliding towel racks cost $2.25 each. This includes the slide unit which looks like stainless steel and three chromed towel rails. Since the unit is rust-resistant it can go in a dampish spot. Screws of the right size are included, as are instructions for installation.

For 65 cents one can install a lightweight towel rail on any door or wall. This towel rail is held in place by suction cups which are available in several colors. The bar itself is made of chromed metal. This is handy for any light towels or wet lingerie, but please don't expect it to sup- a soggy bath sheet! The 65-cent rail is approximately a foot in length and there is a longer one fc 75 cents.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Recipe for Happiness

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I hope this doesn't sound like I am bragging, because I'm not.

I married when I was 16, and now, 19 years later, we have as happy a home as anyone could find anywhere.

These are some of the things I've done to make it so:

In the morning I wake my husband with a cup of fresh coffee and the morning paper. I've done this for years, but he always thanks me as though it is the first time.

When he comes home in the evening, I again have fresh coffee made and the afternoon paper. Regardless of what they are doing, the children always run to the door to greet him.

Before he gets home I make sure I have a fresh dress on, and that my face is nicely made-up, my hair combed, and when he comes in I leave all my problems of the day until he has had his dinner and had time to relax. And then I only bring them up if they are important.

Finally, after our evening meal, we read some passages of the Bible together and pray as a family.

When so many marriages are going on the rocks I simply offer these things as suggestions for a happy home.
MRS. R. S., SAN ANGELO.

DEAR MRS. S.: What a beautiful life you have. May it ever be thus. I'll print your letter as an inspiration to others.

Omnibus Bill Sent On Way

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed new laws on abortion, homosexuality, impaired driving, firearms and lotteries passed another parliamentary hurdle this week as they won approval from the Commons justice committee.

The committee rejected seven attempts to kill or narrow the new therapeutic abortion clause, the most controversial portion of the 120-clause bill.

The 20-member committee began work on the Criminal Code amendments March 4 and Liberals, Conservatives and New Democrats engineered a number of minor changes.

The single major amendment to win passage went through against the wishes of the government and was proposed by Liberal C. Terrence Murphy, MP for Sault Ste. Marie.

It softened the penalties and procedure for a new provision that would make breath tests for blood alcohol compulsory and make a reading higher than eight one-hundredths of one per cent an offence.

The government is expected to try to reinstate the original penalties—the same as those for impaired driving—when the bill comes up for third reading in the Commons, its next major stage.

The abortion clause would follow therapeutic abortion where a hospital committee certifies that continued pregnancy would endanger the life or health of the mother.

PROVIDES A PENALTY

A separate clause would make it a crime liable to life in prison to destroy the foetus during labor, or "in the act of birth," except to save the mother's life.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said doctors might choose the "cruel and brutal" latter course to avoid the red tape of certification earlier in pregnancy.

However, Justice Minister John Turner said that only a direct and immediate threat to the mother's life could justify destroying the child during labor. Without such a threat, good faith would be in question at once.

Any injury that caused the child's death after it became a human being—once it had breathed, the nav-l cord was snipped, and it had an independent circulation—was homicide.

Only one of eight last-minute amendments to the abortion clause won passage. Moved by Douglas Hogarth (L—New Westminster), it would allow provincial health ministers to approve hospitals where abortion could be carried out.

The bill originally stipulated that the operation could take place only at the 401 hospitals accredited by the Canadian Council for Hospital Accreditation.

However, MPs worried that this might limit therapeutic abortion to urban areas, so they approved the Hogarth amendment to allow the extension of the law to smaller rural hospitals.

Auto Club Concerned

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Automobile Association says it is concerned the province's proposed automobile insurance legislation may be an economic hardship on students, persons on fixed incomes and those in the lower income bracket.

Lie Accuser Suspended

By The Canadian Press

The long and fiery debate over the recent tax increases brought down by Premier Louis Robichaud's Liberal government in New Brunswick reached the explosion point Friday when former opposition leader, J. C. Van Horne, called the premier a "liar."

The flareup occurred when Mr. Van Horne rose to ask the premier if no other purpose but incitement of the people had been served by his harsh reception Thursday to a delegation from Moncton protesting the new budget.

Mr. Robichaud replied that Mr. Van Horne was doing the inciting by bringing the matter up.

Mr. Van Horne then jumped to his feet and shouted:

"That is a deliberate lie and the premier is a liar."

Then he added that "furthermore I will resign if you are not a liar."

When Mr. Van Horne refused to withdraw the accusation, at the request of Speaker Robert McCready, Premier Robichaud moved that he "be suspended from the service of the house."

A voice vote carried along straight party lines—Liberals 31, Conservatives 27—after which Mr. Van Horne left the legislature.

Conservative house leader Richard Hatfield made a plea for reason and ended by asking the premier to withdraw his motion, but Mr. Robichaud refused.

Later, he agreed to meet with demonstrators protesting the announced $29,400,000 tax increase.

In other legislatures:

Quebec—The national assembly adjourned for the Easter recess after adopting supplementary spending estimates of $18,355,000 for the 1968-69 fiscal year ending March 31. The additional figure brings total expenditure by the government to $2,995,641,100, about $85,000,000 more than Paul Dozois, finance minister for the Union National government, forecast in his budget last spring.

Regina—The Saskatchewan legislature approved in committee controversial amendments to the Trade Union Act. One amendment would make it unfair for a union to refuse to handle shipments labelled as "hot cargo" because the shipments are en route to or from strike-bound plants, unless there is a valid trade dispute. The amendments must still be given third and final reading to become law.

Edmonton—The Alberta government of Harry Strom announced that no new taxes would be needed to help offset the costs of participating in the federal medical care plan. The province is to enter the plan July 1.

Drug Price Bill Passes Over Lobby

OTTAWA (CP) — A skimpy-looking bill aimed at reducing prescription drug prices, said to be higher in Canada than anywhere, was passed by Parliament Friday.

The bill, introduced more than a year ago, survived a powerful assault by the drug industry and MPs within both the Liberal and Conservative parties.

The legislation amends the Patent Act and Trade Marks Act to reduce the protection the foreign-dominated Canadian industry enjoys and open the market to cheaper generic, or non-brand-name, drugs.

Opponents of the bill, led by P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe North), a doctor, questioned whether the government can supervise the foreign drugs that are expected to become available.

Dr. Rynard also said the legislation may drive the industry out of Canada, causing unemployment and a loss of skilled researchers.

Proponents of the bill dismissed these arguments as red herrings and said the bill is a step towards bringing drug prices into line.

MAY GO FURTHER

New Democrats said the government should get into the industry through a Crown corporation and Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford hinted that if the current legislation does not work, the government may go further.

The Commons also passed a bill that will give the government regulatory powers over the labelling and packaging of "hazardous products."

This and the drug bill require royal assent and proclamation before becoming law. Six government bills were given royal assent in the Senate Friday.

They include a government reorganization bill that will establish new departments of regional economic expansion, communications and suppy and services.

The drug bill must return to the Senate for approval of several amendments made in the Commons.

Parliamentary drug inquiries have been told the only difference between generic and brand drugs is the package and the name.

Computerized Crime Fight Now Possible

MONTREAL (CP) — A New York law professor said Friday night a computerized crime-fighting system could be possible in 20 years, allowing definitions of crime to be standardized and offenders classified.

Prof. Gerhard Mueller of New York University was the guest speaker at the sixth research conference on delinquency and criminality sponsored by the Quebec Society of Criminology. The conference ends today with a round-table discussion on social defence and human rights.

Site of the meeting was moved Friday night from a building on the McGill University campus to a downtown hotel. The move was taken to avoid a demonstration that attracted 6,000 marchers who demanded that McGill become a French-language university.

SEES VAST PLANNING

Prof. Mueller told more than 200 social researchers, professors and criminologists:

"Perhaps by 1990 we shall have a computerized substantive criminal law system and a computerized procedural system. Anti-crime planning on a vast scale will be possible by that time."

VD Hits U.S. Army

LONDON (Reuters)— The Observer, a Sunday newspaper, reports that in one American military unit in South Vietnam an estimated seven out of 10 men become infected with venereal disease each year. The report says gonorrhea has developed resistance to a whole range of antibiotics.

Union Politics Blamed for Merger Deadlock

Local labor officials say union politics is the main hold-up to a merger of Canada's two big postal unions.

The fact that both the leader of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers and the leader of the Letter Carriers Union come from the same post office in Montreal was described as "symbolic of the national malaise" Thursday by Larry Ryan, secretary of the Victoria Labor Council.

Postal employees are trapped "in a house divided against itself," he said. One of the main complaints about separate unions for postal workers is the cost required to run them.

"You have the ridiculous situation where a representative of one union is coming here from Vancouver on one ferry to do some business, while a representative of the other union is going the other way on another ferry after attending to some minor work.

"Both are doing something either one of them could have handled alone."

Ryan laid the blame for failure of the two big unions to merge on the leaders.

"It is the most deplorable example of inept union leadership."

Gerry Kenny, president of the Victoria local for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said postal workers across the country had voted 60 per cent in favor of the merger, while letter carriers had also supported the merger by 54 per cent.

However, the expected merger has been put off by the letter-carriers union which says the move can't take place until its constitution has been changed at the union conventioa in August.

"Our local is actually fed up with all this legal business," Kenny said.

H said the Victorial local had not received replies Thursday to wires sent Sunday to other union locals making a formal complaint about the fact the merger had fallen through.

Baron Visits Here to Push International College Idea

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Can six youths speaking six different languages share the same room in the same college?

"Yes," says Lord Hankey, "and they have all kinds of fun trying to understand each other."

Lord Hankey, an English baron, is here to tell Victorians about the United World College of the Atlantic near Cardiff, Wales.

Soon he hopes there will be a United World College of the Pacific in Victoria or Vancouver.

"Much depends on the extent to which the government of British Columbia is interested," Lord Hankey said.

He called on Education Minister Donald Brothers Friday and said he was encouraged by the minister's response.

"Eventually we could have United World colleges of the Pacific in Victoria, Vancouver and Tokyo. It would be a glorious enterprise."

HOUSED IN CASTLE

Lord Hankey, 63, is a governor of the United World College, and housed within the grey stone walls of a medieval castle at Llantwit Major, Wales.

In residence are some 300 youths aged 15 to 18 from 36 nations, including 37 girls. Sixty per cent of them are there on scholarships. The rest have to put up about $2,000 a year for two years.

Among the 28 Canadian students are Felicity Earnshaw from St. Ann's Academy and Michael Code from Victoria's University School.

Atlantic College, as it is usually called, teaches 11 languages and all the arts and sciences. It also teaches brotherhood, fellowship, cooperation and understanding.

"I'm proud to say we have been able to put these principles into practice," Lord Hankey said. "The days of preaching are over. We have to find ways of bringing the peoples of the world together — and that is what Atlantic College is trying to do."

STRESS INDIVIDUALITY

"We place particular emphasis on individuality. It would be absurd if we sent our students home as little Englishmen and it would be contrary to our whole purpose.

"We aim at a high calibre because we want these youngsters to be well representative of their countries. The general idea is to present the best of all countries.

Lord Hankey denied any suggestion that Atlantic College caters to a socially elite group.

"That is not so," he said. "But we do seek a high level of scholastic attainment, and we want youths who will represent their countries well.

"They need to be extroverts rather than the shy, retiring types who contribute little to a community."

Lord Hankey said many industrialists in Britain and Europe have given money to Atlantic College because they hope it will produce men who are internationally minded and able to represent them abroad.

"A man who has been trained at our college should be more at home in France, Germany, Sweden or Russia than a man from a traditional school because he learns so much about them from fellow students.

Youths at Atlantic College follow the normal high school curriculum but engage in many extracurricula activities.

LIFEBOAT SERVICE

Chief of these is manufacturing lifeboats and running a lifeboat service along the rocky coast of Wales.

"This is their pride and joy," Lord Hankey said, "and it offers the kind of adventure every boy really wants. Since 1962 they have saved more than 50 persons from death or serious injury."

Lord Hankey invited a number of educationists to a showing int he National Film Board Theatre Friday evening of a film on Atlantic College.

It revealed, not only the variety of subjects, but the variety of the students.

NEW PRESIDENT of 800 Pacific Wing, Royal Canadian Air Force Association, is George Aitcheson. He was installed by Alex Jardine, national president of the organization, with Rex Collard, first vice-president; Roy Kennedy, second vice-president, and Ora Collard, wing secretary.

DECISION ON WILL APPEALED

A Supreme Court judgment validating the 1958 will of Victoria millionaire Allan Douglas Ford will be appealed.

His son, John Douglas Ford — a radio news editor in Melbourne, Australia — cabled his lawyer in Victoria Friday to launch an appeal.

The lawyer, Donald Cameron, said the appeal will be filed at Victoria Law Courts next week.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton ruled the 1958 will was valid and dismissed an application to have an earlier will, dated June 8, 1933, probated.

The 1958 will was contested by Ford Jr. on the ground his father was suffering from delusions. One of them, he said, was that he (John Ford) was not his legitimate son.

Mr. Justice Wootton ruled that, for all his eccentricities, Ford was still capable of making a will in 1958.

Under the 1958 will, the bulk of Ford's $1,152,792 estate goes to Victoria charities with a bequest of $50.000 to the son.

If the 1933 will had been probated, John Ford would have received most of the estate with the exception of about $350,000 donated to local charities.

Trade Board Opposes Shop Centre

The Oak Bay Board of Trade is opposed to a new shopping centre on Foul Bay Road.

Board president Ella Mae Geddes said "perhaps in five years we shall have another 50 apartment buildings and then we shall be ready to welcome this type of development. We're very upset about the proposal."

The shopping centre is proposed to be opposite the existing one at Foul Bay and Fort, but this is in the city of Victoria because the boundary with Oak Bay runs down Foul Bay Road.

"In the first place it must be very obvious to everyone that there's barely enough to go round now," said Miss Geddes.

"A few businesses have closed down and there are many more operating on a one-man basis simply because they can't afford to hire staff."

Oak Bay council has called a public hearing for April 10 to consider the shopping centre proposal and a high-rise development on the former Victoria Riding Academy property.

Mayor Pledges Action On New Hospital Beds

If anyone drags his feet in the process of providing more hospital beds in the capital region the public is going to hear about it.

Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria, chairman of Greater Victoria and Gulf Island Regional Hospital District, will make a record setting out each step.

"It may be interesting to find out who is delaying what," said the mayor.

He was replying to a statement by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark who told the hospital district Friday to "get cracking." The minister said in the six months since the voters approved funds for 600 extended care beds, the board had recommended only one unit of 150.

FOR NORTH END

Mayor Stephen said his board had in fact recommended 240 beds — 150 for Gorge Road Hospital, 20 for Ganges Hospital and 75 for the north end of the peninsula (at an unspecified site).

The mayor said he didn't resent the minister's impatience, but he was going to set up a diary showing dates when recommendations are made to the minister's department.

When in Mexico, Watch Out for Red Ants

By HAL WILLARD
The Washington Post

OAXACA, Mexico — When our family decided to make a tour of Mexico by pickup truck-camper, we started right in worrying about roads, bandits, scorpions, tarantulas and Montezuma's revenge, otherwise known as the turistas.

Well, we spent 34 days travelling 5,525 miles and the only trouble we had was with an army of tiny red ants on the Yucatan Peninsula (which we defeated) and sand flies one night when we parked on a beach (which we outlasted, although barely).

Our truck-camper is designed for independent living. We can go about four days in time and 450 miles in distance without outside contact, barring catastrophe. With four of us aboard, at the end of the four days we need to fill our water tank and empty the waste disposal tank. Then we're ready to go again.

STICK TO PARKS

We carry an auxiliary gas tank so have a capacity of 44 gallons and can go a fair distance even though a ¾-ton 8-cylinder truck with automatic transmission will get a maximum of 10½ miles per gallon.

Even with the independence of a self-contained vehicle, it still is desirable to park for the night where campers are expected and wanted. When a trailer park is available, we use it. When one isn't available, we park where we feel we will be undisturbed and undisturbing: for example: a gas station or on motel grounds.

Sometimes the owner is happy to have you for nothing and other times he may ask for a token payment. But this is definitely emergency tactics because we prefer the pleasant surroundings of a good trailer park.

In Mexico, despite the fact that we went to isolated areas and that there aren't a lot of trailer parks in the first place, we spent only eight of the 34 nights in catch-as-catch-can facilities.

We were turned away only once. A garage owner in Villahermosa, with a large, cemented, fenced-in parking lot, apparently felt we were going to damage his cement with our tires. He spoke no English but had me talk to his daughter on the telephone to find out exactly what I wanted.

BOILED WATER

She had recently spent a year with a Norte-Americano family in Adrian, Mich., and seemed to understand our situation. But she said her father didn't want us there and told me about a nice, quiet street off the main highway nearby, where we spent the night without incident.

I hope the people in Adrian were nicer to her than her father was to us. But her father was the exception—the only inhospitable Mexican we met on our entire trip.

Food and water were no problem for us because we had our own kitchen. We boiled all except wash water, including teeth-brushing water. My wife boiled it by the quart and then stored it in the refrigerator.

From street markets, we bought only unpeeled fruit or vegetables that could be washed. Mexico has quite a few "supermarket" type stores, particularly in the larger cities, so buying canned goods and clean, unspoiled meat and other items was not a real problem although Yankee-type food was very expensive. We could store up supplies until we came across the next store where sanitary practices were apparent.

FRANTIC WAVES

The road to Mexico City from the Texas border has been fairly well-travelled by tourists, so we were not regarded with astonishment—although our type of vehicle doesn't exist in Mexico and is tremendously outnumbered among the camping Americans by trailers. We always attracted attention—usually frantic waves from people so obviously delighted at the sight of us that we had a generally euphoric feeling of being wanted throughout our trip.

It wasn't Yankee money that was wanted once we had fled the border area. We encountered only four adult beggars on our trip—two old women in the street, a blind woman being led along the beach at fabulous Acapulco by a child and a young man in Mexico City who said he needed money to get to Nuevo Laredo. We gave them all a little—as we did every small urchin who approached us—because they were made so happy by so little. And children approached us only in tourist centres.

The drive from Mexico City to Acapulco also was over a fairly well-traveled tourist trail. Xochilmilco, Cuernavaca and Taxco are famous spots and inundated by tourists during the "season" —as is Acapulco, but no tourist brochure, no travelogue movie, no Hollywood extravaganza can exaggerate the pure beauty of Acapulco Bay and its surroundings. It is even more entrancing than the last living color picture you saw of it.

SLUMS IGNORED

Of course, the pictures and brochures ignore the filth and primitive conditions of a slum area on a magnificent small bay just the other side of the mountain on which Las Brias, one of the world's most luxurious hotels, is located.

When we travelled back toward Mexico City as far as Cuernavaca to catch the road to Oaxaca, we found ourselves off the tourist route. We hurried through stark, barren, ominously rugged mountains to Oaxaca, truly an oasis: a patch of civilization a day's drive in two directions from other civilization and with nothing but mountains in the other two directions.

It was on the lonely road to Oaxaca (wo-hah-ka) that we began to remember our apprehensions about bandits, scorpions and spiders. We never saw a scorpion, thank you, but my wife spotted two gigantic tarantulas. They were in the road and so were we, but we were going 60 miles per hour. My wife has good eyes.

The closest we came to bandits was when two cattle rustlers were lynched by a cattle-owners' posse near Cuernavaca a week or so after we passed through.

MOMENT OF UNEASE

My moment of unease came at lunch en route to Oaxaca when we pulled to the side of the road deep in the mountains and in the next 45 minutes no living thing passed by in either direction. It was eerie and we wasted no time getting under way.

Leaving Oaxaca and struggling through another day's worth of tingling mountain driving put us on the road to the Yucatan, where we arrived a few days later—back in the regular tourist area. Add two weeks to your schedule if you plan to visit the Yucatan by road from Texas, or even from Mexico City.

All the Yucatan has is Indian ruins, but that is like saying that all the bank has is money.

We followed the Gulf Coast back to Texas in a week or so of leisurely but fairly steady travel. It was, of course, a pleasure to be home—but I somehow regretted the easy availability of pure water again. I had discovered that the excellent Mexican beer was an agreeable substitute.

Who Told Mother Penney About Hard-Boiled Eggs?

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica (CP) — Only a few miles from the cashmere-lined precincts of the Montego Bay Racquet Club there's a witch casting spells in the middle of a sugar cane field.

Local legend says Mother Penney is an obeah-woman, or practitioner of Jamaica's ancient cult of marshalling good or evil spirits to forecast the future and help out with the present.

Her satisfied customers from the resort hotels around the nearby international airport say Mother Penney is a morale booster of the highest order, a good witch to know in a world where the pundits prophesy doom and decay at every spin of the crystal ball.

Mother Penney's little cottage in the cane field is usually surrounded by a brood of grandchildren who scatter like chicks at the approach of strangers. The massive old lady herself, taking her ease on the porch in a costume including carpet slippers and headcloth, receives callers graciously, herding them in to the front parlor.

SILENCE DESCENDS

She distributes her clients in a sheepish circle around her tiny salon, sinks into a big armchair by the door and gazes blankly out beyond the windows into the poinsettia hedge. Silence descends over the company as Mother Penney awaits her cue from the spirit world. She moans slightly and slaps her forehead. All channels from the beyond seem to be blocked this evening. Perhaps the forthright approach would be best.

Under the crafty questioning of this good witch, everyone present chattily reveals nationality, occupation, matrimonial condition and general state of health. Mother Penney tactfully avoids sticky subjects like names and ages, but after the warm-up session the future opens up wide, clear and promising for all present. Everyone in the room is assured of long life, success in love and business, excellent health.

Then Mother Penney tosses a curve.

"You have a lot of trouble with your right leg, don't you?" she sympathizes, fixing one of the party with a penetrating stare. "Bothers you in the cold, eh?"

How could the far-seeing old witch know about that slipped disc, never troublesome during vacations but painfully limp-provoking after a session with the snow shovel on the front walk at home?

"You should eat more," she advises. "Eggs and things like that. Oh, you hate eggs. You never want to look at eggs, but you should eat two eggs a day."

EGGS JETTISONED

The tourist gulps, recalling the dozens of hard-boiled eggs jettisoned from hotel lunch boxes in the roadside ditches across Jamaica.

"You love the warm lands. Oh, stay here where it's warm. You'll have a long life then and be happy."

Panic. The vacation ends in a week.

"But you'll have a long life wherever you are," Mother Penney hastens to reassure. "And you'll be happy because you are so good. . . . You love to work. . . . You love housework. You love little children. . . ."

But even Mother Penney is losing interest in this snow job. She turns on the matronly red hen which has made an unexpected entrance from an adjoining room.

"Scat, you!"

Hysterical giggles sound from the veranda where the ruffled fowl, dignity shattered, retreats to the circle of saucer-eyed Penney progeny listening in on the latest seance. The veranda set wilts into respectful silence under Grandma's steely eye and Mother Penney turns to her next client, launching on a more interesing present with a livelier future.

"You are not married. You like to run. Oh, but you won't run forever. You will be happy. You will live long. . . ."

WHO TOLD HER?

Poor Mother Penney is falling asleep. The little sitting room grows dim with silence and long shadows.

Meandering back down the lane to the car, with the Penney children providing a bustling escort, the visitors contemplate their individual long and healthful futures in thoughtful silence. Silly, of course, because the old girl didn't tell any of them a thing they didn't know.

But who told her about the slipped disc and all those hard-boiled eggs?

W. GERMANY LIFTS NAZI LIMITATION

BONN (Reuters) — The West German government has announced it intends to abolish the statute of limitations restricting the prosecution of Nazi war criminals.

Justice Minister Horst Ehmke told the Bundesrat (upper house) Friday that the bill would be introduced before the end of the present legislature period in July.

The statute of limitations originally would have barred courts from opening proceedings covering Nazi murders and genocide after 1965, but the 20-year limitation was extended until the end of this year.

PLUG IT IN FOR SCENERY

NEW YORK — This year, at least five popular national parks in the U.S. and Canada will feature a new way of exploring nature.

The modern concept, inaugurated first in the United States at Rocky Mountain National Park and soon after at Great Smoky, is called the auto tape tour.

•

It will be offered starting May 1 at Glacier as well as Canada's Banff and Jasper.

As the name implies, the guided tours are for the sightseer on the move — a tape recorded commentary designed for automobile travellers who wish to take the guess work out of strange scenery passing by.

•

Through the use of a lightweight recorder that plugs into any car's cigarette lighter, motorists are told about the important features of the parks while actually viewing these highlights at the same time. The rental recorders will be available close to each park's entrance.

Mutineers Draw Stiff Sentences

FT. LEWIS, Wash. (AP)—Sentences ranging from nine months to six years at hard labor were meted out Friday to four young California soldiers convicted of mutiny.

Pvt. Ricky Dodd, 21, was sentenced to six years. Pvt. Harold Swanson, 19, received a three-year sentence; Pvt. William Hayes, 22, two years, and Pvt. Edward Yost, 23, nine months.

All were reduced to the lowest military rank and must forfeit all pay and allowances. Dodd, Hayes and Swanson are to be given dishonorable discharges. Yost is to be given a bad conduct discharge.

●

The four were convicted of mutiny Thursday for taking part in a sit-down demonstration in the stockade at the presidio in San Francisco last Oct. 14.

Four others of the 27 soldiers charged as a result of the demonstration were convicted earlier and received sentences ranging from four years to 16 years. One 15-year sentence was subsequently reduced to two years.

Saigon Censorship Bothers Both Sides

By JOSEPH B. TREASTER

SAIGON — For months, Khieu Thien Ke, chairman of the House of Representatives committee on the press and information, has been perplexed.

He and a handful of other legislators have been trying to establish a new set of regulations that would provide for a truly free press in South Vietnam.

But they have made little progress and the government has continued to shut down newspapers that fail to operate within the confines of a jumble of outdated codes and the whims of officialdom.

In the last nine months, since press censorship was "officially" eliminated, 24 newspapers and two magazines have been suspended — sometimes for as little as three days, in some cases permanently.

TAKE ADVANTAGE

"We have a serious problem," Ke said recently. "How do we have real freedom and democracy without letting the enemy take advantage of these principles?" he asked. "It is hard to get the Press Law out at this time."

Under the constitution adopted two years ago, a set of press regulations must become law by this November.

Whatever form of three drafts now under consideration is written into the constitution will probably provide for much less freedom than its framers or the journalists of South Vietnam would like.

GUIDELINES

But as the military and political situation in the country changes the law can be amended and, at least, there will be on paper, a set of guidelines for the government and the press.

Once the law is in effect, whimsical and arbitrary decisions by the government should be more difficult and the uncertainty thrust upon editors should be eased.

The existing press regulations date from the time of Napoleon and it is doubtful if anyone has ever read all of them, let alone tried to live with them.

EXISTING LAW

"The information ministry has never tried to strictly enforce the existing press law," said Nguyen Van Noan, the director of the National Press Centre. "Otherwise there would have been many more newspapers suspended.

"If all the articles were enforced to the letter, there would be no newspapers in Saigon at all," he added with a smile. "We don't know where we stand," said Nguyen Lau, publisher of the English-language Saigon Daily News, "One day the VC (Viet Cong) are banned, the next day they are to be recognized as a reality, but not an entity. .

"We are living a lie now," he went on. "People say they are giving you freedom and someone without experience in journalism may be innocent enough to believe that this is a paradise. Now you may be carried away by your illusions and land in trouble."

City Firemen Settle Wages

Victoria firemen have reached agreement with the city on new pay increases.

Negotiations brought to a conclusion this week will see city firefighters receive a 5.9 per cent increase this year and a further 5.5 per cent in 1970.

A four-year man will receive a $30 a month raise retroactive to January of this year and another $12 a month July 1. Similar boosts will be forthcoming next year.

The increases will cost the city $45,000 this year and $53,000 in 1967.

Fire department men with four years service will be receiving $649 a month at the end of this year and $691 a month by the end of 1970.

Policemen on the city force are still negotiating their pay increases with the city.

Ten Battles Grip S. Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese forces fought guerrillas in 10 battles across South Vietnam—one the closest to Saigon since the Viet Cong launched their spring offensive—and three American aircraft were shot down, military spokesmen said today.

The fighting left 251 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese dead at a cost of seven Americans and 10 South Vietnamese killed.

One of the downed aircraft was an Air Force B-57 twin-engined bomber, hit by ground fire Thursday near the coastal city of Qui Nhon. The crew members were rescued uninjured. The plane was the 351st fixed-wing aircraft lost over South Vietnam.

The other two were helicopters, whose loss sparked a 2½-hour fight only six miles northeast of Saigon, the closest fighting to the capital in the five-week-old offensive.

Infantrymen patrolling the area sought out the guerrillas and clashed with about 30 Viet Cong soldiers. They reported killing 10 at a cost of one American wounded.

In the central highlands early today, North Vietnamese troops assaulted a U.S. night bivouac under cover of a 50-pound mortar barrage. U.S. headquarters said several North Vietnamese broke through an outer perimeter of the camp, 245 miles northeast of Saigon, but were repulsed with the help of helicopters.

Far to the north, three miles below the demilitarized zone, American infantrymen and tanks killed 68 North Vietnamese in more than eight hours of fighting.

The U.S. command said a two-day running battle in the area around Cam Lo has cost the North Vietnamese 188 troops killed.

U.S. headquarters said Viet Cong gunners shelled about 15 bases and towns overnight, including the big American fighter base at Bien Hoa, 15 miles northeast of Saigon. Over-all casualties and damage were said to be light.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

MacKenzie Didn't Hang, Followers Did

By BOB BOWMAN

There were rebellions in Upper and Lower Canada in 1837-1838 which cost considerable property damage and loss of life, expecially in Lower Canada. The fighting in Upper Canada ended early in December, 1837, when William Lyon Mackenzie was easily defeated at Montgomery's Tavern outside Toronto and fled to the U.S.

Bowman

While fighting continued in Lower Canada, there was what would be called a witch-hunt in Upper Canada. When Mackenzie dashed for the American border, he left his carpetbag in Montgomery's Tavern and it was turned over to Lieutenant-Governor Sir Francis Head. It contained the names of all the members of Mackenzie's rebel organizations between Lake Ontario and Lake Huron.

Many of those people had done little more than give Mackenzie moral support, but the outcry against them became so great that many were forced to leave their homes and emigrate to the U.S.

MUCH BITTERNESS

It was a pity because some were descendants of United Empire Loyalists who had come to Canada in 1783 to escape American persecution. There was a great deal of bitterness along the border for many years after.

Fortunately there were few hangings. Samuel Fount and Peter Mathews were convicted of treason March 29, 1838, and hanged April 12. Lount, a blacksmith, had been a member of the legislature for Holland's Landing. He recruited a number of men for Mackenzie's "army" that gathered at Montgomery's Tavern.

Mathews had commanded a party that seized a mail coach on Dec. 7, and burned homes along the Don River. He and Lount were captured while trying to get to the U.S. border but Mackenzie was sheltered by friendly farmers along the way.

He probably would have been hanged if he had been caught, but was pardoned, allowed to return to Canada in 1849, and became a member of Parliament. His grandson, William Lyon Mackenzie King, was one of Canada's greatest prime ministers.

Other events March 29:

1632—France recovered Acadia and Canada by Treaty of St. Germain-en-Laye.

1766—Britain and France made agreement on money circulating in Canada.

1778—Captain Cook landed at Nootka, Vancouver Island.

1843—Sir Charles Metcalfe became Governor of Canada.

1848—Niagara River ran dry owing to ice jam.

1867—Confederation given Royal Assent by Queen Victoria.

1895—Royal commission on liquor (appointed 1892) made its report.

1906—Street railway employees in Winnipeg staged riot.

1927—Prohibition ended in Ontario.

1929—Hudson Bay Railway reached Churchill.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Madam, my seven year-old pug, has aged very badly but only in her face. I have read somewhere that face-lifting is now available for dogs. When I asked Madam's doctor about this, he just laughed. I think he thought I was kidding. —S.W.

DEAR S.W.: I hope you are. Practising plastic surgery on a pug's profile may be perfectly practical providing there is a medical basis for the operation, say to relieve eye irritation or remove external obstruction. But proposing a creaseless countenance for Madam is worse than impractical . . . it's preposterous.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our cat, Sharkey, is terribly susceptible to abscess. He gets them all the time, usually because he was careless enough to allow some part of his carcass to get into some other cat's mouth. I tried using hot packs on him to get these wounds ripe enough for the doctor to open. It didn't work because he wouldn't stand still for it. Then I tried using a heat lamp on the abscess area and he loves that kind of heat. I just thought I'd pass along this tip on heat lamps as being a handy way to heat up a cat's sore spots.—T.F.

★ ★ ★

COMMENT: Yes, heat lamps are handy. Because moist heat is desirable, dampen the hair in the affected area before heat is applied. Be sure the lamp is secure and cannot be knocked over. It should be positioned so the cat cannot burn itself. In this regard, some heat-loving felines, especially Siamese, may snuggle close enough to almost "broil" body and-or brain if allowed to do so.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a miniature Dutch belted rabbit nine weeks old named Flopsy. We would like to paper train him but it doesn't work. Do you have any suggestions for this?—L.S.

DEAR L.S.: Start Flopsy out with a large but shallow box with a layer of appropriate litter in the bottom Flopsy should be kept close to the bunny box until he is thoroughly familiar with it. Allow him freedom gradually, but in an ever-widening circle. Always be sure he is never more than a few hops from "home base." Chances are, he will continue to use it. Slip-ups are most likely to occur if Flopsy strays too far or becomes too excited.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: This is just a letter in defence of the skunk as a pet. Ours — his name is Little Stinker — is an affectionate, clean little companion. And I might say he has a keen nose and is very sensitive to bad odors. He won't stay around wherever there is a bad odor, like around a smelly garbage can. His pet hate is mothballs. He can't STAND them! —K.T.

DEAR K.T.: Right, Little Stinker, and most other skunks, have surprisingly sensiive noses. Where chemical warfare and skunks are concerned, it can be a two-way street. Camphor flakes have been blown under summer cottages and other skunky abodes causing the skunks to leave in a huff — and for good. It's prudent to blow the is an obvious and distinct advantage in firing first and getting out right away.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: When buying a canary, how can you be sure you are getting one that sings?—E.E.

DEAR E.E.: Listen to it. Stay around the aviary or shop long enough to hear the bird singing. If you're an evening shopper you may have a long wait, so try to stop by in the morning. And, of possible, pick the kind of a morning that would make YOU sing. If you should acquire a young bird who hasn't yet learned to sing from its elders, try to get a feathered tutor. Or, as a second choice, get a recording featuring canary Carusos.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Do slipped discs ever occur in the cat as they do in the dog? If so where are they found? My dogs, in the past, have had this problem. None of my cats ever has had.—H.S.

DEAR H.S.: Yes, slipped discs and related problems camphor flakes in fast. There occur about as frequently in the cat as in the dog. However, the cat's spine is much more tolerant. The disc changes in the feline may produce few, if any, symptoms.

Is It Possible to Switch The Soul With Organs?

By LESTER KINSOLVING

Kinsolving

The successful transplanting of human hearts has raised a theological question: Was the soul also transplanted?

One editorial writer in a secular journal contends that some religions have regarded the heart as the abode of the human soul.

Religions have also regarded the soul as synonymous with a person's breath, his shadow, his blood — or even as residing in his bowels. ("The bowels of the saints are refreshed by thee," writes St. Paul, in his Epistle to Philemon.)

Rene Descartes, one of the giants of philosophy and a devout Catholic, posited that the souls contact with the body is located in the pineal gland, between the two hemispheres of the brain.

Even more varied than the various theories as to the location of the soul have been the attempts to define it. Both philosophy and religion contain widely differing definitions of the soul — and Webster's dictionary lists seven such definitions.

Primitive religion regarded the soul as a non-material human image with independent consciousness as well as power over one's existence. This tendency to separate the soul from the body was due to the search for some permanence in human beings — in view of the observed and inevitable deterioration of the human body.

Christian concepts of the soul have been strongly influenced by Plato and Aristotle, both of whom believed in its existence. Plato, who believed that the soul was immortal, held that it was a shadowy substance which departs the dead body through either the mouth or a wound. He felt that the soul was synonymous with the intelligence, and thus a spark of divinity in man.

●

Aristotle held a similar esteem for the soul, but contended that the soul and the body are intermingled —even though he felt that creative reason is imperishable.

Early Christian theologians, such as Clement of Alexandria, Origen and St. Augustine were strongly influenced by Plato's separation of the soul and the body. St. Thomas Aquinas, on the other hand, in reconciling Christianity to Aristotlianism, opposed such separation. (Plotinus of Alexandria, 205-270 A.D., was reported to have blushed when reminded that he had a physical body.)

Modern theology, which is in increasing rapport with psychology, tends for the most part to regard the soul as the self, the personality, the character — even Sigmund Freud's categories of the id, the ego and the superego.

●

On the other hand, theology holds the soul to be definitely more than a mere stimulus response —even though the soul is unseen. Boston University theologian L. Harold DeWolf asks, "How can you see a thought" — and observes that some of life's greatest realities, from love to courage, are materially unseen.

The soul might be defined as all of a person except the physical — and yet not divorced from the body which is its earthly manifestation. The Judeo-Christian emphasis upon the unique and distinct significance of every human being precludes the restricting of a human soul to any physical organ. Hence, when Louis Washkansky of South Africa received a new heart, Christianity could hardly regard him as being another person — or having two souls, any more than if he had had a kidney and liver transplant or a blood transfusion.

●

The question becomes frightening complex, however, in contemplating the possibility of a large number of organ transplants in one human body. Given added consideration of a complete grafting of all the skin, would this be the same person as before the operation? And suppose the brain were to be replaced (in the course of future medical science) with a brain-sized computer?

While the human brain itself is an exquisitely designed computer, unless the basics of a person's life experience could somehow be programmed on the computer, the results could resemble either an amnesia victim, or worse, an automaton.

But, if such programming were sufficiently efficient, the result might be as preservative of the person's personality as either the removal of a brain tumor or a a frontal lobotomy.

One approach to his problem was made 35 years ago by theologian John Baillie: "Do not the bio-chemists tell us that even in the present life there is an almost complete renovation of all our bodily tissues within each seven-year period, so that there is no material but only a formal identity between the body I now have and the body I had seven years ago?"

BISHOP SCOTT
... from Kootenay

Bishop Slated To Talk Here

Christ Church Cathedral will welcome Bishop Edward Scott of the Kootenay as speaker at both the Maundy Thursday evening Eucharist at 8 p.m. and the three-hour devotional service on Good Friday beginning at 3 p.m.

Bishop Scott was consecrated in January 1966, the sixth bishop of Kootenay diocese.

Bishop Scott is secretary of the House of Bishops of British Columbia; chairman of the board of the Sorrento Lay Training Centre; secretary of the joint committee of the ATC and Union College; and a member of the primate's commission on marriage.

He Knows How To Push Bibles

WINNIPEG (CP) — How do you double the circulation of Bibles in Nepal?

For Rev. Russell T. Self, a former commercial salesman who likes to describe himself as a promoter, you solve the problem with a bit of market research.

As a missionary with the Canadian Bible Society and "a promotion man in market research," he solved the Nepal problem with ease:

The traditional black binding was replaced with a colorful jacket depicting a mountain top and the title was changed to The Way to Victory. Then Mr. Self sat back in justifiable pride as circulation jumped to 200,000 from 100,000.

In an interview here recently, he discussed his executive-level position in the service of God. It's a job that sends him 150,000 miles around the world in a year sometimes, by jet and often by donkey-cart.

With terms found usually in upper management he goes through the facts and figures of Christianity's growing impact in the heavily populated and predominantly non-Christian parts of the world.

Sometimes, he admits, "missionaries just don't have time to sort out motives" of converts.

Island Catholic Poll Shows Many Happy With Changes

In the Vancouver Island diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, there is too much experimenting and "too many changes for change's sake."

Such is the comment of 94 Roman Catholics who filled in part of a questionnaire circulated by Bishop Remi De Roo.

But 289 Catholics answered: "I am happy in my parish" and 271 said: "It is an active and healthy diocese."

These and many other comments will be the basis of a report to be made to Pope Paul in Rome by Bishop De Roo.

"This year the bishop decided all Catholics in the diocese should have the opportunity to become involved in the report," said Sister Teresa Alnwick, coordinator of what is called Project Contact '69.

GOOD RETURN

"Naturally those who filled in the questionnaire did not use the same words," she said, "I have grouped them according to the ideas they expressed."

The questionnaire was sent to more than 20,000 Roman Catholics throughout the diocese and contained the leading question; "What would you like me to tell the Pope about our diocese in my report?"

This is how some replied:

- 288 said they were satisfied with the progressive spirit of the diocese.
- 56 said they were dissatisfied with the pope's stand on birth control and said the decision rested entirely with the two persons involved.
- 38 complained that the clergy are "too distant" and lack dedication.
- 217 said there should be more unity among the people of different parishes, with the other parishes of the diocese, and more participation in church affairs by the laity.
- 192 said they were concerned because so many young adults, aged 18 to 30, who were raised as Catholics, do not now practise their religion. They called for more Catholic youth activities.
- 237 were concerned about education. Many wanted to see new schools opened; others wanted Catholic schools closed. The majority wanted more adult education and religious instruction.

OWN IDEAS

"We are very pleased with the response to Project Contact '69," said Sister Teresa, a teacher at Sacred Heart School, 890 Mackenzie.

"It shows at least that our people are mostly individualistic and have ideas of their own."

Part 1 of the questionnaire asked for background information.

Part 2 contains questions on family problems, religious problems and possible changes in the function of laity and clergy in the church.

"So far we have received more than 700 replies to Part 2," said Sister Teresa. "We haven't yet had a chance to categorize them."

MAN HOPES TO BE PRIEST AT AGE 67

ORCHARD LAKE, Mich. (AP) — Many priests retire at 65, but Francis Waligora hopes to get started in the priesthood after he turns 67.

Waligora, 61, a Polish native who lived in Chatham, Ont., achieved a lifetime goal when he enrolled at Orchard Lake's Saints Cyril and Methodius Seminary last fall.

"Always, from high school, it was my desire to become a priest," the short seminarian says.

It will take him six more years to be ordained, adding to the years spent at the St. Philip Neri pre-seminary Roman Catholic school in Boston.

Waligora, who spent most of his life in Poland, Italy and Czechoslovakia, was brought to Chatham by a war relief fund and finished high school there while working nights as a church janitor.

Wherever he went, though, he read theology in his spare time. How does he like studying with men about 40 years his junior?

"Oh, I like it," he says. "I feel young now."

Good Friday March Set for All Faiths

Christians of many denominations will march from Centennial Square to St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral on Good Friday starting at 7 p.m.

The second of its kind, the Easter march will be sponsored by Greater Victoria Council of Churches. The first march, organized last Good Friday by Dean Brian Whitlow, attracted 2,500 men, women and children, who packed every corner of Christ Church Cathedral.

This year the marchers will form up in Centennial Square at 7 p.m. After a dedicatory prayer, they will march along Douglas Street to View and then to St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral for an ecumenical service of witness.

RELIEF PROJECTS

All offerings will go to development and relief projects in another Victoria — the capital of Hong Kong.

Frank Rainsford, a member of Christ Church Cathedral and president of Victoria YM-YWCA, will give the address at the service.

Members of the Reach For The Top team, who recently returned from Hong Kong, will speak briefly.

"We hope the people of Victoria will look upon this Good Friday march as an opportunity to demonstrate visibly the unity of Christian people," said Rev. Leighton Streight of Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

"I found last year's march a tremendous emotional experience — an act of public witness."

Missionary From Zambia Visits City

A training college for Christian journalists has been set up at Mindolin, the newly-established Republic of Zambia.

"They are needed as writers for various publications put out by the churches," says Miss Muriel Bissel, a missionary for the United Church in Zambia, now visiting Victoria on furlough.

"Many of the students are native Africans who show considerable promise as writers."

Miss Bissel said many natives are also training as doctors, nurses, dentists, lawyers, missionaries and engineers. But white men, including British, Canadians and Americans, still hold most of the key executive positions.

A British journalist is editor of the daily newspaper, The Times of Zambia, He trains Africans as deskmen and reporters and employs many more on printing and production.

Miss Bissel is staying with Rev. Geoffrey Smith, minister of Gordon United Church, and Mrs. Smith, former missionaries in Zambia. She met them there in 1964 — the year Zambia became a republic.

Born at Elora, Ont., Miss Bissell trained as a social worker at the University of Toronto where she received a Master of Arts degree in sociology.

After social work for the Children's Aid Society in Toronto, she went to Zambia in 1964 to join the staff of the Mindolo Ecumenical Centre, operated by various church denominations.

"I hope to settle in Zambia," she said. "I work with students from many parts of Africa and it is a rewarding experience. The climate is agreeable — rarely hotter than 70 degrees or colder than 38."

Wearing a Citenge (native dress), Miss Bissel spoke at a meeting of the United Church Women's Presbyterial in First United Church Thursday.

Church March By Royal Roads Planned Sunday

Royal Roads Cadet Wing will attend church services in St. Andrew's Presbyterian and St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral Sunday.

After the services, the cadet wing will parade and the salute will be taken by Mayor Hugh Stephen from a base on Douglas Street facing St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The cadet wing will form up on the parade assembly area at Gordon Street in front of Eaton's garage.

Strikers Reject Offer

KIMBERLEY (CP) — Forty striking school board employees Friday unanimously rejected a board wage offer. Aubrey Burton, area representative of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the offer would have provided a base rate of $500 a month in the final six months of a 2½ year contract, $34 short of parity with civic workers. The employees struck March 7, closing eight schools.

Many Countries Have Honored King

Stamp News

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Good Friday is the first anniversary of the death of a great American, the civil-rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Martin Luther King Jr. was born Jan. 15, 1929 in Atlanta, Ga. He was a brilliant student; in 1948 he was graduated with an A.B. degree from Atlanta's Morehouse College. Continuing his education, he earned a B.D. from the Crozer Theological Seminary, and a Ph.D. from Boston University. In 1954 he was appointed pastor of the Dexter Street Baptist Church in Montgomery, Ala.

In Montgomery, Negroes had to sit in the back of buses. A turning point occurred Dec. 1, 1955 when Mrs. Rosa Parks wouldn't give a white person her seat and move to the rear of the bus. Subsequently, Mrs. Parks was arrested for her uprightness. In the style reminiscent of Mahatma Gandhi, Dr. King led the Negro community in a non-violent boycott against the Montgomery bus companies.

After extremists tried to blow up King's house on Jan. 30, 1956, Dr. King said in a speech: "He who lives by the sword will perish by the sword . . ." In Dec. 1956, the federal government stopped the Montgomery bus segregation, and the 382-day-old boycott came to an end. The young Baptist minister was now internationally known.

A 35c stamp released by Liberia July 11, 1968 shows King in front of the Lincoln Memorial. Above this monument on the stamp is the inscription: "I have a dream." On Oct. 1, 1968, the Turks and Caicos Islands issued three commemoratives showing Dr. King and a long line of protest marchers. Three signs visible in the line read: "work," "freedom" and "justice."

In 1964, Dr. King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. A 55-franc stamp issued by Dahomey June 17, 1968 shows him after receiving this prize. "We must meet hate with creative love" is written in English, French and German on the 30-franc value in the Dahomey set.

On April 4, 1968, a sniper killed Dr. King on a motel balcony in Memphis, Tenn. The first stamp that I know of honoring King was issued by Mexico June 8, 1968. (Ironically, June 8 was the date of Senator Robert F. Kennedy's funeral.) The postage stamp features a portrait of King and a white dove, allegorical of peace.

Dr. King's funeral took place in Atlanta April 9. On the way to the cemetary, many thousands of people walked behind his coffin; carried on a farm wagon pulled by two mules.

Liberia released four adhesives July 11, 1968 paying tribute to this apostle of non-violence. The 15c pictorial shows Dr. King and the mule-drawn hearse. President Kennedy is featured on the 55 cent stamp congratulating King after receiving the Nobel Peace Prize.

Among the other places that have issued stamps honoring Dr. King are Ajman, British Virgin Islands, Cameroun, Congo Republic, Guinea, India, Mali, Montserrat, Niger, Rwanda, St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, and Western Samoa.

SIRHAN
. . . political action

Psychiatrist Says Sirhan Not in Trance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sirhan Bishara Sirhan did not go into childhood trances and "his assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy was motivated by political reasons," a psychiatrist who spent 200 hours studying the young Jordanian and his background said Friday.

The testimony by Dr. Seymour Pollack was at odds with what was previously said at Sirhan's murder trial.

Pollack, a professor of psychiatry at the University of Southern California, was testifying for the state in rebuttal when the trial recessed until Tuesday out of respect to former president Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Another state rebuttal witness, handwriting expert Laurence Sloan, disputed a defence contention that Sirhan was in a self-induced state of hypnosis when he wrote repeatedly in his diaries that Kennedy must die.

"I believe Sirhan developed into a young man with what is called a paranoid personality," said Pollack in agreement with defence psychiatrists and psychologists.

'REASONS POLITICAL'

But although Sirhan was mentally ill to that extent, Pollack said, the assassination was for political reasons "which were highly emotionally charged."

Sirhan's mother and a brother, Adel, had testified that during the strife that preceded the partition of their native Palestine in 1948, Sirhan went into trances at times after seeing scenes of war.

"Sirhan recalled all of these to me quite clearly—all of these were conscious experiences," said Pollack.

Vatican Prelate Married in Rome

ROME (AP) — Former Msgr. Giovanni Musante, the closest prelate to the Pope to quit the priesthood, was married today in a Rome church.

Musante, 49, formerly ranked 11th in the papal household, left the priesthood after more than 25 years as a prelate. His bride was Giovanni Carlevaro, 37.

The ceremony was performed in Rome's 15th century Santa Maria Della Pace church, which was quietly reopened for the occasion. The church is usually closed to the public.

Musante's case caused a furore in the Vatican.

When the news was leaked out to the press one month ago, Vatican prelates claimed he was mentally unbalanced and accused him of "sexual delirium."

Musante, a stocky, ruddy-faced man, denied the accusations, saying he was a normal man. In a recent interview with The Associated Press, he stressed he was remaining in the Roman Catholic faith.

FAITH UNCHANGED

"I am a Catholic and so is my financee. I have left the priesthood, but my faith is unchanged," he said.

Musante also denied he left the priesthood to marry, saying he took the decision months before he met his bride. He said his meeting with Miss Carlevar merely speeded up his request.

Pope Paul himself released Musante from the priesthood after the Vatican tried vainly to convince him to stay.

Although the closest man to the Pope to quit the priesthood and marry, Musante is not the highest-ranked prelate to do so. Earlier this week, it was announced that a former auxiliary bishop of Lima, Peru, had married an Argentine policewoman in Buenos Aires.

After the service, the assembly ceremony will be held outside the church, followed by the return march.

Ontario Nears Medicare Entry

OTTAWA (CP)—With some "heroic" administrative effort Ontario could join Alberta in entering the national medical care insurance program July 1, federal officials say.

Alberta ended speculation Thursday about its starting date by announcing this would be July 1, but the feeling here is that Ontario won't come in until toward the end of the year.

Ontario is conducting intensive talks with federal officials in apparent preparation for joining, although no formal commitment to do so has been made. Private insurance carriers say the province is aiming at a July 1 starting date.

Health officials say it would take heroic efforts to put the province in position to bring 90 per cent of its population of 7,392,000 under the umbrella of the federal plan.

Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Manitoba begin operaing under the plan April 1. Saskatchewan and British Columbia have participated from the start July 1, 1968.

QUARTER COVERED

Thus, nationally, at April 1 one-quarter of Canada's 21,000,000 people will be covered under the federal program. Ontario and Alberta, when they come in, will boost coverage to about 67 per cent.

New Brunswick is the next probable adherent, perhaps by next Jan. 1 or earlier. The province's substantial tax increase may be a sign of a move to join up.

Prince Edward Island is expected to reassess its position now that it has signed an economic development agreement with Ottawa.

Quebec remains a question mark, at least insofar as timing is concerned.

Federal authorities expect the province's 6,000,000 residents to join eventually. But they say that in virtually starting from scratch it will take many months to implement a decision to come in.

Even before the federal program gets fully under way serious worries are being expressed about controlling costs. Study groups were set up this month by federal and provincial governments to examine the price and delivery of medical care.

The work of these groups is part of a wider study that includes hospital care and services and public health services.

The burning question in the medical care study is the effectiveness of deterrent or utilization fees in controlling costs. Saskatchewan has furnished the first Canadian evidence that such fees do limit use of medical services.

UTILIZATION DROPS

In Saskatchewan, the government a year ago instituted deterrent or utilization fees of $1.50 for each visit to a doctor's office and $2 for a house call. The patient paid these basic charges, the insurance paid most of the rest of the bill.

Instead of the usual annual rise in per capita utilization of about four per cent, utilization declined last year by 4.4 per cent. There were nearly 300,000 fewer office visits for minor procedures, a decline of 15.3 per cent.

The problem this evidence raises is whether the fees interfere with access to medical care by the public.

Access to care is a fundamental part of the federal act that authorizes Ottawa to pay half the average per capita costs of medical care insurance in participating provinces.

The Medical Care Act specifically stated that to qualify for federal money a provincial plan must furnish insured services on uniform terms and conditions to all insurable residents—that is, to 90 per cent of the population at the start.

Then the act adds that the provincial plan must provide reasonable compensation to the doctors and must not raise barriers against "reasonable access to insured services," either directly or indirectly, by "charges made to insured persons or otherwise."

The problem federal authorities are wrestling with is whether the Saskatchewan fees are substantial barriers to access to medical services. If they are, they would be unacceptable as cost-controlling mechanisms.

A clear picture of expected total costs is unobtainable, partly because the formula for payments is calculated on the basis of participating provinces and partly because of uncertainty about the joining dates of certain provinces.

However, to be on the safe side the federal government has included in the 1969-70 spending estimates a total of $370,000,000 which would probably cover cost of participation in all provinces in that fiscal year starting April 1.

Federal payments in the fiscal year ending March 31 totalled $35,000,000 on the basis of Saskatchewan and British Columbia participation starting last July 1.

Provincial guesses about the cost for the three provinces joining April 1 this year are:

Newfoundland, $13,000,000 or $14,000,000 with Ottawa paying $10,000,000; Nova Scotia, about $28,000,000 with Ottawa paying $15,600,000 or more; Manitoba $55,000,000 with Ottawa paying $26,000,00.

FORMULA FLEXIBLE

Provinces whose medical care service costs are generally lower than in other provinces get more than half their bill paid by Ottawa because the formula is geared to payment of half the average per capita costs of participating provinces.

Health Minister John Munro estimated last month that if Ontario joined then and there the federal payment to the province for the rest of this calendar year would be some $175,000,000, out of an esimated total of $350,000,000.

For Alberta, one calculation that has been used in discussions here is that the province's total cost would be some $69,000,000 in a 12-month period in which Ottawa would pay between $32,000,000 and $33,000,000.

LAW MAN DISBARRED ON THEFT CHARGES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The law society of British Columbia Friday disbarred a one-time magistrate and said it has approved payment of $18,000 to persons who lost money to him while he practiced as a lawyer.

Alexander McDonald last October pleaded guilty to theft of more than $150,000 from individuals, companies and estates during a six-year period. He was sentenced to five years.

The law society said it has paid $5,000 on each of two claims for losses due to him. A committee now is studying 14 more claims, said secretary Vic McCallum.

Payment on the two claims is subject to a two-month delay, the period allowed McDonald to appeal the decision to disbar him.

POLICE PUSH demonstrators back as march on McGill campus threatens to get out of hand Friday night. Demonstration in favor of turning McGill into French language college was kept under control by heavy cordon of police. (CP Wirephoto)

Police Quell Outbreaks At McGill Demonstration

By STAN McDOWELL,
Times Ottawa Bureau

MONTREAL — The march on McGill that was to "bring down the Bastille" sputtered out early today in a spree of window-smashing and trash-basket arson by gangs of roving teenagers.

The leaders of the demonstration, president Raymond Lemieux of the unilingualist Ligue pour l'integration scolaire, and Stanley Gray, suspended McGill university political science lecturer, took refuge behind police lines when violence began briefly to break out of control.

The promised alliance of students and workers never came off.

Both the Confederation of National Trade Unions and the Montreal Labor Council gave the march their blessing but no more than a handful of marchers.

MOSTLY JUNIORS

The vast majority of the 6,000 to 8,000 demonstrators came from Quebec's system of junior colleges, many of them bussed in from as far away as the Quebec City area and Hull.

Lemieux, Gray, and other major figures in the demonstration had insisted that if there was violence it would come from the police.

There was violence, but it was not from the police.

The cordon of Montreal city police across McGill University's Roddick Gates at the main Sherbrooke Street entrance — many of them very young and with the eyes of scared boys — stood rock-solid under a barrage of cans, the occasional bottle, burning trash, placards, and broken hockey sticks thrown like spears while Lemieux and Gray sheltered behind them out of their followers' throwing range.

FIERY WEAPON

One demonstrator, easily identified by his crash helmet lettered in white with D. H. Lawrence's favorite four-letter word, set a heavy-handled placard on fire, waited until it was burning well and then threw it from a range of less than three yards at a policeman's face.

A half hour later the same demonstrator screamed "gestapo" and "brutality" when another policeman pushed him lightly on the shoulder and said "please move along."

Reporters covering the march and demonstration were unanimous in finding the police work cool, efficient, and often actually courteous.

A minority of the demonstrators, some of them familiar faces from the St. Jean Baptiste night riots when Prime Minister Trudeau's life was threatened, were clearly working to provoke an angry police charge.

ONE-MAN TARGET

They would pick one man as a target, toss projectiles at his face and firecrackers under his legs, and then send one of their supporters up front to talk to him:

"How much do the English pay you to sell out to them? Stinking sellout. It's nauseating. You're so scared I can smell it from here. Better go change your pants."

When the police finally moved, after close to two hours of this confrontation, they cut across Sherbrooke Street in front of the gates in a tight wedge, moving slowly enough to give demonstratos time to get out of their way, and cutting the crowd in two.

WEDGE ATTACK

From there they drove the demonstrators back in both directions, always moving slowly enough to keep down panic, and splititng the crowds again at intersections to drive parts of it up and down the cross streets.

Some 1,000 demonstratos managed to work their way into

Montreal Man Dies In Fire; Arson Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — One man is dead, four persons are in hospital and an arson investigation is under way following a five-alarm fire that raged through a downtown four-storey apartment block early today.

The man's body was recovered after the blaze was brought under control. His identity was not immediately released.

Fire department authorities said they suspect arson and an investigation was launched immediately.

Among the injured was a man who jumped out of a third-floor window and both of whose legs were broken. He also suffered burns all over his body.

A woman who jumped from a second-floor window suffered back injuries.

STAIRS COLLAPSE

The fire was believed to have started on the ground flor of the 60-unit wood-and-brick building. Flames raced to upper floors, causing stairways to collapse in showers of sparks and flaming timber and hampering rescue operations.

One policeman was overcome by smoke.

The fire occurred about two blocks from the scene of a lengthy demonstration against McGill University by about 6,000 persons demanding it should become a French-language institution.

After the evening demonstration several groups of demonstrators roamed the surrounding area setting fires in trash baskets and setting fire to the placards they had been carrying.

Miss Evett Boyer, building superintendent, said she apparently was the first to notice the blaze and ran through the corridors shouting warnings and pounding on doors.

STAGE COLLAPSES 11 STUDENTS HURT

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Eleven persons were taken to hospital Friday night after part of a temporary stage collapsed at a school during a choral performance.

Hospital officials said the 11, all believed to be students, were being treated for leg, chest and other injuries. They were members of the 250-strong Fraser Valley Christian Choral League.

A crowd of 600 watched in shock as the centre section of the bleacher-type stage collapsed at New Westminster secondary school.

Ministers Must Quit, Says Tory

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Eldon Woolliams said Friday that Transport Minister Hellyer and Rural Development Minister Jean Marchand should resign if they leaked information about the new Montreal airport before the decision was announced in the Commons.

Mr. Woolliams said in the Commons that his information was that the two ministers prepared videotape recordings of the airport announcement prior to the time the airport announcement was made in the Commons Thursday.

He spoke of the possibility of land speculation and compared the premature announcement of such an event with a leak of tax measures prior to a budget speech.

In Toronto, the Globe and Mail reported that Mr. Marchand confirmed outside the Commons Friday that he and Mr. Hellyer taped the announcement last weekend, five days before it was announced in the House.

In Hamilton, Mr. Hellyer Friday refused comment on Conservative demands for an inquiry into the matter and said he would have nothing to say until he makes a statement in the Commons.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux held the whole matter in abeyance until he could hear statements by the two ministers,

Insurance Firms' Role Questioned

Russian Moderates In Saddle

By ANATOLE SHUB

MOSCOW (WP) — Moderate forces appeared to be gaining the ascendancy Friday in the broad Kremlin foreign policy reappraisal now believed to be under way.

These were some of the indicators:

● An authoritative editorial occupying half the front page of Pravda, devoted to the subject of communist unity, took a virtually Rumanian approach. There was no condemnation or even mention of China, West Germany, or Israel. The only attack on the United States was a reference to "the continuing armed aggression of the United States in Vietnam."

● Furthermore, Pravda defined as the "highest norms" or relations between communist parties "strict observance of (their) independence, equality and sovereign rights." This, again, is the position taken by the Rumanian, Italian and other European "heretic" parties.

(Pravda did not, however, include the final chord in the Rumanian litany — non-interference in the internal affairs of other parties and countries.)

'SEA OF PEACE'

● Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny is a speech Thursday night in Algiers reported in Friday evening's Izvestia, struck several notably moderate notes. Referring briefly to the presence of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterannean, he drew the conclusion that "the Mediterannean Sea should become a sea of peace and quiet" — a rather different line from those Soviet propagandists who had been angrily justifying the presence of the Russian fleet.

● The Soviet press downgraded the departure Thursday of East German Communist chief Walter Ulbricht. Sovietskaya Rossiya, a newspaper often identified with Soviet party secretary Leonid Brezhnev, gave Ulbricht's departure the identical, brief display as that given the Belgian communist leader M. Driumeau. Ulbricht left here after three days, reportedly in a huff, without having seen Brezhnev, Podgorny or Premier Alexei Kosygin. Senior Soviet party secretary Mikhail Suslov, who likewise avoided Ulbricht after the first day of his visit, pointedly saw the Belgians off.

Who Wrote Bill? Opposition Asks

By JOHN MIKA and JOHN SLINGER

Opposition members Friday night charged the government with using the Legislature's committee on auto insurance as a screen for the "real" committee of insurance industry representatives who helped draft the legislation brought in this week.

In debate on second reading Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) and Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East contended that the insurance companies collect $75,000,000 yearly in prepaid premiums from British Columbia motorists and make major profits from investment of these funds.

Social Credit members rejected opposition calls to "hoist" the amendments to the Motor Vehicles and Insurance Acts until next session to give more time for study of the provisions introducing compulsory limited no-fault insurance and prohibition of lawsuits over $250 for collision repairs.

Before the bills passed in a division of 28 Socreds over 19 NDP and Liberals, Attorney-General Peterson claimed the average car owner should see at least 5 per cent and up to 21 per cent reduction in his current premiums.

MISLEADING

Opposition MLAs, however, claimed this was misleading and more persons would pay higher premiums as well as become involved in the headaches of mounting lawsuits in small debts courts.

Gardom said both the government and the insurance industry had been "less than whole-heartedly frank" in not disclosing to the public the large profits received on investments of pre-payments which really belong to the motorists.

"We say that those insurance companies should be made to pass on some of those investments rewards to the motorists who will be compelled by the law to buy private insurance policies," said Gardom.

"At the very least, they should be required to give every motorist a discount, computed on annual bank interest, on any pre-paid premium."

Macdonald used the point to argue for a government-operated plan

"You are not putting British Columbia first," he charged the Socreds. "You are putting other countries first because that $75 million is social capital raised from this province and its should be invested back in British Columbia and used for the benefit of our people."

FACE INCREASE

Gardom said car owners face an increase of 18 to 25 per cent in their premium costs because the prohibition on lawsuits over $250 for collision repairs will force all drivers to buy collision policies at greatly increased prices.

Slide Tumbles Car

CASTLEGAR (CP)—A mudslide near this Kootenay community Friday night tumbled a car carrying the manager of the British Columbia Chamber of Commerce, his wife and young child 100 feet down an embankment. Reginald Clark of Port Coquitlam suffered back and leg injuries and was released from hospital. His wife, Mary, was in satisfactory condition with cuts and bruises. Their son Kelvin Russell, 3, was unhurt.

Protesters Fight

LONDONDERRY (Reuters)—Fighting broke out at a demonstration by 10,000 civil rights marchers today when a man wearing a crash helmet started waving a British flag. The protesters were seeking more rights for Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority.

Rival Factions Clash In Anguilla Unrest

ANGUILLA — Opposing factions clashed bitterly Friday in Anguilla while waiting at the airport to meet Lord Caradon, Britain's United Nations representative.

British flags were torn, blows exchanged, and a girl had her dress torn off as a small group of demonstrators, singing "Rule Britainnia" and shouting "Lee (British Commissioner Anthony Lee) must stay" were set on by a much larger crowd.

The police eventually separated the two groups and restored some sort of order.

U.S. Begins Last Salute to Ike

WASHINGTON (CP) — The pageantry of state farewell blended with the private goodbye of family and friends today as the United States began a majesic final tribute to Dwight D. Eisenhower.

With military pomp, the body of the soldier and former president was borne to Washington National Cathedral to lie in repose until Sunday.

But before the public tribute, the wife, family and friends of the man called Ike gathered in a cloistered chapel for a brief and private service.

At the outset of a ceremonial journey, which will last for five days to end on the plains of Kansas, Eisenhower's body was carried in a hearse from a private funeral home to the cathedral.

There a U.S. marine band, brass glinting in the springtime sun, played Hail to the Chief, then God of our Fathers, as military pallbearers carried the coffin into the cathedral.

HUNDREDS GATHERED

Several hundred persons gathered at the funeral home and at the cathedral, watching in silence.

The flag draped over the coffin fluttered in the wind as a guard of honor carried it to the chapel, passing beneath an inscription which reads: The Way of Peace.

Mrs. Eisenhower, clinging to the arm of her son, John, followed the coffin down a short flight of steps into Bethlehem Chapel for the private service.

Among the mourners there: Grandson David and Julie Nixon Eisenhower; brothers Milton and Edgar, granddaughter Barbara Anne and her husband.

Master Sgt. John Moaney, long-time valet to Eisenhower, was there. So was Brig.-Gen. Robert Schultz, for years his military aide.

The privacy of that ceremony was a preface to the public corteges and rites, which Eisenhower himself had helped to plan.

Millions at home and abroad mourned the death of the man who led history's mightiest army to victory in Europe and his country through eight years of shaky but unbroken peace.

The 78-year-old soldier-statesman died Friday after a valiant fight against an 11-month siege of repeated heart attacks.

His life began in near-poverty but he became the most beloved American of modern times and a statesman whose stature was equalled only by Sir Winston Churchill and President Charles de Gaulle.

De Gaulle, who served under Eisenhower as leader of the Free French in the Second World War, announced he would attend the services. The French president will head the procession of perhaps 100 foreign leaders expected to pay final respect to Eisenhower at a solemn state funeral Monday.

A man who hated war and politics but excelled in both, Eisenhower died in Walter Reed Army Hospital where he had

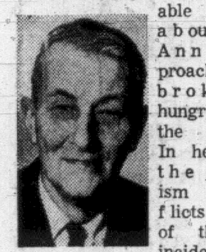
Victoria Alderman Ian Stewart speaks with unforked tongue when he tells city council that the province shirks its responsibility toward rehabilitation of its alcoholics. But to present the grant-seeking Salvation Army with this fact instead of a grant for its Harbor Light Centre doesn't make council look too good, either.

Our B.C. government, whatever its faults, at least contributes through the Salvation Army to the care of the down-and-out.



I suggest also that councillors who vetoed the grant have disregarded one applicable truth about Sally Ann's approach to the broke, the hungry and the derelict. In her eyes, the alcoholism that afflicts many of them is incidental to the fact that they are humans in immediate need.

I'm not sure why council should withhold this modest grant from a civic purse that seems elastic enough to accommodate a multitude of other works. Admittedly, the applicant is a religious organization — but surely no other such would grudge it funds from the city with which to carry out Christ's directive!

In any event, since Sally Ann has received no more than a limp handshake from the city, she must look elsewhere for needed funds.

Turning to the 1968 Community Chest statement of funds available for allotment to agencies, I find $30,727 earmarked for the Boy Scouts of Canada. This is a worthy outfit, but one whose presence on the list, let alone the size of its allotment, never ceases to surprise me.

Reduce this figure by $6,000, I suggest. Allot that sum to the Army for its Harbor Light Centre, and the principle upon which the Community Chest is based might be better served.

As for Sally Ann, she would be spared such buck-passings as rewarded her at City Hall this week.

To the young, there was no special reason to waste much thought on the old man who passed from one heart attack to another. He had been famous in his time, but that time was long past.

Among many Canadians of middle-age, however, the news that General Eisenhower had died brought a touch of personal sadness. He wasn't one of ours, but he seemed more human, somehow, than most American presidents, and his passing brought back memories of an era.

Churchill was in it, and the second Roosevelt. So was Stalin, and Montgomery of the Eighth Army, who lives on.

Eisenhower goes with a time of continuing crisis in which the British Empire — which predeceased him — and the United States were bound in a single striking force.

Monty was the Commonwealth's military hero, but though we gave him less adulation, we took comfort from the balding American with the easy grin and the stubborn trace of his country's Middle West in his speech.

"I like Ike," the campaign buttons worn in Republican lapels proclaimed. It was a sentiment shared by many on this side of the border during the years when Eisenhower served his country as president during anxious post-war years.

But as a warrior he stood taller, and it is as commnader of the Allied West that he will be best remembered.

Battle of the logs begins at Dallas waterfront

Youth Monument Has Roots In Ancient British Shrine

By BOB MITCHELL

Two dozen logs and a little stamina will combine this spring and summer in the construction of a unique monument in Victoria.

Woodhenge, as it is called, will be a log prototype of that ancient and mysterious British shrine, Stonehenge. It will be built virtually cost-free because all the work will be done by volunteers affiliated with the Victoria Youth Council.

Work on the project began today as VYC members met at Clover Point to begin transporting logs from the beach to a vacant lot at Carberry Gardens, more than a mile away.

The land was made available by Bill Scott, a friend of the VYC. Successive Saturdays will see holes dug for the placement of vertical timbers, and, finally, the actual raising of the logs with the help of an A-frame.

CAN JUST LOAF

When completed it will be much more than a simplified model of the Stonehenge: it will serve as an open-air theatre, art gallery, walk-in sculpture, and laboratory for meteorological experiments.

This is probably the way ancient Britons used the Stonehenge. It will also be a spot where you can go to just loaf in tranquillity.

Woodhenge was designed by Bernard Kenny, a technician for the University of Victoria geography department.

Twelve vertical logs arranged in a circle 35 feet in diameter will rise 13 feet from the ground. Their tops will be joined by 12 horizontal logs or lintels 11 feet long.

Vertical timbers will be sunk three feet in the ground, and all logs in the structure will be roughly two feet in diameter.

IN GREAT WORKS

(The 8:13 ratio between horizontal and vertical logs is a universal constant found in nature and in great works of architecture such as the Parthenon in Athems.)

"I saw all those massive logs lying on the beach and I though 'What the heck can we do with them?' " said Kenny.

Soon the logs crystallized in his mind into the Woodhenge, then into an idea for a VYC project.

He deplored the lack of outlets for the energy and talents of young people in Victoria.

"They're told 'go!', but they want to stay in Victoria — can you blame them? — It's a beautiful town.

"What these kids are really doing is searching for values. They're living in a value void, and when you're faced with that situation you can do one of two things: you can either create new values or you can go back to basic values.

BASIC VALUES

"Building something like Woodhenge represents a return to basic values."

Worship of the sun is one of the basic values. Each vertical log in the Woodhenge will be named after a sign of the zodiac, and anyone, no matter when he was born, will be able to relate to the structure.

With help from Dr. E. Harvey Richardson of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory the VYC will later use parts of the Woodhenge to make a sundial.

Woodhenge is not a new idea. Remnants of 30 log structures thought to be prototypes of Stonehenge have been discovered in southern England. They were apparently built with logs that floated across the Atlantic Ocean from North America somewhere between 10,000 and 3,000 B.C., Kenny said.

"If they were able to lift those heavy logs without any mechanized equipment then there's no reason why we can't do it on a smaller scale."

Church Split Looms In Sunday Sport Vote

Petitions Likely In City Theatres

A campaign for Sunday paid-admission sports and movies is considered a certainty in Victoria this year.

And it appeared likely the issue will split some local church groups.

The stage was set for the controversy in the B.C. legislature Friday when a bill to permit Sunday sport and entertainment was given final reading.

When the bill was introduced Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria said he favored an open vote in December. He said the question would be broached to a council committee and then to full council.

Although Greater Victoria Sports Council spokesmen were not available today, sporting circles generally predicted a campaign for a yes vote.

Hockey, baseball, football and soccer games are common now on Sundays but with a silver collection only.

Two local movie managers, Jack Armstrong of the Odeon group and Martin Cave of Famous Players, both said it is almost certain their companies will take part in a drive for Sunday movies.

Both said that in Vancouver, where movies have been legal on Sundays for years (Vancouver has its own charter and did not require to wait for the bill amending the Municipal Act), the experience has been good.

Sunday movies have proven popular and have been well attended. Theatres in Vancouver, when a similar controversy was rampant there, gathered petitions from theatre-goers.

They were instrumental in obtaining a yes-vote in excess of 60 per cent, which will be required by law here.

It is in church circles that experience has shown the hard core opposition is centred — but some Victoria churchmen today indicated a liberal outlook unknown a few years ago.

Canon Grahame Baker, chairman of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, said today, "I imagine there will be a strong reaction. There is such a wide range of opinion."

He could not predict the strength of opposition at this time.

But speaking personally, he said, "If a person worships on the Sabbath and then finds recreation, this is fine."

REV. GRAHAME BAKER
. . . not personally opposed

Avoid Making People Work

He added he believed there is nothing wrong in Sunday sports but every attempt should be made to avoid making people work on Sunday.

Dan Webster, chairman of the local committee of the Christian Businessmen's International, was staunchly against any commercialism on Sunday. He thought his organization should take a firm position for a no-vote.

He said he believed Frank Hunter, long-time city clerk in Victoria and recent political candidate, "would be able to give us good leadership."

Hunter said he would be willing to work for such a campaign.

"I'm definitely against it. We should recognize the Sabbath for what it is. An open Sunday in sports and entertainment will only contribute to our degredation."

The new bishop of the Anglican diocese of British Columbia (Vancouver Island and the Islands) Bishop John Ogle Anderson said he personally would not oppose relaxation of Sunday blue laws.

"You can't legislate people into church," he said, speaking from Winnipeg.

"We have Sunday sport and Sunday movies in Manitoba and I see no objection to them. Certainly they haven't affected church attendance.

"People who want to go to church will go regardless — and they may see a game or a show before or after.

"Why should people be able to attend symphony concerts on a Sunday afternoon, when film fans are denied their kind of entertainment?"

(In Victoria, civic authorities have for years been looking the other way while symphony concerts charged admissions contrary to existing legislation.)

"Does this imply that music is more sacred than the film? Surely this is a matter of individual taste," said the bishop.

"Then there is the question of social discrimination.

"People with money can get Sunday sport any time they want it—skiing in the mountains, golfing, horse-riding. Who is to say that golfing or horse-riding are more sacred than watching a baseball game?

"Some say commercial sport means employing people on Sundays. But surely people are employed at golf clubs, skiing lodges, hotels and horse-riding academies."

Rev. John Moore, minister of Central Baptist Church, Victoria, and recently minister of the famous Tent Hall in Glasgow, said:

"We would certainly oppose Sunday sport and Sunday shows. Unfortunately the desire for these things is evidence of the secularization of society today and the secularization of Sunday.

"It is very regrettable that people feel they cannot go without being amused one day a week."

FLAGS DIP FOR IKE

Flags on all British Columbia government buildings will fly at half staff Monday in honor of former president Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Premier Bennett said:

" 'I Like Ike' was not just a slogan; it was really genuine and from the heart, irrespective of party."

PCB Ruling May Unravel Controversy

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A major sewage disposal application may prove to be the key to unravelling the sewage disposal controversy.

Earlier this week, after a policy statement was issued by the Pollution Control Board, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said he is "quite confident" local municialities can dump raw sewage into the sea off beaches not declared a recreational area.

But Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, whose department issues certificates for disposal, said Greater Victoria will have to plan primary treatment plants and no increase in the amount of raw sewage will be permitted in fresh or salt water between Campbell River and Sooke.

MACAULAY POINT

The issue has boiled down to whether the sewage should run through a treatment plant prior to disposal, or whether comminution (shredding) and disposal, at a good depth and length and with tidal action, will acieve the same result.

The issue should be solved, or at least indications given, when the Pollution Control Board makes a ruling on a four-month-old application by the Capital Regional District for extension and rebuilding of Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

There has been no word from the PCB since the application was made last Nov. 29.

The district, responsible for a new system of trunk sewers and outfalls, wants to extend the Macaulay outfall from the beach to 4,800 feet from shore. No treatment plant was included in the application.

The city of Victoria earlier applied to extend its Clover Point outfall to 1,200 feet, again with comminution but no treatment plant.

But city engineer James Garnett said it was not proposed to do the work until next year, there would be more tidal studies in the spring and the PCB was not holding up the 15-month-old application.

POLLUTION POLICY

A declaration of pollution control policy, based on the consensus of the restructured British Columbia Pollution Control Board, issued by F. S. McKinnon, chairman of the board, includes these points:

1. That discharge of untreated domestic sewage to enclosed or confined bodies of salt water be prohibited where there is any doubt as to the adequacy of the flushing effect of the tide.

2. That the discharge of untreated domestic sewage to any body of fresh water such as a lake, a river, or a tributary to a river, be prohibited.

3. That, regardless of the flushing action or assimilative capacity of salt water bodies, the discharge of untreated domestic sewage be prohibited in any area designated by order as a recreational water or beach area.

4. That, insofar as health matters are concerned, the health department is to set quality standards of the receiving waters to protect the public health and the Pollution Control Branch will ensure that any permit issued contains prescribed effluent standards to ensure compliance with the health department standards.

5. That, where a sampling program is to be undertaken in any area where there is a matter of health significance, it shall be deemed expedient that such a program shall undertake to co-ordinate the respective interests of the health department and the Pollution Control Branch in a single joint effort.

These policy declarations are carried out through the issue of control permits. Regulations governing procedures are summarized to encourage a better public understanding of the responsibilities involved.

- As already stated, under the Pollution Control Act it is necessary that a permit be obtained to discharge waste. The details of the procedure to be followed in obtaining a permit are set out in the regulations pertaining to the Act.
- These regulations require that, upon receipt of an application, the director of pollution control forward copies to the various government departments such as health, water resources and recreation and conservation, which are directly concerned in pollution control activities. This requirement has been established to ensure that the interests of these agencies on behalf of the public are co-ordinated in any permit issued.
- It is the responsibility of the Pollution Control Board to incorporate the various control requirements into a single permit. Health determines the water quality standards which must be met from a health standpoint. Recreation and conservation prescribe standards for fish, wildlife and recreation. These examples serve to indicate the individual responsibilities of affected departments and agencies.
- The regulations also provide that any person who considers his rights would be affected by either the issuance or non-issuance of a permit may, within 30 days, present objections to the director of pollution control.

SUIT CLIMATE, CONDITIONS

Made-to-Order Animals Due

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Man will create animals which don't exist today, within 10 years.

The prediction was made Friday by Dr. Ian McTaggart Cowan, dean of graduate studies, University of British Columbia, at the annual convention of the Northwest Wildlife Society meeting at the Provincial Museum.

Cowan, one of the world's leading wildlife biologists, said the new animals might not look much different but they will have different capabilities.

As an example, he said, Canada would be interested in creating a meat-producing animal which could withstand the rugged climate of the north.

★ ★ ★

"At present the cariboo is one such animal," he said, "but a far better type might be brought into being by modifying some of the existing animals we have learned to live with."

New animals would be created by grafting genes to the chromosomes of other animals, he said.

Biochemists had reached the stage where they understood how genes worked, but the mechanics or practical application of using them to create animals had yet to be determined, he said.

"In 10 years they will have found the solution," he stated.

Cowan raised the question of creating animals in stressing the need to preserve rare and vanishing forms of wildlife.

★ ★ ★

Vancouver Island and islands along the B.C. coast had 49 species and sub-species of animals which were not to be found elsewhere in North America, he said.

"It's our responsibility to see that these animals survive."

Some of the animals listed as unique to B.C. coast islands were the Queen Charlotte deer, a species of woodpecker, a weasel, a marmot, about 10 kinds of white-footed mice and a number of shrews.

The Vancouver Island wolf, wolverine, marmot and the peregrine falcon in the Queen Charlotte Islands were endangered or rare animals, he said.

. . . INSURANCE FIRMS

package policy proposed by the government should be thrown out "because it won't work and quite frankly it will buy less votes than you have ever bought in your life."

Gardom, a member of the legislative committee on auto insurance, said it met 16 times and heard many witnesses to produce a good report which was "ignored and given lip service by the government.

FACADE CHARGED

"All the while, in the wings, the government had this bill ready and, quite frankly, made the committee a facade . . . and that's a pretty punk way to get people on committees.

"Where was the other, the real committee meeting? Where did this bill come from? Where did the insurance people sit?" he damanded.

Gardom also said the provision authorizing the cabinet to create a government insurance scheme on its own initiative was "another exercise in cabinet power the same as Bill 33 last year (authorizing the cabinet to order pulsory arbtiration of any labor dispute).

"It's like making the cabinet a presidium of the supreme soviet," he said.

"If the Socreds want to nationalize the auto insurance industry let's debate it right here and now. This kind of law-making is for the representatives of all the people, not just cabinet."

He said the public was not ready to abandon the tort (lawsuit) system and would be angered when it felt the impact of the prohibition against collision damage suits over $250.

PANIC PILL

"This is just Dr. Peterson's sugar-coated panic pill and once the icing falls off it's going to be a bitter pill for B.C.'s motorists because it's going to cost them thousands of dollars in higher premiums and also give free rein to industry permissiveness," said Gardom.

The same theme was presented by William Hartley (NDP — Yale-Lillooett) who argued for a government-sponsored insurance.

Hartley attacked the Socreds so vehemently he was warned at one point by Speaker William Murray that he would not be allowed to finish his speech if he continued breaking rules of debate.

"No wonder the insurance industry welcomes this legislation with open arms because it uses the compulsion of the state to force the public into contributing to the income of a section of private industry that has been condemned for price fixing and gouging for years," said Hartley.

"The public should also be aware that in the process of being compelled to contribute to the profits of the insurance industry, they are also being compelled to contribute to the campaign funds of the Social Credit party."

ORDERED TO WITHDRAW

When the speaker ordered him to withdraw, Macdonald protested that all MLAs should be free to argue that amendments to the Insurance Act could produce political campaign funds which would be a factor in the costs of car insurance.

When the speaker rejected Macdonald's arguments on Hartley's rights, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan announced the NDP would "accept the speaker's placing of restrictions on this debate but we feel it (Socred party funds) is part of the total package of insurance costs."

Murray remarked that he was not restricting debate, only applying the rules.

Hartley, resuming his speech, demanded to know how J. E. Burns of Toronto, president of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, accompanied by Gerald Cross, former legislative counsel in the attorney-general's department and now a private lawyer retained by the insurance industry, happened to know the legislation would be introduced last Monday.

(Burns flew here and was present with other industry representatives when Peterson introduced the legislation. But he was missing from the group of industry representatives who were in the galleries Friday when the bills got second reading.)

TIPPED OFF

"This is the bill the industry had been asking for and they were obviously tipped off by someone in the government so they could be on hand ready to say 'God Bless Bennett' and to mislead the public as to the alleged increased benefits and reduced costs," said Hartley.

Hartley said it was "immoral" that the motoring public would be compelled to buy policies which would see 40 cents of the premium dollar going to profits for the 188 private auto insurance companies operating in B.C.

Hartley then recalled that Minister without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi first challenged his right to sit on the insurance committee because he was an insurance agent and, after the speaker affirmed his right to serve on the committee, "he called out every time I've made a speech here: 'Are you still selling insurance?'

"Well an odd coincidence happened the day this bill was tabled in the house.

LOSES CONTRACT

"I received a letter from the insurance company with whom I am licensed, cancelling my contract as of April 1 this year.

"This no doubt will make him (Gaglardi) happy and possibly the insurance industry too but it is not going to stop me from advocating government insurance," said Hartley.

Several MLAs shouted "shame" when he revealed his firing and Strachan accused Gaglardi of being "partly responsible" for Hartley's dismissal.

"I think it is absolutely shocking and disgraceful that he has lost his position and his job solely because he is spokesman for his party in the field of auto insurance," exclaimed Gardom.

"I think the company concerned should be named in the house.

"That's not the type of business we want to have in this province," said Gardom.

(Hartley did not name the company which fired him.)

David Stupich (NDP — Nanaimo) said the government decision to exempt insurance companies from reimbursing hospitals and doctors for fees which could be collected from B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and medicare was not a reduction of costs as claimed by Peterson.

"We're not reducing this cost of the insurance business, we're just shifting it to the taxpayers," he said.

Other Liberal and NDP MLAs attacked the bills and several Socred backbenchers supported it before Attorney-General Peterson wound up the debate with rebuttal.

He slammed Hartley for attacking Cantell as "a dedicated and senior civil service" and demanded apology for accusing him of playing politics.

"I not only repudiate the charge but it reflects more on the individual who made the charge than it does on Mr. Cantell," he said.

Peterson said Gardom's request that the legislation be hoisted to next session is a switch on previous criticisms that the government "pigeonholed the Wootton report and now they are criticizing us for bringing in the bill too quickly."

He accused the "Liberal lawyers" of misleading the house about inconveniences and delays in motorists suing in small debts court for collision repairs without having to hire legal advice.

Peterson said serious delays and high costs exist in the present system which required motorists to go to Supreme Court and hire lawyers.

"You may have been speaking for the legal profession here today but I'm speaking for the people of this province," said Peterson over the protests of opposition MLAs.

Growing Menace Of Parked Cars

By JIM HUME

Ald. Percy Frampton made a valiant bid to halt the "no parking" sign stride on Hillside Avenue last Thursday. In so doing he revealed, without actually saying so, that he travels that road rarely during rush hours.

Hume

With 14,000 cars a day trekking between Douglas and Shelbourne on the Hillside route and more to come since the Simpsons-Sears shopping centre opened — it has long been obvious that curbside cars, parked for hours at a time, were a growing menace.

The record of 31 accidents in 21 months is proof enough that the Victoria traffic department had to make a drastic move. It did on Thursday.

No Parking Areas

Parking is now banned on Hillside between Blackwood and Higgins; on the north side between Doncaster and Shakespeare; on the south side between the same two streets; on the south side between Scott and Shelbourne and west of Scott; on the north side west of Shelbourne and on the north side east of Shelbourne.

And so be it, Ald. Frampton's objections duly recorded, the move was long overdue.

The new restrictions will hurt the three-car owners who can't find enough room to park in their drive-ways. But somehow it's difficult to make that an issue.

A couple of weeks ago one of Vancouver's two daily newspapers picked up an exclusive on the people who might run on the Liberal ticket in the Greater Victoria area in the next provincial election.

At the risk of sounding smug, the Vancouver bombshell stating that Mayors Hugh Curtis, Hugh Stephen, and Ray Bryant and Ald. Ian Stewart, of Victoria were front runners was published in the Times about a year ago.

Up-Dating Picture

Just to up-date our mainland buddies in the writing game (and maybe give them another exclusive a few months from now) Stephen has fallen from favor as a strong politician; Curtis is the up-coming president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, is tired of people forecasting his future, and is young enough to have lots of time to wait; Bryant and Stewart are still interested.

And as a bonus, because we know they try hard, look for Speaker William Murray to pop up as a surprise Social Credit candidate for the Victoria seat to be vacated by Public Works Minister W. N. Chant.

With all the forecasts saying Vancouver Island is going to drop into the sea April 4, along with most of the North American Pacific Coast, we may miss the louder explosion due April 10 at Oak Bay High School.

Just in case you haven't noticed April 10 is the date Oak Bay council has set for a public hearing on highrise apartments on the Victoria Riding Club site and a new shopping centre on Foul Bay Road.

Anticipates Event

Of even keener interest to the parties thinking of attending that meeting is the fact that 1925 Foul Bay Road, right on the shopping centre site, is already falling to the wreckers hammer.

Now, now, Mayor Fred Hawes, wouldn't it have been nicer to wait until after the public hearing and the formal, final council decision, before site clearing started?

Or is it regarded as normal to clear a proposed building site prior to both public hearing and the final council motion to rezone property?

Oak Bay isn't alone in putting the cart before the horse.

Victoria holds its preliminary zoning bylaw readings, then calls a public hearing, and then, on the same day, moves final passage of the bylaw.

That's what happened last Thursday when four zoning bylaws were up for final reading. Fortunately, good sense prevailed and two of the four were tabled for further study and decision.

But it doesn't change the rather shaky system which permits people to protest about an hour before a decision is due.

In Saanich they do it the other, and better way. They hold their public hearing, let members of council consider the gripes, and then start the bylaw procedure moving.

Generally speaking Saanich learns from the city. In this case the city can pick up a point or two.

Now that squealing tire drivers can lose five demerit points after conviction maybe the Motor Vehicles Branch will tell us how many points former Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi lost on his last speeding conviction.

Or didn't you hear that Flying Phil did it again in a couple or so weeks ago in Victoria?

Nothing serious, just a mite fast.

. . . EISENHOWER

been a patient since May.

President Nixon went into the seclusion of his Camp David, Md., retreat but will return Sunday when the body is borne by horse-drawn caisson through the streets of Washington to lie in state beneath the dome of the U.S. Capitol.

Unknown when the Second World War began, Eisenhower rose to command the mightiest armies ever assembled in battle through the invasion of Europe to his personal acceptance of the German surrender.

Elected president in 1952 and again in 1956—the only Republican in this century to win successive terms—Eisenhower, with his warm smile and simple words, brought reassuring confidence to a country beset with cold war crises and won, as just plain "Ike," a place in the hearts of millions.

Stricken by his first heart attack while still in his first term in 1955, Eisenhower survived that and eventually six more before congestive heart failure eroded his iron strength and he slid gently into death at 12:25 p.m. Friday.

His wife of more than half a century, Mamie Doud Eisenhower, was nearby when death came as were most other members of his family.

Nixon, who rushed to Walter Reed Army Hospital after the announcement, proclaimed a day of mourning Monday and ordered the U.S. flag flown at half staff around the world for 30 days.

WILL PAY TRIBUTE

After lying in state in the cathedral for a day, with the public allowed to pay tribute for eight hours, Eisenhower will pass by the White House for the last time Sunday.

His body will be carried to a horse-drawn caisson near the Ellipse, a spot south of the White House, to begin the solemn and measured procession up Constitution Avenue to the Capitol. The riderless horse with cavalry boots reversed in the stirrups—symbol of fallen military leaders since the days of Genghis Khan — will follow the casket.

It will be near sunset Monday, after the sad pageantry of the state funeral, when the body is borne by train out of aging Union Station near the Capitol to begin the long journey back to the Kansas plains.

Burial will be in the chapel of the Eisenhower Centre in Abilene, Kan., built on what was a cornfield in his childhood, within sight of the home he knew long ago.

Accompanying the coffin on the 1,000-mile ride to Kansas will be the general's widow, other members of the family, and a number of government officials.

The family decided no reporters would be allowed to accompany them and the train would not make any scheduled stops.

HATED WAR, POLITICS

Eisenhower reached his greatness in a career in two professions he openly disliked—war and politics.

His mother belonged to a pacifist religious sect and wept when he received his appointment to the U.S. military Academy.

He said once while in the army that he wanted only to see "people in my profession permanently out of a job."

"This damnable thing of war," Eisenhower once called it. And, even in the White House, he admitted he didn't like politics or politicians.

Eisenhower had served as a career army officer for more than a quarter of a century without spectacular success when the Second World War erupted. He led the troops that chased the Germans out of North Africa, then swept into Italy. By late 1943, he had become supreme commander of the Allied forces in Europe.

On an overcast day in June, 1944, his soldiers stormed the shores of France and knifed through Normandy in the D-Day invasion that signalled the end of the war in Europe less than a year later.

Eisenhower was there in the red schoolhouse at Rheims to accept Germany's surrender.

CALLED IKE BACK

Truman made him the army's chief of staff from 1945 to 1948 when he retired and became president of Columbia University. But Truman called him back later as commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

In 1952, wresting the Republican nomination from Robert Taft, Eisenhower swept to victory in the presidential election by 6,600,000 votes over Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic candidate.

He won over Stevenson again in 1956 by 9,500,000 votes—a record landslide until Johnson's victory four years ago over Barry Goldwater.

Eisenhower's era as president was pocked with crises, but the U.S. public never lost its confidence in the grandfatherly golfer and leader it loved.

Eisenhower brought an end to the Korean War after pledging in the 1952 election campaign: "I will go to Korea."

He saw the U.S . grow from 48 to 50 states. The man he named as chief justice—Earl Warren—guided the Supreme Court to its historic decision on school desegregation. And Eisenhower sent troops into Little Rock, Ark., to back it up.

CAUGHT IN LIE

But at the same time the Soviet Union crushed a revolt in Hungary. Cuba came under leadership of Fidel Castro. Russia won the race to reach space with Sputnik I. Eisenhower was caught in an embarrassing lie after the U-2 spy plane was downed in Russia, exploding plans for a summit meeting in his last months in office.

Quake Seeress Dies

SPOKANE (AP) — Mrs. Elizabeth Steen, 29-year-old Spokane seeress who had predicted an earthquake for California next month, died Friday.

Doctors said cause of death was a heart attack but that Mrs. Steen had been ill for some time with Collogan's disease. The ailment involves deterioration of the body's connective tissue.

She came to Spokane last November from the San Francisco area. The move here with her husband and children was based on her forecast of an earthquake for the Pacific coast sometime in April.

Mrs. Steen had been the subject of articles in national magazines after predicting Martin Luther King would be shot to death April 6, 1968. He was killed in Memphis, Tenn., last April 4.

Guerrillas Killed

LUANDA, Angola (AFP) — Portuguese forces in Angola killed 15 guerrillas and wounded six others in a series of clashes in the Portuguese West African territory between March 16 and 22, a military communique said here Friday. The government suffered only 11 men wounded, it said, but four civilians were reported killed and one wounded.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The Irish are a happy race. Perhaps one reason is that the weather doesn't bother an Irishman very much. He enjoys it, whatever it brings.

Once, on a spring Sunday, I was driven around Phoenix Park in Dublin as a drizzling rain soaked the greenery and washed the faces of the old Georgian houses. It was not a day for walking unless you were an Irishman. At a crosswalk we stopped for a bunch of 20 or 25 teen-age boys who were hiking with a priest. They were boys from an orphanage. Just about every one of those lads had a pleasant grin on his shining wet face as he sang out to us: "Grand day!"

Later, we drove to the place where the Irish kings are buried in County Wicklow. The rain still drizzled down, so we sat in the car and looked at the hundreds of Irishmen who were sightseeing in the ruins, either unaware of the dampness or not at all discomfited by it.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

Victoria Alderman Ian Stewart speaks with unforked tongue when he tells city council that the province shirks its responsibility toward rehabilitation of its alcoholics. But to present the grant-seeking Salvation Army with this fact instead of a grant for its Harbor Light Centre doesn't make council look too good, either.

Our B.C. government, whatever its faults, at least contributes through the Salvation Army to the care of the down-and-out.

I suggest also that councillors who vetoed the grant have disregarded one applicable truth about Sally Ann's approach to the broke, the hungry and the derelict. In her eyes, the alcoholism that afflicts many of them is incidental to the fact that they are humans in immediate need.

I'm not sure why council should withhold this modest grant from a civic purse that seems elastic enough to accommodate a multitude of other works. Admittedly, the applicant is a religious organization — but surely no other such would grudge it funds from the city with which to carry out Christ's directive!

In any event, since Sally Ann has received no more than a limp handshake from the city, she must look elsewhere for needed funds.

Turning to the 1968 Community Chest statement of funds available for allotment to agencies, I find $30,727 earmarked for the Boy Scouts of Canada. This is a worthy outfit, but one whose presence on the list, let alone the size of its allotment, never ceases to surprise me.

Reduce this figure by $6,000, I suggest. Allot that sum to the Army for its Harbor Light Centre, and the principle upon which the Community Chest is based might be better served.

As for Sally Ann, she would be spared such buck-passings as rewarded her at City Hall this week.

To the young, there was no special reason to waste much thought on the old man who passed from one heart attack to another. He had been famous in his time, but that time was long past.

Among many Canadians of middle-age, however, the news that General Eisenhower had died brought a touch of personal sadness. He wasn't one of ours, but he seemed more human, somehow, than most American presidents, and his passing brought back memories of an era.

Churchill was in it, and the second Roosevelt. So was Stalin, and Montgomery of the Eighth Army, who lives on.

Eisenhower goes with a time of continuing crisis in which the British Empire — which predeceased him — and the United States were bound in a single striking force.

Monty was the Commonwealth's military hero, but though we gave him less adulation, we took comfort from the balding American with the easy grin and the stubborn trace of his country's Middle West in his speech.

"I like Ike," the campaign buttons worn in Republican lapels proclaimed. It was a sentiment shared by many on this side of the border during the years when Eisenhower served his country as president during anxious post-war years.

But as a warrior he stood taller, and it is as commnader of the Allied West that he will be best remembered.

On the forenoon of Feb. 25, I watched David Dick of 355 Gorge Road carry his youngest on board a Viscount for the first leg of a journey from which she might not return.

On Sunday night, Florenda Joy will disembark at Patricia Bay with her round trip completed.

After that . . . plenty of rest . . . plus checkups from a Victoria heart specialist . . . speech therapy . . . and finally back to school again.

That's it, except to note that the flowering trees are struggling into bloom at last. Spring didn't seem complete without them!

Battle of the logs begins at Dallas waterfront

Youth Monument Has Roots In Ancient British Shrine

By BOB MITCHELL

Two dozen logs and a little stamina will combine this spring and summer in the construction of a unique monument in Victoria.

Woodhenge, as it is called, will be a log prototype of that ancient and mysterious British shrine, Stonehenge. It will be built virtually cost-free because all the work will be done by volunteers affiliated with the Victoria Youth Council.

Work on the project began today as VYC members met at Clover Point to begin transporting logs from the beach to a vacant lot at Carberry Gardens, more than a mile away.

The land was made available by Bill Scott, a friend of the VYC. Successive Saturdays will see holes dug for the placement of vertical timbers, and, finally, the actual raising of the logs with the help of an A-frame.

CAN JUST LOAF

When completed it will be much more than a simplified model of the Stonehenge: it will serve as an open-air theatre, art gallery, walk-in sculpture, and laboratory for meteorological experiments.

This is probably the way ancient Britons used the Stonehenge. It will also be a spot where you can go to just loaf in tranquillity.

Woodhenge was designed by Bernard Kenny, a technician for the University of Victoria geography department.

Twelve vertical logs arranged in a circle 35 feet in diameter will rise 13 feet from the ground. Their tops will be joined by 12 horizontal logs or lintels 11 feet long.

Vertical timbers will be sunk three feet in the ground, and all logs in the structure will be roughly two feet in diameter.

IN GREAT WORKS

(The 8:13 ratio between horizontal and vertical logs is a universal constant found in nature and in great works of architecture such as the Parthenon in Athems.)

"I saw all those massive logs lying on the beach and I though 'What the heck can we do with them?' " said Kenny.

Soon the logs crystallized in his mind into the Woodhenge, then into an idea for a VYC project.

He deplored the lack of outlets for the energy and talents of young people in Victoria.

"They're told 'go!', but they want to stay in Victoria — can you blame them? — It's a beautiful town.

"What these kids are really doing is searching for values. They're living in a value void, and when you're faced with that situation you can do one of two things: you can either create new values or you can go back to basic values.

BASIC VALUES

"Building something like Woodhenge represents a return to basic values."

Worship of the sun is one of the basic values. Each vertical log in the Woodhenge will be named after a sign of the zodiac, and anyone, no matter when he was born, will be able to relate to the structure.

With help from Dr. E. Harvey Richardson of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory the VYC will later use parts of the Woodhenge to make a sundial.

Woodhenge is not a new idea. Remnants of 30 log structures thought to be prototypes of Stonehenge have been discovered in southern England. They were apparently built with logs that floated across the Atlantic Ocean from North America somewhere between 10,000 and 3,000 B.C., Kenny said.

"If they were able to lift those heavy logs without any mechanized equipment then there's no reason why we can't do it on a smaller scale."

SUIT CLIMATE, CONDITIONS

Made-to-Order Animals Due

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Man will create animals which don't exist today, within 10 years.

The prediction was made Friday by Dr. Ian McTaggart Cowan, dean of graduate studies, University of British Columbia, at the annual convention of the Northwest Wildlife Society meeting at the Provincial Museum.

Cowan, one of the world's leading wildlife biologists, said the new animals might not look much different but they will have different capabilities.

As an example, he said, Canada would be interested in creating a meat-producing animal which could withstand the rugged climate of the north.

★ ★ ★

"At present, the cariboo is one such animal," he said, "but a far better type might be brought into being by modifying some of the existing animals we have learned to live with."

New animals would be created by grafting genes to the chromosomes of other animals, he said.

Biochemists had reached the stage where they understood how genes worked, but the mechanics or practical application of using them to create animals had yet to be determined, he said.

"In 10 years they will have found the solution," he stated.

Cowan raised the question of creating animals in stressing the need to preserve rare and vanishing forms of wildlife.

★ ★ ★

Vancouver Island and islands along the B.C. coast had 49 species and sub-species of animals which were not to be found elsewhere in North America, he said.

"It's our responsibility to see that these animals survive."

Some of the animals listed as unique to B.C. coast islands were the Queen Charlotte decr, a species of woodpecker, a weasel, a marmot, about 10 kinds of white-footed mice and a number of shrews.

The Vancouver Island wolf, wolverine, marmot and the peregrine falcon in the Queen Charlotte Islands were endangered or rare animals, he said.

Church Split Looms In Sunday Sport Vote

Petitions Likely In City Theatres

A campaign for Sunday paid-admission sports and movies is considered a certainty in Victoria this year.

And it appeared likely the issue will split some local church groups.

The stage was set for the controversy in the B.C. legislature Friday when a bill to permit Sunday sport and entertainment was given final reading.

When the bill was introduced Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria said he favored an open vote in December. He said the question would be broached to a council committee and then to full council.

Although Greater Victoria Sports Council spokesmen were not available today, sporting circles generally predicted a campaign for a yes vote.

Hockey, baseball, football and soccer games are common now on Sundays but with a silver collection only.

Two local movie managers, Jack Armstrong of the Odeon group and Martin Cave of Famous Players, both said it is almost certain their companies will take part in a drive for Sunday movies.

Both said that in Vancouver, where movies have been legal on Sundays for years (Vancouver has its own charter and did not require to wait for the bill amending the Municipal Act), the experience has been good.

Sunday movies have proven popular and have been well attended. Theatres in Vancouver, when a similar controversy was rampant there, gathered petitions from theatre-goers.

They were instrumental in obtaining a yes-vote in excess of 60 per cent, which will be required by law here.

It is in church circles that experience has shown the hard core opposition is centred — but some Victoria churchmen today indicated a liberal outlook unknown a few years ago.

Canon Grahame Baker, chairman of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, said today, "I imagine there will be a strong reaction. There is such a wide range of opinion."

He could not predict the strength of opposition at this time.

But speaking personally, he said, "If a person worships on the Sabbath and then finds recreation, this is fine."

REV. GRAHAME BAKER
. . . not personally opposed

Avoid Making People Work

He added he believed there is nothing wrong in Sunday sports but every attempt should be made to avoid making people work on Sunday.

Dan Webster, chairman of the local committee of the Christian Businessmen's International, was staunchly against any commercialism on Sunday. He thought his organization should take a firm position for a no-vote.

He said he believed Frank Hunter, long-time city clerk in Victoria and recent political candidate, "would be able to give us good leadership."

Hunter said he would be willing to work for such a campaign.

"I'm definitely against it. We should recognize the Sabbath for what it is. An open Sunday in sports and entertainment will only contribute to our degredation."

The new bishop of the Anglican diocese of British Columbia (Vancouver Island and the Islands) Bishop John Ogle Anderson said he personally would not oppose relaxation of Sunday blue laws.

"You can't legislate people into church," he said, speaking from Winnipeg.

"We have Sunday sport and Sunday movies in Manitoba and I see no objection to them. Certainly they haven't affected church attendance.

"People who want to go to church will go regardless — and they may see a game or a show before or after.

"Why should people be able to attend symphony concerts on a Sunday afternoon, when film fans are denied their kind of entertainment?"

(In Victoria, civic authorities have for years been looking the other way while symphony concerts charged admissions contrary to existing legislation.)

"Does this imply that music is more sacred than the film? Surely this is a matter of individual taste," said the bishop.

"Then there is the question of social discrimination.

"People with money can get Sunday sport any time they want it—skiing in the mountains, golfing, horse-riding. Who is to say that golfing or horse-riding are more sacred than watching a baseball game?

"Some say commercial sport means employing people on Sundays. But surely people are employed at golf clubs, skiing lodges, hotels and horse-riding academies."

Rev. John Moore, minister of Central Baptist Church, Victoria, and recently minister of the famous Tent Hall in Glasgow, said:

"We would certainly oppose Sunday sport and Sunday shows. Unfortunately the desire for these things is evidence of the secularization of society today and the secularization of Sunday.

"It is very regrettable that people feel they cannot go without being amused one day a week."

FLAGS DIP FOR IKE

Flags on all British Columbia government buildings will fly at half staff Monday in honor of former president Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Premier Bennett said:

"He was a great man in fighting for the defence of the free world and a great man for peace as well. . . .

" 'I Like Ike' was not just a slogan; it was really genuine and from the heart, irrespective of party."

PCB Ruling May Unravel Controversy

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A major sewage disposal application may prove to be the key to unravelling the sewage disposal controversy.

Earlier this week, after a policy statement was issued by the Pollution Control Board, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said he is "quite confident" local municialities can dump raw sewage into the sea off beaches not declared a recreational area.

But Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, whose department issues certificates for disposal, said Greater Victoria will have to plan primary treatment plants and no increase in the amount of raw sewage will be permitted in fresh or salt water between Campbell River and Sooke.

MACAULAY POINT

The issue has boiled down to whether the sewage should run through a treatment plant prior to disposal, or whether comminution (shredding) and disposal, at a good depth and length and with tidal action, will acieve the same result.

The issue should be solved, or at least indications given, when the Pollution Control Board makes a ruling on a four-month-old application by the Capital Regional District for extension and rebuilding of Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt.

There has been no word from the PCB since the application was made last Nov. 29.

The district, responsible for a new system of trunk sewers and outfalls, wants to extend the Macaulay outfall from the beach to 4,800 feet from shore. No treatment plant was included in the application.

The city of Victoria earlier applied to extend its Clover Point outfall to 1,200 feet, again with comminution but no treatment plant.

But city engineer James Garnett said it was not proposed to do the work until next year, there would be more tidal studies in the spring and the PCB was not holding up the 15-month-old application.

POLLUTION POLICY

A declaration of pollution control policy, based on the consensus of the restructured British Columbia Pollution Control Board, issued by F. S. McKinnon, chairman of the board, includes these points:

1. That discharge of untreated domestic sewage to enclosed or confined bodies of salt water be prohibited where there is any doubt as to the adequacy of the flushing effect of the tide.

2. That the discharge of untreated domestic sewage to any body of fresh water such as a lake, a river, or a tributary to a river, be prohibited.

3. That, regardless of the flushing action or assimilative capacity of salt water bodies, the discharge of untreated domestic sewage be prohibited in any area designated by order as a recreational water or beach area.

4. That, insofar as health matters are concerned, the health department is to set quality standards of the receiving waters to protect the public health and the Pollution Control Branch will ensure that any permit issued contains prescribed effluent standards to ensure compliance with the health department standards.

5. That, where a sampling program is to be undertaken in any area where there is a matter of health significance, it shall be deemed expedient that such a program shall undertake to co-ordinate the respective interests of the health department and the Pollution Control Branch in a single joint effort.

These policy declarations are carried out through the issue of control permits. Regulations governing procedures are summarized to encourage a better public understanding of the responsibilities involved.

F. S. McKINNON
. . . chairman

- ● As already stated, under the Pollution Control Act it is necessary that a permit be obtained to discharge waste. The details of the procedure to be followed in obtaining a permit are set out in the regulations pertaining to the Act.
- ● These regulations require that, upon receipt of an application, the director of pollution control forward copies to the various government departments such as health, water resources and recreation and conservation, which are directly concerned in pollution control activities. This requirement has been established to ensure that the interests of these agencies on behalf of the public are co-ordinated in any permit issued.
- ● It is the responsibility of the Pollution Control Board to incorporate the various control requirements into a single permit. Health determines the water quality standards which must be met from a health standpoint. Recreation and conservation prescribe standards for fish, wildlife and recreation. These examples serve to indicate the individual responsibilities of affected departments and agencies.
- ● The regulations also provide that any person who considers his rights would be affected by either the issuance or non-issuance of a permit may, within 30 days, present objections to the director of pollution control.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you tell me where I might obtain a list of girls' private schools in British Columbia.—E. E.

A. The reference of the Victoria Public Library has a complete list. If you would prefer a list in pamphlet form this could probably be forwarded by the president of the Independent Schools' Association of British Columbia. His address is: D. Harker, St. George's School, 3954 West 28th Avenue, Vancouver 8.

* * * NBC Creates New James Dean

By AL FORREST

This week NBC unveiled Along Came Bronson, a feature movie that serves as the pilot for a new fall series.

Bronson is a young man who quits his job to roar around the United States on his motorcycle looking for the meaning of life.

Apparently the meaning of life is riding a faster motorcycle, because it eludes him.

In any case, the movie was only mildly interesting and the series promises to be a bore.

On assumes that the planning sessions went something like this:

"This new fall series . . . we need some outdoor action thing with cars or something. You know . . . like Route 66."

"Yeah, but let's change it a bit. No sports car. Let's take our hero . . . what's his name? . . . Bronson? Right. Put Bronson on a motorcycle."

"Hey, I'm getting something. Let's have him roam the country . . . you know . . . a western on wheels. . . ."

"Great! Great! And he rescues beautiful maidens. . . ."

". . . Only they're Hippie types, right? They've got lots of hair and hang-ups."

"But Bronson can't get married. That slows it down too much."

"Hey, I'm getting something. He rescues the girl and then rides off into the sunset alone."

"At the end instead of kissing the girl, he kisses the motorcycle?"

"Exactly. That cycle means more to him than. . ."

"I was kidding. . . ."

"I'm not. It doesn't sing to me unless he's in love with that cycle."

"Okay, he's in love, he's in love. The important thing is what sort of man is Bronson? Hell's Angels? Rock Hudson? Jerry Lewis?"

"I'm getting something. He's a lonely kid with deep problems. . . ."

". . . in love with his motorcycle. . . ."

". . . with deep problems and he mumbles in an appealing sort of way . . ."

". . . just a minute . . ."

". . . all quiet and shy. . . ."

". . . hold it Fred . . ."

". . . shy but deep down tough but he talks with his head down . . ."

". . . no you don't, Fred. . . ."

". . . with his head down and his eyes half-shut but he's hell on wheels and everybody loves him and . . ."

"You can't do it, Fred. Nobody will buy the resurrection of James Dean."

Michael Parks . . . Dean . . . I

"Let it happen to me . . . like the way it's talking to me, Fred . . ."

"It's a natural . . . the cycle . . . the loneliness . . ."

"But his hang-ups. . . ."

"So he loves his motorcycle . . ."

"Well, everybody's got to love somebody."

Guest Maestro For Program Of Slavic Music

The beauty of Slavonic music interpreted by a Slavic conductor, adds still another fresh experience to a fine season for Victoria Symphony goers.

Sunday's and Monday's concerts at the Royal Theatre will bring the 1968-69 series to an end on what will no doubt prove to be an exciting level.

Prominent Cechoslovakia conductor, Dr. Otakar Trhlik will be on the podium.

The orchestra under Dr. Trhlik will perform Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 and Smetana's lyrical From Bohemia's Woods and Fields.

Programmed also is the ever-popular "Unfinished" Symphony of Schubert.

Dr. Trhlik has been noted in Europe for his sense of style, the strength of his rhythms and sensitive details of his interpretations. He is said to display typical features of the Czech art of conducting.

While Dr. Trhlik is in Victoria, the Victoria Symphony's musical director and conductor, Laszlo Gati, is conducting concerts in Prague.

Sunday's concert begins at 3 and Monday's at 8:30 p.m.

KNOWN across Canada for his talent as a comedian, Victoria-born John Sparks returns to the home stage next week when he will star with Vancouver's Linda Sorenson in the RPA production, The Owl and the Pussy Cat. Like its famous antecedent, The Four-Poster, the comedy has only two characters and has been greeted as hilarious by critics wherever it has been performed. John Sparks began his acting career with the Victoria Theatre Guild as a 10-year-old, later was an oustanding member of the University of B.C. Players' Club, an organization with which he toured the province on many occasions. A professional actor, he has appeared on CBC television shows and with major Vancouver pro organizations as well as with theatre companies in Eastern Canada.

Gail lends charm and ability.

City Dance Star Joins Touring Show

The Breath of Scotland was accompanied by a bright glint of sunshine from Victoria, Friday, when the touring variety show played the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in Vancouver.

Victoria's Senior Amateur Canadian Champion Highland dancer, Gail Bamford, accompanied by Pacific International professional champion piper, Jamie Troy, appeared with the show and will again Monday when Breath of Scotland comes to McPherson Playhouse.

Famed Scottish performers Alec Finlay, Will Starr, Dennis Clancy and Sheena Andrew are featured with the touring group.

IN CAST

Among the east there is also George Hill, a musical entertainer who features the guitar and banio in his act, and teen-aged Linda Scott, a bright new talent who is already a known radio and television personality in Scotland.

Charming Gail Bamford is a Grade 11 Oak Bay Secondary School student who, although she holds a long list of Highland dance championships going back to her preteen years, confesses that she is pure Sassenach.

EIGHT YEARS

She has been dancing for eight years as a pupil of the Adeline Duncan Dance Studio.

Besides the Canadian Senior Amateur Championship which she won at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, Gail has won the Dominion Championship at Halifax and the Western North American Open and Western Canada titles.

In the immediate future Gail hopes to go to Scotland in July with her eyes on the world championship. She also expects to compete again for the Canadian championship in Toronto in August.

It is her intention to pursue dancing as a career by opening a studio of her own when she has finished formal schooling.

Curtain time for Breath of Scotland, Monday, is 8:30 p.m.

Edmonton's Citadel Has Come a Long Way

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton's Citadel Theatre has come a long way in four years—from an abandoned Salvation Army building to a paid-up subscription list of 4,000 and an annual budget of $193,000.

Now it's branching out with a mobile unit known as Citadel on Wheels to bring the theatre to students in schools throughout Edmonton and elsewhere. In January, four actors piled into the vehicle and travelled 60 miles in subzero weather to the Hobbema Indian reserve to put on a performance at the Ermine Skin grade school there.

Current spark-plug at the Citadel is Sean Mulcahy, widely known for his work in theatres and the CBC, who took over last October as artistic director. He speaks almost daily to various Edmonton groups, lectures from time to time at the University of Alberta and cracks a strong whip in his production of Citadel plays.

Citadel Theatre was the brain child of Edmonton lawyer Joseph H. Shoctor.

The curtains opened late in 1965 before 277 filled seats, and the 1965-66 season saw 25,000 attend eight plays which had runs of three weeks each.

NOW . . . Lights Bother Ducks

By RUSSELL FREETHY

Freethy

Last Friday night at Esquimalt Senior Secondary School, Mother Tucker's Yellow Duck was the featured group for a very successful POET sponsored dance, and they were well received by the enthusiastic audience Their entire performance would have been flawless, had it not been for several power failures caused by the light show overloading the school's inadequate stage circuitry. Most unfortunately, two of these disturbances happened during the group s own hits, One Ring Jane and I.

This, as any musician knows, can cause the rest of the show to suffer, for the performer is then acutely aware of his complete dependence on electricity.

•

Mother Tucker's, not surprisingly, were easily able to overcome this dilemma, and carried themselves through the remainder of the energetic sets with their usual exuberance.

The first set opened with Green Grass of Home and One Ring Jane, and included a unique arrangement of Spooky (an unusual number for the group), the standard Get Out of My Life Woman, and several others.

The second set was built into an extensive jammed excursion around For What It's Worth, complete with a few lines of Jezebel done up by Roger. A thirty-minute session like this is rarely attempted by even the devisive Duck. A splendid, singular set!

MTYD really get their heads onto some good things while performing. With their excruciatingly exalting effects, they entice the audience into doing their own individual things while they listen to this fascinating five-man band.

•

The Duck are leaving in April for Toronto, where they will play The Rock Pile on the same bill with the Butterfield Blues Band. Cliff Moore, the group's manager, is hoping for a booking into New York's Electric Circus while they are back east.

With One Ring Jane a national hit and getting some exposure in Europe, it is quite possible that Mother Tucker's Yellow Duck will be yet another Canadian group to break out into the international music scene.

Bob Dylan once remarked: Some people say that I am a poet — Tim Hardin is a poet.

The Way It Is incorporated an interviewed recording-session with Tim Hardin into last Sunday's show; and, via videotape, displayed to us a partial picture of a true artist.

•

Hardin's songs are deeply personal, and he sings them out on the edge of heartbreak. You can feel this poet's perceptions of a world that is all too hauntingly real. His poetry has been available on Verbe Forecast. He now records for Columbia.

The Collectors' Grass and Wild Strawberries album has been getting a good deal of coverage by New York FM stations. This has tied in nicely with their appearances in the Filmore East where the crowds have been really digging what the group is putting out.

These Eyes, the recent Canadian single-success for the Guess Who, is really breaking for the boys below the forty-ninth. RCA is giving the record a push and several stateside tours are in the offing for the group.

A most solid set of compelling blues is Cotton In Your Ears (Verve-Forecast FTS 3060). Hert, The James Cotton Blues Band plays with much meaningful feeling, but always keeps it under control.

•

Cotton's singing is excellent, and Luther Tucker steps out in two fine vocals of his own. The best track, and they are all good, is Motorized Blues.

With American acts not quite making it with European audiences, I wonder what sort of reception Frank Zappa and his Mothers will get when they land in England next month. They will be in Vancouver again this summer.

If you dig the "blues" as they are being put down by the British these days make it to the Agrodome in Vancouver on Good Friday and see three of England's "blues-powerhouses" explode in an exciting burst of energy and sound.

•

Deep Purple, John Mayall and Jeff Beck will be appearing on the same show. Deep Purple will blast you back into your seats; Mayall will coaxingly draw you forward and out of yourself; and Beck will literally bend your mind and body.

Why not make a weekend of it and stay over for Saturday night's show in the Pacific Coliseum with Canned Heat and the Grassroots.
